Making Clean Break

By ROY L. SMITH

Paul's letter to the Christians in Rome represents one of the most careful bits of writing he ever did. His other letters, written before his imprisonment in Rome, were usually dashed off in a hurry, in order to provide guidance or instruction in the midst of some crisis, but his letter to the Romans was written under entirely different circumstances.

The Christians of Europe were engaged in a great effort to raise a huge collection that was to be forwarded to the Christians in Jerusalem. Famine conditions were the rule in much of the Middle East, and the conditions in Jerusalem were especially acute. The Jews were the most charitably minded people of all the ancient East, but their charity was restricted to members of their own race and faith. And because the Jerusalem Jews were highly suspicious of the Jewish Christians, no relief was administered among them by the Jewish authorities. Paul and the core of Paul's message to the pagan world. In it, at least, we have the essence of everything he preached everywhere.

First of all, the Christian is to make a clean break with all forms and aspects of paganism. This is to be a thorough-going revision of life, by which a new centre is adopted, and a new outlook embraced.

To those willing to make this clean break, Paul offered an assistance upon penitence—not a sorrow for the fact that the sinner had been detected in his sin, but a complete repudiation of sin in all its forms. And it was not to be done reluctantly. No one knew better than Paul did that the sinner who looks back wistfully on his past sins, has not been saved from the temptation to sin in the future ahead.

To those who stood ready to make the break, and make it complete, Paul offered what he called eternal life. There was, of course, the element of immortality in those words, but the real meaning of "eternal" was a new quality of life that corresponds to the life that prevails in the presence of the Father.

This was not something to be achieved by a supreme effort of will. Men could not have it by fighting for it, slaving for it, or working for it. Eternal life was a quality of life that God confers freely and gladly upon those who are penitent.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"According to the catalogue, his style was greatly influenced by Van Gogh, Picasso, and his five-year-old grandson."

Astrological Forecast

By SYDNEY OMARR

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Be generous, but avoid extravagance. Best not to force issues. Diplomacy gains much. Try to see view offered by others. Relliize that much beauty is close at hand. Perceive it!

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Cycle up. Ideas are plentiful. Act on them. Trust intuition, hunches. Two judgment accurate where work, social activities are concerned. Full steam ahead.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Strive for change, variety, self-expression. No time to be confined physically or mentally. Opportunity to put across ideas very great. Write, communicate, telephone. Be "in touch" with events around you.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Spotlight on hopes, aspirations, friends and fulfillment of ambitions. Avoid emotional upset. Discuss rather than argue. Be considerate in dealing with sensitive friend.

Leo (July 22 to Aug: 21): Push ahead with plans started a short time ago. Some minor discouragement indicated, but this is temporary. Exude confidence; practice Leo showmanship. Others look to you for inspiration.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Willingness to do a little extra proves rewarding. Means take time to be thorough. Check facts. Jot down ideas for future use. Take broad view. Avoid those who advocate petty action.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Dynamic views should be expressed. You can extend range of influence: Do so with written and spoken word. Very good for selling advertising, gaining ground for your product.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Keep alert. Green light may be given for pet project. Your enthusiasm proves contagious. But be sure those who offer aid are sincere. Tendency is for many to jump on "bandwagon."

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Moderation is key. Applies to business, social activities. Take neutral course. Stay out of disputes involving close friends. Tonight excellent for entertainment, dining out.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Shopping bargains apparent early in day. Project your personality to advantage. Good Moon aspect promises opportunity for romance, excitement satisfaction.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 Feb. 19): Attend to details, including family matters. Best to entertain at home. Be strong in adherence to principles. Taurus and Libra individuals could provide stimulus for new, profitable interests.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Relax - Instead of "straining." Avoid trying to pin others down where political views are concerned: Be frank. Don't attempt to "fool" friends, family members. The truth is a valuable weapon. Use it!

If today is your birthday . . . you are willing to fight for beliefs. You are apt to devote much time to helping others fulfill their desires.

General Tendencies: Key word is stubbornness. Nations, individuals take "party line" and stick to it. All signs could benefit from today's Pisces interpretation.

Teen-Age Canada

Students' Science Fair Growing in Popularity

By JACK HUTTON

WANTED: Young Canadian high school students with an interest in science. The top two will win an all-expenses paid trip to Great Britain next summer.

That's a phony advertisement of course but it sums up in a nutshell the pressure building up for the 1963 science fair sweepstakes.

The science fair movement, which began in Canada with a Winnipeg exhibition in 1957, expects to see 28 regional science fairs across Canada next spring.

Ever since 1957, teenagers in Canada have been amazing their elders with science fair exhibits that deal with everything from beta-ray spectrometers to moths, fossils—or the Milky Way.

I chatted this week with E. C. Le Sueur, a soft-spoken man whose job it is to co-ordinate Canadian science fairs from his Ottawa office. He had one main message: YOU could win national honors with YOUR exhibit.

Quebec City and St. Catharines, Ont., are only a few of the cities across Canada planning regional science fairs for the first time. Who knows, if this carries on, it could almost rival the Grey Cup!

How do you enter a science fair? Well, if your school or if someone in your area is sponsoring one next spring, it's simple. Speak to your science teacher and he or she will guide you from there.

If you don't know about any science fair in your area, you still have a slim chance. Said Mr. Le Sueller: "An exhibit may be sent to our special admission committee which would then contact a service club or the school in your area."

As someone who can barely hammer a nail into a board, I was fascinated to read about exhibits of recent years.

Last year's national fair in Ottawa saw 10 exhibits in physics; 10 in zoology; seven in medicine or health; five each with chemistry and geology; three with mathematics; two each with applied engineering and astronomy; and one with botany.

A project must show "original research, or be a demonstration of a biological, chemical, physical, mathematical or technical principle, a laboratory or other procedure, and industrial development or an orderly collection of anything in the board concept of pure or applied science."

"Don't figure that someone in Grade 12 has a better chance of winning than someone in Grade 9," Mr. Le Sueller warned. "Judges say that originality is something that can easily win for the younger student."

The rules are simple. Any secondary school student may enter a local fair. Closing dates for your entries vary, according to the local fair. But the second national fair, to be held in Toronto May 3 and 4, won't accept exhibits two weeks before it's held.

Well you might enter. What do you do know? There are four steps before you: the idea (this might come from your own thinking, a science class, or some one else's suggestion), the actual project, and making the exhibit.

NEVER, say the judges, think about the exhibit as the first step. "The exhibit is just one part of learning and creating process," they claim.

Who won last year? Top girl was Carol Blane of Verdun, Que., who grew plants in various controlled solutions. (A Grade 9 student, by the way!) Top boy was Pierre Racette, a Grade 12 student in Joliet, Que., who enquired into the "quantitative variation with time in the microscopic fauna of a pond . . ."

There are many more details but don't figure that YOU haven't a chance. For further details, speak to your local science teacher or write: The Canadian Science Fairs Council, 46 Rideau St., Ottawa, Ont.

GIRL GUIDES

You can watch for changes in Canada's Girl Guide movement in the next few years.

Miss Henriette Oster, Chief Commissioner of Girl Guides of Canada, said in Montreal recently that the organization is being carefully studied right now.

"We want to see that the program is meeting the needs of the girl in Canada," she said. "Where we find the need to alter or modify this it will be done."

How long will the study take? Estimates vary from two years up to four years. But, most important of all, the study is including the opinions of Girl Guides as well as outsiders.

Growing in popularity with teens across Canada are science fairs. Jack Hutton today outlines the steps to enter an exhibit at a fair.

"I feel it is very important that we should consider what the Guides think is needed to improve or alter Guiding in Canada," Miss Oster said.

Despite these upcoming changes, Guides are planning already for 1964 when provincial camps will be held in every province. The theme of the camps: "Our Cultural Heritage."

TEEN HUMOR

We're still getting "throwaway" gags submitted by faithful readers. Here's a lime-honored one making its rounds again among the drugstore set:

What did the letter say to the stamp? Answer: "You're square—but you send me!"

Got any more?

RYLSTONE

County Store Began 100 Years Ago Now Modern Self-Serve

RYLSTONE — After completing 18 years as general country store-keepers, Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Mumby, and daughter held a "unofficial re-opening" of their establishmeut as a 'Self-Serve Centre," on December 1st.

Established nearly 100 years ago, by Mrs. Mumby's grandfather, William T. Bateman, this original store was then situated on the west side of the highway, across the street from the present store. Later, they moved it to the east side, and in a few years moved it back again to the west side.

After his death, his widow carried on the business, until their son, William F. Bateman, bought it around 1900, and conducted the business until his death in 1923. After the death of their father, his daughter, Hazel, (Mrs. Hiram Mumby) and three sons, William, Lorne and Harry ran the business until Harry and Lorne enlisted in the army and were in service overseas until the end of the war.

Mr. and Mrs. Mumby bought out the family business in 1944, 18 years ago, and moved to the former Murray and Fitzgerald store across the street where they re-opened Saturday after extensive alterations by a local carpenter, Wilfred Spencer and Son.

Mrs. Mumby's brother, Harry Bateman, also assisted by building ing plywood displays, and check-out counters. After moving two partitions and removing a stairway, the area has been increased to approximately 1,000 square feet, which, with extra windows, and better lighting, has made a decided improvement in shopping ease with modern carts and baskets.

A full line of groceries, fruits, vegetables will be carried, as well as gift items; along with the usual line of drygoods. Their motto is, "A Friendly Store for Friendly People", which the Mumbys hope to maintain.

Prizes and gifts are being awarded each day to lucky customers, and will continue till December 8, inclusive.

The winner of the main prize on opening day, a kodak, went to Mrs. Jimmie Mumby, of Bonarlaw, Ontario. Other prizes are: theatre tickets; credit note for dry cleaning; hair dryer will be awarded to some lucky customer this coming Saturday.

Coffee and soft drinks, with cookies, are being served to shoppers with treats for the kiddies.

LEGO System BY Samsonite

This Christmas . . . Give Imagination

New from Europe, and now made in Canada, Lego is more than a toy; more than a construction set. Doll houses or battleships, mosaics or buildings . . . the only limit to what Lego will build is the limit of one's imagination. With its appeal to the creative urge, Lego is enthralling and constructive for "children" of all ages! Each piece is precision-made of high-impact polystyrene, with a stud on top; thus each other piece in dozens of sets. Bright, lasting colours won't fade. TRENTON FIRE CAUSES $300,000 LOSS

Gurkha Troops Fly To Quell Borneo Revolt

Brunei Rebels Claim Twenty Towns Raided

SERIA, Brunei (Reuters)— Two planeloads of tough Gurkha troops arrived in this Borneo sultanate today from Singapore after seven persons were reported killed when armed rebels attacked central Friday of the Shell Oil Company's Seria refineries.

The Gurkhas were an advance party of eight planeloads of 280 troops dispatched to quell the rebellion.

A government spokesman in neighboring Sarawak said order had been restored in Brunei Town, the capital, but that the situation in Seria and in the nearby town of Kuala Belait remained serious and military reinforcements were on their way there.

100 ARRESTED

He said known casualties in the revolt totalled seven dead, including one policeman, 11 wounded, including four policemen, and 100 persons arrested.

As troops boarded planes, British sources in Singapore said Britain was putting Brunei "in a position to fulfil treaty obligations" in Brunei, a British colony on the north and the largest oil-producing country in the Commonwealth after Canada. They also claimed that Sultan Sir Omar Ali Saifoddin still was in power and Chief Minister Data Setia Marsal still was in control of the capital, Brunei Town, where heavy fighting was reported.

The insurgents, believed to be made up of pro - Indonesian "North Borneo National Army," attacked the Sultan's palace late Friday but were beaten off.

First hint of serious trouble came when a party of about 100 armed insurgents attacked Bunei Town police station. They were driven off after a hard fight.

Meanwhile, in Jesselton, North Borneo government

NEW MEAT BILL INTRODUCED IN LEGISLATURE

House to Recess On December 20

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Robarts has indicated that Ontario's legislature members will not likely have a leisurely week in which to do their Christmas shopping.

The premier told the House Friday that it probably would sit until Dec. 19 or 20 to get as much legislative business as possible out of the way before the Christmas-New Year recess.

He said the session, which opened Nov. 26, had begun a week later than normal this year, and to prorogue by the traditional pre-Easter target, it was necessary to sit later before Christmas.

The session likely would resume in late January or early February, he said. .

The premier's calculations tempted NDP Leader Donald C. MacDonald to ask if the government were "laying to rest completely the possibility of a snap election."

Mr. Robarts did not reply.

TO INSPECT MEAT

The government introduced another promised bill Friday— a proposed act to provide for inspection of meat for human consumption and licensing of slaughter houses.

Agriculture Minister Stewart said at first reading of the bill that it would require inspection of all animals before slaughter, licensing of all abbatoirs and stamping or labelling of inspected meat.

The act would provide for a

Catholic Youth Queen Runnerup Eighth Victim of Boston Slayer

BOSTON (AP) — Police in suburban Winthrop are confronted today with what appears to be the eighth unsolved slaying of greater Boston women in six months.

The latest victim is Margaret Cadigan, 17, runnerup in a 1962 Boston archdiocesan competition for queen of the Roman Catholic Youth Organization.

The body of the pretty drum majorette and drill team captain was fully clothed, but her dress was up to her waist.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis — The storm that brought snow and rain to Ontario the last two days is weakening and moving away from the province. However, strong west to northwest winds, gradually falling temperatures and scattered snowflurries still remain as a legacy of the storm. Snowflurries today are expected to be heaviest in areas southeast of Lake Huron and Georgian Bay. Elsewhere in southern Ontario, snowfall will be light.

Her head was immersed in a pressure cooker half-filled with water. A pajama bottom was around her neck and there was a ligature of wire about her neck. A blood-stained 12-inch knife was near the body.

Detectives said the girl could have died from any one of three means: Strangulation, drowning or from the throat slash. A medical examiner was expected to give an official verdict of the death at a later time.

Like the other seven women victims, Miss Cadigan was alone at the time of her death.

Most of the earlier victims were linked in some way with hospitals. Two were nurses, one a psychiatric social worker and two had been patients shortly before their deaths.

Miss Cadigan was interested in nursing and had worked in a hospital as a nurse's aide.

Police fear a maniac is on the loose, picking women as his victims and strangulation as his means of killing.

The most recent victim, until the Winthrop girl's death, was Sophie Clark, 19, of Englewood, N.J., who was studying medical and hospital technology in Boston.

Miss Clark, nude except for her brassiere, was found strangled with a stocking and pettycoat, in her Boston Back Bay apartment Wednesday evening.

A fire that raged for three hours in downtown Trenton last night caused $300,000 loss to property and merchandise before it was brought under control. Five fire departments fought the flames that burned out businesses, including Spotless Cleaners, Gerald Farrar's (McNair's) Furniture Store, Bill Norman's Insurance, a real estate office and the Probation office. Three families living upstairs over the Spotless Cleaners escaped soon after the general alarm sounded.

Rescuers Sight Body of Miner On Third Day

CARMICHAELS, Pa. (AP)— An advance rescue team today sighted today the body of one of 37 miners trapped some 600 feet underground by a tremendous coal mine explosion.

The rescue party relayed word that it was still some distance from the body, and identification could not be established immediately.

According to a U.S. Steel Corporation spokesman, the body lay about 4,000 feet from the Westpoint Mine shaft's mouth where the blast erupted at 1:15 p.m. Thursday.

The spokesman said it would be a while before the rescue unit could work its way to the body.

Snow Causes Confusion In Southwestern Ontario

By The Canadian Press

Confusion descended on southwestern Ontario Friday as heavy snow falls blanketed the area for the second day, cutting hydro and telephone services, closing schools, snarling highway traffic, and isolating scores of communities.

Weather forecasts seemed to indicate the storm which started Wednesday had blown itself out and predictions for the weekend were for intermittent snow falls and rain, with temperatures generally dropping below freezing point.

The Chatham-Cedar Springs district was hardest hit. An estimated 2,000 telephones were rendered unserviceable and hundreds of Kent County residents were without hydro power. Department of highways snow plows cleared all the main routes from Chatham but traffic was moving slowly.

The snow was moving eastward Friday night, falling in London, St. Thomas and Woodstock, but highways remained open.

St. Thomas reported heavy snowfall with limited vision. There was some drifting in the Woodstock area where forecasts predict winds gusting to 35 miles per hour Saturday.

Several cars blocked by the heavy snow and abandoned Thursday night were still being dug out Friday night on Highway 2 and 401 in the Chatham-Windsor districts. A number of transport drivers

DRUG PROBLEMS TO BE STUDIED BY 15 MPs

Costs Will Not Be Included

OTTAWA (CP)—Fifteen MPs will undertake the task of studying the complex, technically-tangled field of drugs, pesticides and weed-killers.

The House of Commons unanimously agreed Friday to set up the committee. But a Liberal attempt to have the cost of drugs included in the investigation was ruled out of order.

As finally constituted the committee will:

"... consider and report upon (A) the laws and practices relating to the control of the introduction, marketing and use of drugs; and (B) the dangers arising from the contamination of food by the use of chemicals to kill weeds, insects and other pests."

The 15 committee members have not yet been named. It is likely they will be chosen next week after all-party consultation.

HAS THE TALENT

There appears to be plenty of talent in the House among the politicians a committee well-versed in the subject. Common membership includes 12 lawyers, 33 farmers, six medical doctors, three dentists, two druggists, and one drug manufacturer.

Paul Martin (L—Essex East) sought the inclusion of drug costs in the inquiry because it "is a matter that has greatly agitated the Canadian people."

He was backed up by T. C. Douglas, New Democratic Party leader, who said some drugs are sold at markups as high as 7,000 per cent and that manufacturers are making "exorbitant profits."

Speaker Marcel Lambert rejected the proposed amendment

5 Departments Battle Blaze In McNair Block

Residents Were Forced To Flee 3 Apartments

Fire last night sacked mid-town Trenton of a quarter-million dollars. And that may be a conservative estimate.

For almost three hours, five fire departments battled the blaze in the old McNair block on King and Elgin Streets, until squads of weary firefighters declared it a standstill.

By that time, business offices—including those of the juvenile court, showrooms, and three apartments were lost in the blaze.

Every available piece of fire-fighting equipment in the area was pressed into service about 9 after the fire was discovered, erupting through the entire block.

The businesses in the block were Spotless Cleaners; Gerald Farrar's furniture store; Bill Norman's insurance office; Fraser's Real Estate; the Juvenile and Family Court offices. Goodsell Motors was damaged by smoke and water.

3 APARTMENTS BURN

The residents of the three apartments burned out were: Mr. and Mrs. Al Berry, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Anderson and Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Anderson, and a Mr. and Mrs. Arsenault.

The owner of Spotless Cleaners—Jack Collins—said he was completely covered by insurance. Trentonians had been depositing clothes for Christmas cleaning in recent days.

The flashing spread of flame rendered the initial efforts of Trenton firefighters useless, minutes after they turned in the alarm. The scene of the blaze was only across the road from the Trenton fire hall.

Quickly assessing the threat, Trenton firemen sent out a recall for assistance—immediately answered by the Belleville fire department.

By the time an effective firefighting force was marshalled at the scene, the blaze was raging beyond apparent control.

At least one firefighter was seen by Ontario Intelligence reporters being helped from the scene—apparently momentarily overcome by the choking blanket of smoke.

Throughout the fire an am-

COLUMBIA RIVER PACT ATTACKED BY McNAUGHTON

Claims U.S. Gets Best of Deal

OTTAWA (CP) — The whole Columbia River basin in British Columbia "may well become forever merely a 'storer of water' for the United States for power and flood control" under the proposed Canada-U.S. treaty, says Columbia critic Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton.

1. House of Commons committee study promised by the federal government may be delayed pending arrangements to implement the treaty—a reference to renewed federal-B.C.-U.S. discussions.

2. Under the 60-year draft treaty or perhaps longer, ever-expanding U.S. demand for flood control on the Columbia can absorb all Canadian storage capacity as municipalities and industries expand in flood-prone areas.

SUGGESTIONS 'VAGUE'

"For this service, which would create some billions of dollars of investment opportunity in the U.S. and provide for its protection, there is no recompense—only promises for out-of-pocket expenses for operation and replacement of power and storage works, suggestions of 'compensation for economic loss to Canada if arising directly from Canada forgoing alternative uses of the storage.' "

3. One treaty arrangement is "both improvident and imprudent in that, as the U.S. authorities already claim, it will set a precedent for similar proposals on the great rivers of the Pacific northwest which rise in Canada and flow across the boundary into Alaska."

38 Deaths Attributed to Snow Storm, 5,000 Cars Stranded

CLEVELAND (AP) — Residents of northern Ohio and western Pennsylvania tackled today the monumental job of digging out from one of the worst snow storms in years.

At least 38 storm-connected deaths were reported, most of them resulting from heart attacks while shovelling snow or from traffic accidents.

In Ohio alone there were 16 known deaths.

Thousands of motorists, truck drivers and bus passengers were stranded by the storm that started Thursday, deposited up to 27 inches of snow and sent drifts as deep as 20 feet.

The first relief came in pot-luck farmhouses or emergency Red Cross shelters set up in public buildings. Others spent 24 or more hours in their vehicles.

Pope Closes Ecumenical Council Session

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John, showing the strain of illness, today closed the first phase of the Roman Catholic ecumenical council today with an optimistic look to the future.

He said he hoped the council would conclude its work in a year, and that he anticipated it would bring benefits for Christian unity.

It was their last gathering before a nine-month recess that will end Sept. 8.

Pope John told them they had made "a good beginning" in the council's work, and then he ventured something he had never done before—an expression of a possible target date for the council's conclusion.

Many prelates have said the council could last years at its present pace.

The pontiff made clear he thought differently.

"There is hope," he said, "that the conclusion awaited by all our faithful children may be reached in the glory of the in-

Judge Norris Issues Challenge To SIU to Get Down to Issues

OTTAWA (CP)—Mr. Justice T. G. Norris has challenged the Seafarers' International Union of Canada (Ind.) to get down to the "big issues" under federal investigation after inter-union strife on the Great Lakes.

The Vancouver jurist did not specify what he viewed as the main issues facing his one-man commission of inquiry.

But he made it clear he has did not feel the SIU is advancing its case by presenting rank-and-file members who swear unwavering allegiance to their union and its president, American-born Hal C. Banks.

Unless the SIU plans to call all its 14,000 members, it is not meeting the issues by summoning a few individual rank-and-file members, he said.

The judge, who has presided over 62 public sessions since his inquiry began last August, urged the SIU to put Mr. Banks in the witness box to meet some of the allegations against the union.

Earlier witnesses have told of recent months since the SIU began fighting a rival sailor's union, the Canadian Maritime

150 Years of Municipal Experience Will Be Lost By Retirement of Councillors

More than 150 years' municipal council experience will be lost to Hastings county next year as approximately one third of the present council members-ship, including one man with a 31-year record are bowing out of municipal life.

The dean of county council, Reeve William J. Davis of Bangor Wicklow and McClure, is one who has an uninterrupted record of 31 years at county council is among those retiring at the end of the year.

Ten of the dozen councillors bowing out of council made retirement speeches Friday as the December session of council ended. Two other retiring members were absent from the council chamber.

Four of the members leaving council for the last time have been the rookies as Hastings county wardens.

FOUR RETIRING WADENS

Other councillors who will be out of municipal life next year are Arthur Robinson, Elsavir; Harry Pound, Thurlow; Alan Bronson, deputy reeve of Bancroft; Reeve Alex. Dungavell; Elmer Wilson, Huntington, William Regan of Deloro, and Douglas Rose of Tweed.

Elections in three townships are still to be held.

All councillors in their retirement talks spoke of their council service as both rewarding and gratifying and admitted they would greatly miss the friendships attained with fellow councillors.

According to dean of council William Davis, it was the fact of having worked together for the betterment of the county which nurtured the exceptionally strong friendships.

Reeve Jack Brown said he liked to think that he had contributed something toward the progress which the county had made.

Counted in the progress made was the construction of the new Hastings county administration building which served as one of the finest such structures in the province.

"I made a few enemies over the construction of the courthouse," he admitted, "but when it was the decision of council to go ahead, all enmities were forgotten and council worked as a team."

"I am happy to say that some of the members who opposed were the new courthouse have since come to me and admitted it was a good thing."

And Warden Harold Varty said his year as council head had been marked by the withdrawal of his township from the Centre Hastings High School Area.

As one of the few township councillors opposing the withdrawal, Warden Varty said there had been those who felt he should resign his position because of the issue.

"But in my oath of office I swore that I would conduct the business of the municipality without fear or favor. So I decided to do just that and carry on."

First year members at council council also were heard, as was clerk-treasurer Carl Bateman, who took over the office following the death of Erie S. Denyes.

Mr. Bateman expressed his appreciation to council members and to county officials for their co-operation and assistance to him following his appointment.

"I hope that in future years I will warrant your confidence," he said.

Friday morning's session of council was taken up mainly with the passing of by-laws and a fairly spirited discussion on emergency measures organization plans.

The subject was introduced by Madoc township reeve Earl Sager who asked if all emergency measure workers at the municipal level were expected to serve without remuneration.

The general feeling was that this was the case, although several noted they were finding difficulty in raising interest.

Several questioned the worth of the exercise in the view of interest lack, but reeves Harleigh Hamilton and Kenneth Mowby summed up the situation by stating the aim of the program was to get people thinking of what they would do in case of an emergency and to familiarize themselves with the action to be taken.

"I think this has been accomplished," stated Reeve Hamilton.

In ways and means council rectified resolution recommending the appointment of Messrs. J. N. Brown and Harleigh Hamilton to the Belleville General Hospital Board of Governors, and entering into an agreement with the city and county home regarding the provision of juvenile detention facilities.

By-laws were also passed regulating road speeds on roads through Canifton and Corbyville, and at Shannonville.

Council also approved an increase in salary for County Engineer Larry Langlois.

County representatives to six district high school boards were approved. The appointments were as follows:

Bay of Quinte District, Harleigh Hamilton, Sidney township; Centre Hastings, Irwin McCoy, Marmora township; North Hastings, F. Jack Fallis (re-appointment); Deseronto, Hugh Fingland; Tyendinaga (re-appointment); Stirling Ferndale, James Johnston (re-appointment), and Tweed-Hungerford, Bernard Hunt, Hungerford township.

The funeral of Mrs. Florence Fuller was held Friday afternoon from the Thomas C. Thompson Funeral Home where service in the chapel was conducted by Rev. E. P. Smith of Christ Church. Interment was in Belleville Cemetery.

Surviving are three sons, Arthur and Ernest Weeks of Toronto and George Weeks of this city.

MRS. PERCY MACK
(Madoc)

Mrs. Violet Bertha Mack of Madoc died at the Belleville General Hospital on Saturday, December 8th, in her 68th year. She had been in failing health for some time.

Born in Kent County, England, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. White, she had been a resident of Madoc for the past 13 years. Prior to this time she resided in Crookston. She was a member of the Standard Church.

The widow of Percy Mack, who predeceased her ago, Mrs. Mack is survived by two sons, Everett and Willis of Belleville; two daughters, Mrs. Roy (Bertha) Kleinstauber and Mrs. William (Mildred) Wood, both of Belleville; 18 grandchildren; five great grandchildren; a brother, Ernest White of England and a sister in England.

DANCE SUCCESSFUL

Mr. J. Montaigue, in charge of the Teen-Age dance program, advised that more than sixty teenagers attended the first dance on Nov. 23rd, held here for funds to buy new records and such a motion was passed. Mr. Montaigue also noted that it is planned to hold teenager dances in the new hall and that the mothers for supervisory duties would be most welcome. Mr. C. A. Hubbard, on the importance of these dances sponsored by the Ratepayers' Association, felt that more mothers would be happy to take a turn on a weekend basis.

The chairman pointed out that all present membership expires on March 31st, 1963, and suggested that some decision should be made to extend them to December 31st, 1963, due to the stated membership year in the new constitution. On a motion by Mrs. Scott, it was decided that current memberships are automatically extended to the 31st of March pending the October, 1963, without additional payment of fee.

It was also pointed out that the term of office of the present executive officers and committees expires on March 31st, 1963. Mr. D. Riordan moved that this term also be extended to October, 1963, in line with the new constitution, subject to agreement by the membership.

"Insulating of the Community Hall was completed on November 11th", announced the chairman, "and thanks are due to Mr. Wm. Wrenmore, Mr. G. Burnette, Mr. A Gainham and Master Barry Burnette." "Association membership mounted to a total of 97 hours labor on this project", he added.

OBTAIN NEW BURNER

Speaking for the community Centre Board, Mr. Charles Keeble provided a breakdown of the insulation program costs. He also informed the meeting that the Board recently obtained a new burner unit for the Hall oil furnace.

In closing, Association President John Morton, speaking from the chair, congratulated the members on their action in adopting the Constitution and Rules of Order of The Park Dale Ratepayers' Association of Belleville.

"I am certain," said he, "that future officers and committees will find this a distinct advantage when taking office, and that members will regain a far better understanding of and insight into the Association."

He added that sufficient copies for all members are available and may be picked up at any general meeting.

Constitution Adopted by Ratepayers

The Park Dale Ratepayers' Association of Belleville now has a new written Constitution and Rules of Order, adopted at the Association's general meeting held last Wednesday night.

The constitution defines the Association and its purpose, the details of membership, duties of officers and of committees, and provides for honorary and associate memberships. The membership year will now be from October of one year to October of the next, instead of the former fiscal year basis. The rules of order present procedures covering a reasonable minimum of parliamentary procedures.

Presented by a constitutional committee composed of Mr. J. Morman, Mr. V. Allen, Mr. V. Cameron, and Mr. L. Hyatt, the document was approved article by article over a two hour period. Mr. Hyatt was expressed the appreciation of the members for the months of painstaking work he had put in, and moved a vote of thanks.

During the ordinary business meeting, Association President Chairman Syd Scott announced that plans for the New Year's Eve Ball had been completed and tickets are now on sale. He added that a bulletin on the subject would be circulated to the members.

CBC 'Closeup' Will Deal With Arthritis

CBC-TV "Closeup" will present a program Sunday, December 9th at 10 p.m. dealing with Arthritis and Quackery.

This program was born from suggestions made by the Ontario Division of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society a year ago and has been planned for since then with the National Office and CBC. Although the final product may present views divergent from those held by C.A.R.S. it is believed the program will be of interest.

Part of the film was filmed at the Rheumatic Disease Unit in Toronto and shows many of the Unit's patients. Among those appearing will be Dr. Norris Swanson, Medical Director of the Ontario Division, Dr. R. Lemont-Havers, Medical Director of the Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation, New York and Dr. Phillip Goffon of the B.C. Division. Miss Winnifred Herington of the Ontario Division will also be seen.

Two Defeated for Reeve In Tweed Run for Council

Five candidates will go to the polls at the village of Tweed on December 17th seeking election for the three positions open on the village council.

It will be the second municipal election in Tweed this month as a second nomination for council was required when insufficient numbers qualified at the first meeting.

Mr. Ed. J. Courneyea and Mrs. Rebecca Allen, two defeated candidates in Monday's election for the reevealty, will contest for council seats. Others qualifying are Stewart Lessard, John Bancroft and James Hanna.

There will also be an election for school trustee with Milton Elliott and Leonard Jones having qualified as candidates.

Thirty Pass Tests In Swimming Courses

Almost 30 people passed some swimming tests in the girls' and women's swimming program at the YMCA during the past month, women's secretary Norma Hunter-Duval reports.

The past month has been very active with regular swim classes being conducted at all age levels by Mildred Gray, Susan Hunter, Mrs. Jean Smoke. A life saving course has been given by Earl Dickmoother and this course will continue for another eight weeks.

Those girls who passed some stage of their "Y" card tests in November included: beginners — Lorraine King, Kathleen Bradley; first card — Barbara Carswell, Judy Barrett, Maribeth Barrett, Heather Wood, Susan Lessard

Madoc Arena Being Repaired By Game Club

A Madoc Fish and Game Club community project which has ballooned to include a big percentage of the male village's is seeing the Madoc skating rink take on a modern appearance.

An entire end of the old arena has been torn out and replaced providing for a ground floor and upstairs foyer. A new furnace has also been installed.

"It started out as a Fish and Game Club project, but now everyone is in on it," stated Madoc reeve Thomas Burnside this week.

He estimated that since the project was started in the fall more than 3,000 hours of volunteer labor have gone into the arena work.

He noted that carpenters, electricians and other tradesmen have been turning up regularly to assist in the work which is now well on the way toward completion.

Bandit Easily Scared Away From Wicket

C.N.R. night ticket agent William (Joe) Enright refused to obey an order this morning —and touched off a police search in Belleville for a possible armed, if easily scared, bandit.

Enright told police he was working at his desk at the CNR station when a man approached the ticket office wicket about 3.30 a.m.

When he rose to serve him, Enright saw the man's face was covered with a silk stocking. In his hand was an object, covered with paper that "looked like a gun."

"He demanded all my money or else . . ." the ticket agent told city detectives.

Instead of obeying the command, Enright dropped behind his desk and grabbed the direct-line phone to the night despatcher's office next door.

The man fled.

Bond Market Prices Slip in Light Trading

The 91-day treasury bills increased to an average of 3.81 per cent from 3.71 per cent last week and the 182-day bills to 3.94 per cent from 3.83 per cent. Day-to-day money ranged between 3½ and 3¾ per cent.

Main interest on the government market centred on the new $500,000,000 Government of Canada issue which consisted of $50,000,000 5-per-cent bonds due Feb. 1, 1965 or 98.75 to yield 4½% and $15,000,000 4½-per-cent bonds due Jan. 15, 1968 at 99.25 to yield 4.42 per cent. The Bank of Canada acquired $200,000,000 of the new bonds.

On the long-term market the Canada 4¼-per-cent Sept. 1, 1972 bonds traded at 96.25, while the 4½-per-cent Sept. 1, 1983 bonds at 92.50.

Prices were also easier on the provincial market with the Province of Ontario 5¼-per-cent 1982 selling at 96% and the Province of Quebec 5¼-per-cent 1967 issue at 96%.

Wide Range Of Produce On Market

Today's outdoor market saw a goodly display of a great variety of apples and a wide selection of other farm produce, ranging from Banty roosters being sold on the hoof (or claw) to home-made bread.

Apples were priced at 75 cents a basket down and price variations ranged from $2. to $3. per bushel.

Potatoes sold at 50 cents a basket, carrots at $2. a bushel and turnips at $2.50 a bushel. Cabbage sold at 25 cents a head and squash were priced similarly. Prices varied downward on these last two items according to size.

Honey sold at 50 cents the two-pound pail. Chickens ranged between 50 and 60 cents a pound and eggs sold at 48 cents a dozen for extra large and 45 cents for large.

Cider sold at one dollar per gallon and pepper squash were available at a dozen apiece or three for a quarter.

Christmas trees of first class quality could be obtained for two or three dollars each depending on size. Quality was pretty consistent with all being quite bushy and well filled out.

Oh yes, banty roosters were a dollar a head.

Strike Closes N. York Papers

NEW YORK (AP) — Printers at four New York City newspapers went on strike early today, closing down all four big dailies. The five remaining major dailies in the metropolitan area announced that they too would shut down.

More than 5,500,000 readers thus faced a newspaper shortage, but when it would be completely effective remained in doubt. All four morning papers published as usual before the printers-members of the International Typographical Union—set up picket lines shortly after 2 a.m. EST.

Crews were at work at three evening papers where the printers did not go on strike, but there was no official word on whether they actually would publish.

No Asphalt Will Be Laid This Season

TRENTON — Men from the Trenton public works department are presently engaged in street repair on both sides of the Dundas Church streets as Wilkins, Spring, Lorne and Campbell Street are coming in for building and repair, and gravel is being laid and rolled. No asphalt surfaces will be laid this year, but the streets are being prepared for this work in the spring. This work does not come under the winter works program, according to town engineer Eric Aldersey, as only men of the works department are at work.

Work on new dressing rooms in the community gardens does come under the winter works' program, says Mr. Aldersey, as does the recent laying of sewer and water lines in to the new electronics plant in north Trenton, the latest project expected to open by Dec. 15.

Meantime, J. M. Tomlinson and Associates, planners from Toronto, have men in the field preparing estimates of work and cost for the proposed widening and reconstruction of Dufferin Ave. from Henry St. to Conlter Crescent and on Dundas St. East, from Dominion St., down Gilmour Hill to Campbell Street. A Tomlinson report on work necessary and the estimates of cost for the proposed reconstruction of Sidney Street, will be placed in the hands of town council, shortly.

Webb Gives Explanation of Devaluation

NAPANEE — An explanation of Canadian dollar devaluation was given Progressive Conservative workers in Napanee last week, by Rod Webb, M.P. for Hastings Frontenac. Webb explained that devaluation is an economic tool to promote the sale of Canadian goods at home and abroad. "Devaluation is not new," he said. "It has been used as an aid to foreign trade as long as there has been currency and foreign trade in the world. Canada has used this tool several times, from 1930 to 1945 and again in 1949 and 1950 when the Canadian dollar was fixed at 90c U.S."

Asked whether devaluation increased the cost of living, Web replied, "Not necessarily nor directly. It may increase the price of imported goods and push a high percentage of imported parts, but it seldom increases the cost of these imported items even by the percentage of the devaluation. Because of the competitive factor, foreign manufacturers usually always absorb a part, if not all, of the devaluation to maintain their sales. Canada's

Two Ways to Look at It

The Royal Canadian Navy has enough union suits for 10,000 men.

The Canadian Navy has enough boots for one size to last 85 years.

The Royal Canadian Navy could only provide boots for 173 recruits with size 9½B feet.

Which of these alternative situations are preferable, a Navy with vast surplus of union suits and boots, or a Navy unable to provide all its members with union suits and unable to produce boots for more than a handful of recruits?

You pays your money and you makes your choice—but either way you get the same result. All four of these situations exist—simultaneously.

The second report of the Glassco Commission gave publicity to the thousand-year supply of union suits and its 85-year supply of one size of boot. The Commission, though, should not be asked to shoulder all the blame if the reader, at the end of this explanation, considers that this information gives a slightly misleading picture of the situation. Additional facts were, we feel sure, included in the report—but were, not surprisingly, ignored in favor of the more picturesque analyses of the situation when newspapermen made an effort to boil many thousands of words down into a few stories of readable length.

From the Ottawa Journal we glean this explanation of the union suit situation. In 1851, the Navy, preparing for a build-up in connection with the Korean War, bought 33,000 union suits. Each sailor was to be issued two suits. The large build-up never materialized. Sailors today are not wearing long underwear. They are no longer required to stand long watches in exposed positions. New outer garments are warmer. In 1961, only 18 union suits were issued and 20,652 were on hand. As the rule is 18 a year it would be 1,141 years before they would all be used.

But those 26,652 suits still represent only enough to equip 10,326 sailors and who can guarantee they will never be required?

As for the boots, that 85-year supply of size 9½B is figured on the basis of only two pairs of this size being required in 1961. But the total supply on hand is only 173 pairs—certainly not an outrageously large surplus if the Navy ever had to start recruiting for a war.

Half Safe Not Safe

There has been a minor controversy waged on the editorial pages of one of the Toronto dailies concerning the design and manufacture of life jackets.

One party has contended that life jackets, as currently allowed by the Department of Transport, are of unsafe design or, at least, of such a design that they could be made to provide a considerably higher degree of protection with very little more effort.

The other party states that to implement such design innovations would be to make the life jackets very expensive items indeed. It suggests more lives would be saved by making less efficient jackets at cheaper prices because more people would be able to afford them and would wear them.

If a life jacket is only 50 per cent efficient, let us say, it is only reasonable to assume that the user would have at best a 50-50 chance of living to tell about its value when called upon to use it. If this item costs about 15 dollars (a premium price for most life jackets these days) it would seem to be a mere pittance to spend twice the amount for a life jacket which would be twice as efficient, in other words one virtually guaranteed to save you.

Inasmuch as life jackets are required by law, we might as well be required to use reliable jackets as half-safe items.

Besides, when was anything ever half-safe? It seems that either you are saved or drowned with no half-way point between.

TV Appearances Perilous Pastime for Politicians

By RICHARD JACKSON
(From "The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA—Isn't it amazing that no matter how many times they slings their political slugs, the Parliamentarian continues flitting, fascinated, into the destructive flame of television.

Latest politician-turned-performer has been Liberal Leader Pearson, and "sponsored" he has—by a brewery and the makers of an adhesive for false teeth, among others—on the CTV Network's "late show."

Television talker Steven Dunn asked both the Liberal leader and Prime Minister Diefenbaker to handy words with him, but hooked only Mike Pearson.

John Diefenbaker declined for the very good reason that he did not think the high office of Prime Minister should be used to "plug" beer, cigarets and dentifrice.

Amazing thing about the Pearson performance is that it apparently rates an encore, with people already kidding it a bit as the "Pierre and Mike Hour."

Even more surprising, it was Pierre Berton who, several TV seasons ago, "mouse-trapped" Mike into making that disastrous "soldier be Red that dead" gaff.

NOT MUCH "MAGIC"

That was the time when Mr. Pearson appeared with U.S. Supreme Court Justice Douglas, and with the stick rumbled out on them, snapped a one-sentence answer to the quiet-mannered question as to how far he would go in resisting Communism.

Justice Douglas said he would die before submitting.

And Mike Pearson, doing himself bloody-nose damage, replied, said, in effect, he would rather be Red than dead, adding although nobody ever took to remember it that he would continue living, if only to fight to destroy Communism.

And now, with the old, sore spots still popping up to embarrass and confound, Mike Pearson is giving Pierre Berton and his idiot lantern another whirl.

They say that Prime Minister Diefenbaker has become so disillusioned with the "magic" of television, that other members of the Cabinet will have to share the TV spotlight with him in the coming election campaign . . . share his risk of fouling and even offending the voters.

Last time, the Prime Minister and the Liberal Leader went into the campaign believing that the TV screen was the magic lantern of political success.

But the "backroom boys" of both parties, conducting the postmortems into what, for each, had been more than a successful campaign, found that many people actually resented politics on TV.

SCARCELY STARS

Not only were they bored, but felt, and understandably, that not being comics nor cowboys, Mike and Dief could better have left the jokes and dramatics to Jack Carter and Maverick.

Only two of 265 Parliamentarians have had any success with politics - on - television.

The Peter Dawson, Douglas Fisher, one of the ornaments of Parliament, has been able to address himself to issues fairly and convincingly to the voters on TV.

Social Credit Co-leader Real Caouette, the rabble-rousing spellbinder, won his 26 commons seats in a dangerous Parliamentary power balance, by using television most after the fashion of a goldbrick artist.

Caouette's and Fisher's audiences were as different as the two men themselves. The Social Credit appealing to some pretty fundamental people back of beyond in deepest Quebec. Fisher was speaking to a much more sophisticated and perceptive group in Northern Ontario.

But apart from this pair in such contrast, nobody else on Parliament Hill has been able to pull off the political TV bit without some disasters, a few of them of major proportions.

Veterans Affairs Minister Churchill was given such a cheering on a TV panel show, that, wisely, he has kept out of camera range since.

Justice Minister Fleming has managed to defend himself against TV panelists by the simple process of non-stop talking them under the table, but this is carefully appealing, winning few friends and influencing people only to switch him off.

CUBA SCARE

But it was not realized what an explosive mixture politics and television could be until the Cuban crisis came along.

At the greatest moment of strained tension, when the situation seemed at its desperate worst, External Affairs Minister Green went on television.

It was a frighteningly entertaining half hour but, as it turned out, loaded with dynamite.

For Green's interviewers, newspapermen in the legitimate business of asking questions and finding things out, wanted to know just how real was the threat of war.

Were things so dreadful, was war so close, they pressed him, that people should store drinking water and stock up groceries?

(As it subsequently turned out, people in many parts of the country did just that!)

Washington, D.C., some of the supermarkets were cleaned out, and in California food stores reported their shelves stripped by panicky housewives.)

Howard Green, though, being the kind of individual he is, thoughtfully allowed that things were pretty bad, but not that critical yet: "We are only at the brink, not over the edge of war."

But what if unflappably solid old Howard Green had been a bit jittery and said "yes, it might be a good idea to stock up"—what a panic next morning when the stores opened.

They are now sweating through that program, the Prime Minister laid out new ground rules for the Cabinet appearing on television. And they boiled down to the axiom that if you do not want to get burned, do not go near the flame.

Letter to The Editor

Opposes Selling Wheat to China

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer

I have read with interest your editorial of Nov. 23, noting the complexities of marketing wheat, in which you conclude that it might be wise to continue such sales to Red China in an effort to help maintain that country within its own borders.

It seems doubtful to me that a country of China's size would embark on a full-scale war of conquest if it was convinced that the weather has resulted in a couple of poor crop years.

You say that there is present an immediate threat to us in that it jolly well does. Recently the Chinese trade people told us that if these purchases were discontinued, we must take some of their manufactured goods in return.

Not a threat of arms, true. But a distinct threat to our economy and not at all complex. To begin with, the sale of the $100,000,000 when these sales were to be made for cash. Secondly, we would be very engaged in a concerted drive to assure the greater purchase of Canadian-made goods. The latter fact has a two-pronged purpose, namely to bolster our economy and to create more job opportunities for Canadians.

Importing cheaply-made communist goods to compete with our own just doesn't make sense. I am not concerned with the politics involved and, like many others, I am heartily fed up with political considerations being the basis upon which the solutions to our national problems are being approached.

Let all parties agree that these sales are morally wrong and, also, downright poor business, and the western farmers' votes will be put back in the perspective in which they belong. I don't think Premier Diefenbaker has any right to push these grain sales with his main consideration the ballot boxes on the prairies.

While the communist aim is to subjugate the West—"We'll bury you"—I can't agree that we should contribute to an act of national commitment.

The County Court House was a hive of industry today when three courts were in session simultaneously. In the main court room, Supreme Court was in session before Mr. Justice Henderson. In the Chambers on the main floor, an examination was being heard by His Honor Judge Madden, while Magistrate J. L. Lloyd presided at Police Court, which was held in the Grand Jury Room.

Marooned on Cow Island all night Wednesday, a party of duck hunters were unable to return to the mainland. The young men entered a rowboat to lay to engage in a duck hunt. As yesterday's blinding snow storm increased in velocity, it was impossible for the hunters to see sufficiently well to return to Bellevile. Employees at the Reliance Tool and Aircraft Company, where the men are employed, formed a posse shortly after five this morning and in boats, weathered the early morning storm and rescued the pair who were suffering from exposure and the bitter elements of winter weather.

Mr. Justice Henderson reserved judgment in the action of the city of Belleville versus the Belleville Public Utilities Commission civil action after hearing respective counsel litigations in the non-jury sittings of the Supreme Court of Ontario. The action was entered by the City of Belleville to restrain the Public Utilities Commission from erecting a million gallon reserve water reservoir in Belleville.

Pre-Menstrual Blues Can Sometimes Be Helped

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am sure many of the medicines you have written to you about would help me. I suffer pre-menstrual pain and discomfort. I actually endure the physical agonies quite well, having learned how to adjust myself to pain and almost completely eliminate them.

My problem is pre-menstrual. It is quite a bit more than simple annoyance, although I am a healthy person in body.

However I seem to be the victim of seemingly exaggerated pre-menstrual symptoms. I take fairly in stride the breast swelling, and temporary facial blemishes, but the general edema and lowered temperature are almost unendurable.

Anywhere from 5 to 8 days prior to menstrual onset, it is almost as though my whole "body furnace" shuts off. I know almost the instant this happens; a sudden chill passes over me and then I am cold. Would you discuss this? — A.H.

Regretfully I shortchanged your excellent litter; your description and discomfort is almost worthy of use in a textbook.

Pre-menstrual tension, anxiety, discomfort, whatever you call it, is a frustrating one. The varying degree it bothers from a third to half of all women, some of whom have very little trouble during the actual period but a lot before.

I have a leaflet on this, and for lack of a better term have called it "Pre-Menstrual Tension," which is intended to cover swelling, nerves, jitters, fluidretention and a few others. (Anyone can get a copy by sending a long, unstamped, self-addressed envelope and 25c in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is pemphigus in any form contagious or infectious? — L.W.

It is a rare skin disease, cause not known, but it is not contagious or infectious.

Dear Dr. Molner: A short time ago I began using a half-and-half mixture of glycerin and rose water and prefer it to face creams. I have been wondering if it could induce a growth of fuzz on the face? — B.S.

No. If it does, it would be used by bald people. If you like it, use it.

Safe Place To Have Baby

Saskatoon Star-Phoenix

Saskatchewan, according to a report prepared by Dr. R. H. McPherson, chairman of a committee on maternal mortality set up by the College of Physicians and Surgeons, is "the safest place in Canada, possibly in the world, to have a baby."

The people of the province, who have understandably been worried by fears of loss of medical efficiency during and following the Medicare strike, will take pride in the figures released. The rate of deaths among pregnant women, it is stated, may even go to a lower figure than that among non-pregnant women. It would be unreasonable to ask for a better record of care of maternity cases than that.

Worth nothing, however, is the recency of the improvement. In 1957, when the committee was formed, the rate of deaths among pregnant women in Saskatchewan was 48 per 100,000. By 1961, that figure had been reduced to 24 per 100,000. According to the committee's report, indications that the rate for the current year will be down to 15 per 100,000, and perhaps even as low as 10.

Has Chicago Lost Thirst?

Chicago Tribune

It isn't enough that the Cubs dropped Charlie Metro or that George Halas' Bears can't lick their weight of Green Bay Packers. The old frontier is passing; Chicago is becoming a one-drink town.

Chicago is now down to two — and one of the martinis-on-the-rocks at lunch to one-and-one-half.

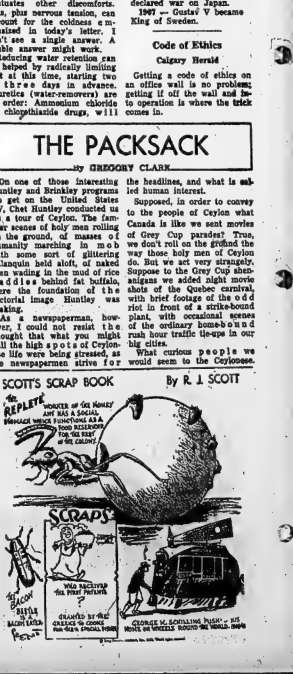
New York, in this survey-on-the-rocks, still rates a two-plus. Los Angeles and San Francisco are three-drink martini towns, particularly in the advertising business. Top honors, if that is the proper term, go to our bardy northern cousins in Minneapolis, where "you are considered uncouth if you don't quaff a fourth martini."

No doubt the fact that Chicago has calmed down will come as welcome news to our good Evanston neighbors in the Women's Christian Temperance Union. For our part, we question the accuracy of the statistics. Who ever heard of a dedicated martini drinker ever ordering half a drink?

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

One of those interesting Huntley and Brinkley programs we get on the Canadian TV, Chet Huntley conducted us on a tour of Ceylon. The familiar scenes of bare feet rolling on the ground, of masses of human humanity, of the city with some sort of glittering palanquin held aloft, of naked men sitting on the edge of the paddies behind fat buffalo, were the foundation of the pictorial image Huntley was making.



As a newspaperman, however, I could not help but be thought that what you might call the high spots of Ceylonese life were being stressed, as we newspapermen strive for the headlines, and what is called human interest.

Supposed, in order to convey to the people of Ceylon what Canada is like we sent movies of Grey Cup parades? True, we don't roll the football in the way those holy men of Ceylon do. But we act very strangely. Suppose to the Grey Cup shenanigans we added night movie shots of the Quebec carnival, with brief footage of the odd riot in front of a strike-bound plant, with occasional scenes of the ordinary home-bound rush hour traffic tie-ups in our big cities.

What curious people we would seem to the Ceylonese.

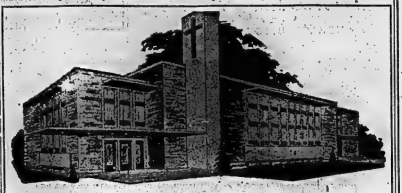
SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By WINIFRED WILSON

Temperature, in itself, has little effect on birds — it is the effect that temperature has on their food that reacts on the birds and brings about the autumn migration from Canada of so many species.



Birds' plumage is designed so that the wearer can withstand almost any amount of cold.

Though birds' bodies do not suffer from extreme cold their feet sometimes do. When feet are frozen there is great difficulty in getting around to find food.

This thought brings us to the heart of the matter. The simple fact is that if birds cannot obtain food here in winter they must fly to a milder climate. This explains why fish eaters, as the osprey, and flycatchers, as the redstart, leave us in autumn. It is not hard to understand why a bird which feeds on ground insects, as the ovenbird, must migrate once the earth is frozen, but that a woodpecker, which eats insects found deep in the bark of trees and is provided with a perfect tool for extracting them, can stay on no matter how cold or how deep the snow.

For much the same reason, some seed eaters are obliged to depart while others remain. A white-crowned sparrow, scratching the ground for weed and grass seeds, would starve here once snow covers the low plants; but the red crossbill, living largely on the seeds of coniferous trees, need never go far south.

Birds with a liking for a variety of foods have a great advantage over many others. When one crop fails they turn to another. For this reason starlings, imported to North America from Europe in 1891, spring of 1890 and again in '91, almost anything. So winter is indeed, they seem to enjoy ground insects, fruits, and seeds no problem for them.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mrs. H.K. — I want her out of the house immediately.

Sylvia K. — That's cruel. Let's all move away.

Mrs. H.K.—My 16-year-old daughter had pimples on her face. Some weeks told her that the pimples would go away if she stimulated her hormones by necking and petting. Well, she followed this horrible advice and now she still has the pimples, but in addition she's pregnant.

We are respectable people. I have nowhere to turn. I can't hide this disgrace the way rich people do. I want her to report this to the welfare people and be taken away until it's over. But her 19-year-old sister wants to figure out some way to give Claire a choice in the matter.

Sylvia K. — My poor sister! This is a terrible time for her. All she hears is Get out. What happened was unfortunate. It can't be undone. But it needn't mean the end of everything for her.

I know my mother is beside herself with shame. But she's a mother and she just can't yell out. She never was able to down to figure out where Claire can go, besides to an institution or a jail. The idea is for all of us to move. In a new neighborhood we can say Claire's husband is in the Army overseas. That way my sister could even keep the child if she wishes.

The Council: We agree with the mother's long-term solution of this tragic snarl, but we endorse the daughter's softer approach. Keeping the baby would be inhuman. But keeping the affection of this miserable girl should matter to her mother and her sister.

The finger of blame had best be sat on here, while the helpinghand takes over. We do know but that more concern, more awareness, more warmth toward Claire might have improved communication between her and her family. She might have been watched over to a doctor's office in time to get responsible advice and treatment for her acne, rather than being left to agonize over it alone. She was easy prey for the mischief maker in advanced the cure "cure."

But all is not lost. Somehow there's a baker in the world, of married people who can't have babies but want them passionately, as against unmarried people who can have them but shouldn't. Claire's baby can be offered to a childless couple, brightening its own and their lives from the day of birth.

Meanwhile, both public and private agencies offer quiet help. The Salvation Army, for example, has a Family Service Department which is noted for understanding help in these situations. Each case is treated individually, with all the factors in mind. In some localities, the Junior League has a number of similar projects, the finding of homes for unwed mothers, 15 to 18 years of age, where they are offered "sympathetic refuge during the difficult waiting period of pre-natal care and confinement." In other places agencies place girls in the Claire's somebody who shield them as "mother's helpers" in exchange for room and board. And, of course, the county welfare arm has its own procedures for seeing that unwanted pregnancies inconspicuously, and arranging for the adoption of babies into good homes.

No need to move, Sylvia. Your mother and Claire can receive psychiatric help at once so the girl may be sheltered and the mother helped to heal her many wounds. By heeding it, life may yet be beautiful for your family.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS VARIETY

In the spirit of the season we offer you the following pair of Christmas parlor pests:

PARTY PESTS: HOLIDAY SANTA CLAUS — Now don't be hasty; I wouldn't dream of giving this dear old man a tarnishe desputation. He's certainly not a pest, and and child is more than anxious to welcome him into his parlor.

Rather, I'm referring to the species of gift-giver who figuratively don jingle bells and ring in their own versions of "Santa Claus" this time of year.

Near the top, if not right up there, are the fond relatives who overwhelm nephews, nieces and grandchildren with a bewildering assortment of presents, while the parents, hopelessly outnumbered in the gift department, look on helplessly. Or they send over the two-wheeled bike you feel your youngster is old enough to ride. They also go in for sticky, indigestible sweets that create Christmas effects like stained furniture and doctor bills.

Not to be outdone in the largesse department are the friends and neighbors who can pick their gifts by the price tags they bear — the higher the price, the more impressive gift is unexpected, leaving you with the choice of returning dollar for dollar or ignoring the fiscal challenge and feeling guilty about it.

Friends bearing gifts ought to realize that they sometimes call on one of the busiest period of good cheer. It may be more pleasant to give than to receive gifts, but it creates more embarrassment than any feeling of sincere gratitude.

The "Do Your Own Thing" era starts preparing for the holiday festivities when the leaves start turning gold in the Autumn. From that point on, he watches Christmas seal and the days that precede and follow the holiday are to him the grandest time of the year — the most joyous season for a sustained spree of laughter, celebration and general waffling. He's always ready for a party, or a snort at the nearest bar, and can't understand why anyone's letting his job interfere with good, old-fashioned Christmas fun. In fact, Charlie may be riding high on the Yuletime tide, he just can't understand that he's missed the boat completely.

Stories of Famous Hymns

by HORACE B. POWELL

TO THE WORK

To the work! to the work! we are servants of God,
Let us follow the path that our Master has trod;
With the 'a lam of His counsel our strength to renew,
Let us do with our might what our hands find to do.

To the work! to the work! let the hungry be fed;
To the fountain of Life let the weary be led;
In the cross and His banner our glory shall be,
While we heard the tidings, "Salvation is free!"

To the work! to the work! there is labor for all,
For the kingdom of darkness and error shall fall;
And the name of Jehovah exalted shall be,
In the loud swelling chorus, "Salvation is free!"

To the work! to the work! in the strength of the Lord,
And a joyful reward we shall gain at the crown
When the home of the faithful our dwelling shall be;
And we shout with the ransomed, "Salvation is free!"

Fanny Crosby, America's beloved blind hymnist, once said: "There is nothing in this wide world that gives me so much joy as telling the story of my Saviour's love and mercy."

She sang, that story again and again in her hymns. And in many of them as in the one published here, she exhorts Christians everywhere to carry the gospel of salvation to those who never yet heard of a loving, saving Christ.

Yes, "To the Work", one of her most popular songs, was written in 1869. That same year, after attending a New York mission meeting one night, she wrote another appealing hymn, "Rescue The Perishing". William H. Doane, the composer, supplied music for both songs.

Mr. Doane loved to give songwings to Fanny Crosby's hymns and do singing evangelist, Ira D. Sankey, loved to use her songs in his evangelistic meetings. Many of "Aunt Fanny's" best hymns owe their popularity to the day to the introductions which Mr. Sankey gave them. He once told an impressive story of singing her hymn, "To The Work", for the first time in the home of friends where he was visiting.

"The servants", he said, "gathered from all parts of the house while I was singing and looked into the parlor where I was seated. When I was through, one of them said: 'That is the finest hymn I have heard in a long time. Won't you please sing it over again?'

"I felt that this was a test case, and that if the hymn had such power over those servants it would be useful in reaching other people as well. So I published it in "Gospel Hymns' II and III, where it became one of the best work songs in our meetings."

A Lift For Living

Natural Roots of Life Must Be Strengthened by Spiritual

By Dr. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

At the close of World War I, a great European leader was being lionized by the press of his heroism. He modestly disclaimed any single merit of his own saying that he simply a tree in a forest of courageous spirits.

If we are to think of an individual as a tree in a forest, we may extend the metaphor in terms of our nature's functioning qualities such as a sense of beauty, conscientiousness, faith, hope, love. These are the tendrils which give us stance and through which we draw sustenance for our spirits.

Also we may think of the roots of life in terms of the associations into which these tendrils go. We may find that our roots are family ties, social circles, national patriotism, religious associations.

Take family loyalties which are so deep. How far their roots do reach. "Whatever we may roam, be it ever so humble, there's no place like home." Because it is home it is so subtle, and so under the surface, that often we do not see the network of tumbling mats through them until something breaks a home.

Some time ago a college sophomore was pouring his heart out to me. His father had taken him away to her parents. These grandparents were more or less dependent on their son, this boy's uncle, who was supporting the boy at school although he did not approve of the boy's objectives in education. To climax his pathos, the girl on whom he had staked his hope, seemed to be losing interest. That boy, in the privacy of our conversation spoke with a breaking voice: "It seems that whenever I tie to anything it somehow lets go."

MUST BE DEVOTED

Yes, the roots of the family do feed our lives. Yet how easily the canker worm can get to those roots. That love of husband and wife — how easily it can deteriorate into passive interest if we are going it keep the loyalty of the home, we must be devoted to the whole life of the loved one, body, mind and spirit.

A family is not sufficient unto itself. Home ties are not safe unless the members of the family are loyal to larger interests in causes outside themselves.

Now take the roots of life that run beyond the family and social groups. Every school boy knows the story of Damon and Pythias. Pythias was condemned to death by Dionysius, the tyrant ruler of Syracuse. Before his death he made the request that he might return home to settle his affairs. Whereupon Damon offered his life as hostage until Pythias returned. But in time he saw Damon from death, and Dionysius was so impressed by these threads of friendship that he asked the privilege of being allowed to enter into that kind of noble relationship. There have been and there are fine friendships outside of Christian circles.

But suppose we just let these roots of friendship run where they will. Where do they go? They double back on the soil's resistance, the lines of kindred interest and natural tastes. They make friends in our work, our literary or professional circles, our recreational activities, our economic class. The result is that the soil of society is intermeshed both with all these ties of class loyalties, group loyalties, labor unions, luncheon clubs and the like.

FOOLING OURSELVES

But if we think we can hold the world steadily merely by these roots, I am afraid we are afraid that we are fooling ourselves.

Christ bids us to go out and make friends of those persons to whom we would not naturally be drawn. His church is an organization which people are to join, not for personal or economic advantage or any social prestige. The church is to followship those who need and serve for the sake of those who suffer.

If we are to stand amid the storms of today, the natural roots of our lives must be strengthened by the spiritual. It is high time to heed the council of Saint Paul, "that you being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth and length and depth and height"; of "the love of Christ which surpasses knowledge."

Second Glance

By Viva Richmond Graham

WHILE IN OGDEN UTAH

"So much there is to catch and the years so short, that there is scarce time to snatch pen, palette or aught, and to seize some shape we can see, that others may keep its moment of mystery."—Lord Dunsany.

As our hosts drove us on and to the entrance of Ogden Canyon, which offers an immediate contrast from the city's wide, we passed on our right the towering peak of Mount Ogden; and old friend. My mother once climbed its very summit with a party of friends, one summer day, "and one of the girls wore a kind of bloomer outfit which seemed most shocking in those days," she recalls amusedly, remembering the stout, long skirt she herself wore.

"While we are up this way, we would like you to meet friends who also are fond of "rock hunting", said our hostess. And quick as a wink he car had swung into a sort of miniature side canyon or pocket of the canyon wall, where a steep drive-way took us up until we reached a hide-away chalet built on an almost sheer side. Our hostess, retired, devote every minute to this hobby of collecting and polishing semi-precious stones gathered from all over the world.

Their collection defies description. Each room of the chalet is devoted to display of it alone. Yet—that which we instantly recognized—the pink brooch "which belonged to my grandmother, who was a sister of Stephen Foster (the famous song writer).

Later as we continued our way through the scenic canyon, our hostess said: "By now, you will wonder why you are being brought to the canyon. We shall soon reach our destination for dinner. To really experience it, I must tell you the beginning, back to the days of my grandparents.

"My grandmother, from England came to Utah as a young girl. She walked like so many others across the plains, and settled with her parents in Salt Lake. She met my grandfather, who was also a pioneer, and had decided to live in Ogden.

He wrote to her father asking him for his daughter's hand. I have the letter, "(which we read, later)," and in 1871 they were married. They came to Ogden and lived in a small cottage still standing on the east side of Ogden Canyon, where my grandfather's father was a carpenter. But he took great interest in community affairs. In some study, he became a judge, possible in those days. He was something of a good conversationalist and lover of life, for he was a lumbering company which went in search of a wooded region; a community which bears his name to this day. He seemed to have executive ability as well, with a finger in many development plans, one of which grew through the years to become a multi-million dollar concern.

Some years after his death in the early part of the century, my grandmother decided to build a summerhome in Ogden Canyon. It contained separate apartments for each member of a rather large family, including their children and servants. As a member of this closely knit family, I have most pleasant memories of the happy summer's I've spent here as a child. Yes, here it is!

We stepped out of the car before a long while rambling, beautiful mansion set apart from the rest of the trees in impressive gate. Behind, rose impressive craggy canyon cliffs.

A maid met us in a large hallway and lead us into a large dining-room faced with splendid wood panneling. Our hostess commented: "This part was my grandmother's apartment . . .", and we realized this summer home was now a public restaurant. Though it was July, fires blazed in deep fire-places, for the canyon air is cool during the evenings.'

How comfortable and cozy it was, by candle-light! "As the meal passed," she continued, "the family underwent many changes. After my grandmother's death, the decision was made: to sell it.

This place represents for me an era in my youth that was leisurely and carefree. An era gone, now supplanted by our present day way of life. We have no great tugging of the heartstrings for I know, this is the best possible way, when it had to pass through other hands, to give pleasure to others."

Since Ogden Utah was our destination, we, (my husband and I,) had come to our journey's end, and so completed a truly happy motor trip during this summer's holidays.

Mother's Helper

IF YOU'RE FINDING it difficult to be ah on a day — even an after-school hour— when your young son has time for shooting, you may have to lay them over trousers he needs without his being present. This will work out all right if you measure him carefully—accurate waist and inseam. For shirts, the need is considerably more.

THANK YOU:

To Mrs. K. W., F. E. L. and all others who sent me the recipe for Open Sesame Pie but did not include their addresses. I gave M. E. C.'s recipe here November 3rd.

LETTER:

This is an oft Quebec recipe and I've been using it for over 40 years. Changing it is what Mrs. J. J. C. wants.

ANSWER:

I have not made the Cervelat or Summer Sausage I am giving you. I think and hope it is what you are looking for.

SUMMER SAUSAGE (Cervelat — Beef and Pork):

This is a hot dry sausage that is highly seasoned and will keep indefinitely if kept in a dry place so that it does not mould. For this sausage 2 pounds of lean beef and 2 pounds of lean pork trimmings are used. (See note below re making larger amounts.) Cut the meat into small pieces and grind it very fine. Grind it once through a fine plate. Add the seasoning and after thoroughly kneading in the spices, regrind it as many times as necessary to obtain the proper fineness. The seasoning used is 1½ ounces fine salt, ¾ ounces finely ground pepper, ½ ounce sage, ½ ounce brown sugar, ½ ounce maple sugar, 2 cups tart apples, chopped, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon brown juice, 1¼ teaspoon nutmeg.

Combine the ingredients. Place in a pastry-lined pie plate 9" in diameter. Bake at 450 deg. Fahr. for 10 minutes, then reduce temperature to 350 deg. Fahr. for 15 or 20 minutes or until apple is quite tender. Serve warm or cold. — Edna M.

ANSWER:

Thank you very much for this hard-to-locate recipe for Mrs. J. J. C.

QUESTION:

I read your recipes for Liver and Polish sausage and wondered if you had a recipe for pork or beef sausage. This type of sausage was made in my home when I was a boy and was stuffed in a cheesecloth casing. I am over sixty-five years old and this kind of sausage is not made and sold — Cecil P.

Q. Mary-Pr. Chas, H-S Holds Class Visitation

The regular meeting of Prince Charles - Queen Mary Home and School Association was held in Queen Mary School on December 5th.

A large attendance showed a real interest in visiting the classrooms where each teacher gave a short talk on a day's activities.

Business included a letter from Bay Roberts Board and a letter from the Ontario Federation concerning an insurance policy.

It was decided that the executive ship Mr. Bailey, the grade 6 teacher, meet with the school board to discuss the purchase of tumbling mats for Queen Mary School, also that two bills totalling $16.50 be paid.

The parents were invited to visit the classrooms and Mr. Bailey thanked the teachers to keep count of the parents.

Five Women Named on Committee

TORONTO (CP)—A committee of Ontario women has been appointed to study the possibility of setting up a conference of women to help Ontario manufacturers improve their goods. Robert W. Macaulay, provincial minister of economics and development, announced Friday.

Such a women's group would aid Ontario's trade creation campaign to reduce imports, increase exports of Ontario-manufactured goods and provide more employment he said.

Speaking at luncheon attended by 70 women who represented more than 115 provincial women's organizations, Mr. Macaulay said women have a responsibility to help manufacturers improve the quality of products.

"There is a market here because people are buying imports. Canadian women and consumers are not satisfied with Canadian goods."

The conference would be organized into five working committees, each of which would study one particular area of consumer goods—such as household goods or fashions, he said.

These women, working with Mrs. Muriel Wright of Toronto, director of the new consumer service branch of the department of economics and development, expect to have suggestions for setting up the conference ready early in the new year.

'Electrolyte Balance' Ends Nursing Series

The last in a series of lectures on Nursing Education was held at Belleville General Hospital Education Hall, Monday evening. The guest speaker was Dr. Bruce Cronk, internist and medical consultant, who continued with the subject, "Electrolyte Balance", which he had introduced at the first lecture.

Mrs. Doris Howie welcomed all those present and introduced the doctor.

Dr. Cronk clarified the complicated subject dealing with chemical in body fluid of the human being using a set of interesting slides. The epidiascope was run by Mr. William Brown, B.G.H. photographer.

Mrs. Katheryn Crowe thanked Dr. Cronk for his fine presentation which all enjoyed.

Mrs. Howie, a member of Nursing Education Committee, thanked everyone present for their support in making these lectures such a success.

Tea was served by the Student Council.

The fall series of Nursing Education was sponsored by the Community Nursing Registry.

Christmas Decor Shown At 'Day Out'

The next to final "Ladies' Day Out" session was held last Tuesday at the YMCA. In keeping with the season, a demonstration was given on Christmas decorations and centre pieces and these present were shown how simple it was to make a truly attractive display. Mrs. Dora Barber was in charge of the demonstration.

Next week Mrs. Margaret Bekie, assistant chief operator for the Bell Telephone, will be guest lecturer. There will also be a special demonstration by Mrs. Lyle Jones on fancy Christmas food decorations.

Hawaii's Charms Appeal To Natives, Tourists

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

Honolulu — The early mist sat on the middle of Diamond Head like a crown deposited by the morning shower. Elsewhere around the lovely curve of Waikiki Beach the sky was blue and white and the sun forced its way through the foggy tiara on the peak. The surf was oily calm and gray after the night's breaking softly in rhythm with the Hawaiian music rolling from the speakers on the terrace of the Royal Hawaiian Hotel.

It is difficult to be any more in Hawaii than we were just then. It was corny, pleasant, real and unreal, just as Hawaii itself.

The day before had been the climax of a week, which really doesn't really mean anything except that it was another excuse for a fiesta or a holiday or whatever they call it. Supposedly these are put on for the tourists, but some enjoy it like the Hawaiians.

To these animated people — madly in love with themselves, their music, their flowers and their luminous faces — tourists merely are being Hawaiian and in Hawaii are enough.

Fascinating faces

We sat on the curb in front of the stately old hotel to watch the parade that capped Aloha Week, feeling distinctly left out as we looked around at the fascinating faces of Hawaii.

There were, as always, the children with the deep brown eyes and long dark tresses, scampering barefoot among their mothers' shapeless flowered-print dresses. The eyes were every known slant, the skin of beige and dust cocoa, fragrant with the perfumed leis that hung around their necks. The tourists tried hard to look like them, but they still came up pallid or splotched with a sunburn red, which colored Waikiki Nezzanine.

In format, at least, it was a typical parade. The local politicians waved heartily from the backs of convertibles, and the citizens seemed inordinately delighted to see them and wave back. There was applause for the military bands and the high school marching groups and the shriners (the local lodge is named, of course, "Aloha"). But the floats were pure Hawaii.

All were covered with endless flowers and giant green fi leaves, as well as happy musicians and hula dancers swaying away at the whining, twangy melodies of which you'd think they'd get sick and tired in a lifetime (they never do). It was a toss-up as to whether the entertainers or spectators enjoyed it more.

The Korean Chamber of Commerce (where else would you find a Korean Chamber of Commerce?) entered a spinning, arm-waving dance troupe, to ringing bells and clanging cymbals, but were almost outdone by the rice powder-faced members of what was identified as "Hawaii's first three-p ri Chin Don Band."

After a while the tourists crowded in to look at the wooden bowls and oriental jewelry in the shop windows, like party crashers looking for a graceful way out.

Remarkable Journey

America is a remarkable country, what with journeying more than 5,000 miles over land and water, and never getting out of it. And it was a remarkable journey, seeing that we scarcely heard a word of American all the way.

"Good Awfternoon," spake the captain, an airman named Bird, as we left New York. "We'll be flying at thuhty-five thousand feet, pawsing over Chicago, Iowa, Oamaha and Colorado to San Francisco."

It was a familiar pitch but we felt as if we were hearing it for the first time, like being in the right church but the wrong pew. The reason was that we were making this trip — ultimately to take us to the South Pacific and Australia — on Qantas, the airline with the misspelled name that is one of only two (neither American) that flies across the United States on its way around the world.

Qantas stands for Queensland and Northern Territory Air Service. If you didn't know those places are in Australia you would have known whose international airline this was from Captain Bird's accent. Or else the pictures of Sweet Scent of Wattle, the perfume brush and other unlikely flora decorating the cabin walls of the 707 jet.

This unlikely airline befits the boomerangs and wattles, a parade that capped Aloha Week, feeling distinctly left out as we looked around at the fascinating faces of Hawaii.

Boots and Shoes

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

Slim backs return and are being seen more and more in the new spectator shoes.

Fine for cold weather general outdoor wear, or for after-ski, is the bonnie bootie of olive gray suede. An elastic strip slides through the back, insuring a comfortable heel, which is brown.

Might as well succumb to the bootie craze, for booties are everywhere from sidewalk to fireside!

Women's Activities

THOMASBURG — Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Emerson of Belleville were recent guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Martin and Mr. and Mrs. Ross Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. John Druggen and family of Toronto visited relatives in this area over the weekend.

Miss Mary Hicks spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Parlee and family of Foxboro.

CARD PARTY

Fine for the dense fog and bad driving conditions a rather small crowd attended the card party sponsored by the I.O.O.F. in their hall on Monday evening. Only five tables were in play, and the winners were: Mrs. Leal of Tweed and Mr. Robert Palmateer, Tweed and the lone plate went to Mrs. Mc-Huls of Thomasburg. Another party is planned for December 17 when draws will be made for the two Christmas baskets.

PHILIP TOP SHOT

TURIN, Italy (Reuters) — Prince Philip was hailed as a master marksman Friday. "The duke is a magnificent shot," said a spokesman for a nearby estate. On one occasion he brought down 103 pheasants with 106 shots." Philip has been here since Monday on his way home from Australia.

H-S Assoc. Joins Trenton Film Board

FRANKFORD — Frankford Home and School Association held in the school on Wednesday evening with Mr. W. Down presiding.

Mrs. Alice Coombes class grade 1 won the banner with 21 parents present.

Congratulations were in order to Mr. H. Sadler, the program convener for being nominated to the school board.

The Home and School Association has joined the Trenton Film Library.

Mrs. Reid of this area, assisted by Frankford Home and School Ladies and other groups canvassed the village for the Retarded School of this area and collected a total sum of $220.

After the business, Christmas carols were sung and dainty refreshments were served.

Due to the holiday season the next meeting falls on January 9th.

U.C.W. Meeting

FRANKFORD U.C.W.

FRANKFORD — The annual meeting of the Frankford United Church Women was held last Tuesday evening in Rose Lowery hall.

Mrs. Preston Chase presided and opened the meeting with a poem "Mother of Our Lord." The worship service for the annual Presbyterial meeting is scheduled for March 6th. Annual report was read for donations of used cotton for bandages to be sent to the Congo.

After a brief business period the December program committee, including Mrs. Leslie Frost, Mrs. Walter Morrow, Mrs. C. Judd, Mrs. H. Abbott and Mrs. P. Chase took charge. The worship period dealt with the theme "The Three Wise Men" and Mrs. W. Morrow closed this portion of the program with prayer.

The varied program was as follows: a reading by Mrs. Gerald Herrington; a trio of the Misses Elaine and Jane Sharpe and Rhonda Wickson, sang a selection; a poem by Mrs. Ed McGeagy; piano solo by Susan Chase; a reading by Mrs. L. Way; a vocal solo by Raelene Howe; a violin solo by Miss Ann Beach; a Christmas reading by Mrs. Raymond Rowe and a vocal solo by Mrs. C. Moran.

Mrs. P. Chase and Mrs. C. Moran presented Mrs. C. Judd with a Christmas gift on behalf of the UCW members and Mrs. Judd presented Mrs. Conkey with a basket of small gifts from the UCW.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

Needy Family Sent Gifts by Baptist Ladies

Christmas gifts, for a needy family in Quebec, were brought to the Parkdale Baptist Ladies' missionary fellowship meeting on Thursday evening.

There are five children in the family to whom the parcel of gifts will be sent. Three gifts — two of clothing — were wrapped for each child and for the parents.

The ladies' meeting took the form of a Christmas party, followed by a time of devotion. Mrs. Beaton read the poem, "If Christ Had Not Come," and Mrs. Twilley, the pastor's wife, spoke on "Eternal Life."

Mrs. Twilley emphasized the danger of Christians becoming so busy with the preparations for Christmas that, like Martha, they do not make the time to meditate on the real meaning of Christmas.

HOLD UP BANK

QUEBEC (CP)—Two gunmen Friday night held up a branch of the Banque Provinciale du Canada and escaped with an estimated $10,000.

Kiwanis Ladies' Aux. Closes Season With Pot-Luck Supper

On Thursday evening the members of the Kiwanis Ladies Auxiliary held the last meeting of this year at the Kiwanis Centre. This took the form of a potluck supper. The tables and the Centre were decorated in the Christmas theme motif.

The ladies had as their guests the members of West Kingston Kiwanis Auxiliary. President Barbara Floyd welcomed the ladies of the Kingston auxiliary and introduced their president, Norma Sharpe, the past president Joan Baird, and the incoming president, Lea Binnington, to the assembled ladies. President Barbara also introduced the Belleville ladies' incoming president Mary Manion, and the past president, Rita Coleman, and gave all a warm welcome.

Following grace, said by Rita Coleman, the ladies helped themselves to the many delicious dishes of food prepared by the Kiwanis ladies and served and enjoyed very much.

With supper finished president Barbara introduced five new members of the Kiwanis Auxiliary, Eileen Fleming, Ellen Tackaberry, Helen Kelly, Helen Woodland and Margaret May.

BUSINESS SESSION

A short business session followed. President Barbara also announced that due to illness, secretary Ina Bellstedt and Carrie Mitchell were unable to attend the meeting.

President Norma Sharpe of West Kingston Kiwanis Ladies' Auxiliary presented the members of the Belleville Ladies' Auxiliary with a beautiful hammered aluminum tray. President Barbara thanked the members of the Kingston Kiwanis Ladies' Auxiliary for the lovely gift.

Carols were enjoyed and sung by all with Gwen Brain assisting at the piano and Doreen Mills leading in the singing.

HOME AFFLIANCES

The special program of the evening was a talk and demonstration by the Ontario Hydro Home Economist, Miss Barbara Woodall, on small home appliances. Introduced by Gwen Brain. Barbara Woodall is a graduate of Western University, now employed by the Ontario Hydro in sales promotion.

Miss Woodall cooked several one-dish meals in an electric frying pan and also in one of the newer small electric utensils, an electric saucepan.

Mary Denton, on behalf of the ladies present, thanked Miss Woodall for her most interesting and informative talk and presented her with a small gift on behalf of the Kiwanis Ladies' Auxiliary.

The various dishes of food cooked by Miss Woodall were drawn for and the lucky winners were Lea Binnington and Ann Bryden of Kingston, and Ethel Lee and Vera Slade of Belleville. A lovely hair dryer was the last item to be drawn and was won by Marie Kingston of Kingston.

Everyone agreed it was a most enjoyable evening for all and each and everyone wished each other a "Happy Christmas" before departing to their homes.

Written and designed for the taxpayer who is not in a position to employ the services of professional accountant or visit an Income Tax Office.

by C. A. Miller, Former Supervising Assessor Income Tax Department

When dependants do not reside with the taxpayer the amount of the allowable exemption on their behalf depends on the total of the contributions made by the taxpayer to such dependants during the year.

If the dependants are adults, the taxpayer must contribute $500 or more to each dependant in order to be allowed the $500 maximum exemption for them. If the contributions are less than $500 each, then it is only the amount of the contributions that may be claimed as an exemption on their behalf. The taxpayer should remember that if the dependants are children residing in another country, they would not qualify for family allowance, and in such cases he could claim $500 for them, if his contributions were sufficient.

If the claim is made for a dependant father or mother who do not reside with the taxpayer, and the taxpayer is a single person, he may claim $1000 for one such dependant and $500 for any others providing he maintains the home in which they reside, and their income is under $960 each.

When dependants are a wife and children residing in another country, the taxpayer must send sufficient funds to support them, to have an allowable exemption on their behalf. If he does send sufficient he will have no claim at all. He will either get full exemption or nothing.

The taxpayer should check with his local Income Tax Office regarding remittances to a wife and children in a foreign country, to see if he sent sufficient funds to warrant a claim. The amounts necessary for such a claim will vary according to the countries in which they reside.

QUESTIONS

Question: I have a wife and two children in Italy. I sent them $250 last year. Can I claim this as a deduction?

Answer: It would appear that you only sent sufficient money to support one child. Claim $500 for the child.

Question: My father and mother live in Greece. I am single and sent them $700 last year. I own three-house in which they live and pay the taxes on it. What can I claim for my parents?

Answer: You should claim the equivalent to married status on one parent $1000. Your contributions were not sufficient to claim the other.

Teen-Ager Is Bored and Lonesome

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS—What can I do so that I'll be more popular with my schoolmates? I am 17 years old but have never had a date. A couple of boys have asked me to go out with them, but I refused because I was afraid I would not have anything to talk about. Now even they don't ever talk to me.

Most of the girls in my class have boy friends and are always talking about the last movie or dance they went to. I realize how much fun I am missing and am jealous of them. Life to me is so boring and lonesome that sometimes I feel like lying down and dying.—LONESOME.

DEAR LONESOME—What to say on a date may stump even the experts.

But practice makes perfect. Stock up with jokes (even corny ones) and such things as the latest hockey scores, your school's recent plays, last night's television programs.

The boys you once refused to date think you are stuck up. Remember, they're scared too. Write to me, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope, for the name of a paperback on dating which can help.

DEAR DORIS—My three-year-old is scared of so many things that he is missing out on a lot of things that other children enjoy. The main thing is noise. He will not play outdoors alone with the yard alone because he thinks the truck or car noise will hurt him. A dog barking, the pump running, a person speaking loud, all scare him.

He will not play in a room by himself, but spends most of his time with me. When he meets people he will not talk to them, even other children, unless it's in our home, and then after they have been here for some time.

I realize it must be awful for him feeling so scared all the time and would like to help him get over it, but I am not sure what is the best way to help him and I wondered if you could advise me. Some of my friends tell me not to force him to do anything, and others tell me I give in to him too much.

There is one thing that might have some connection with it, that is, that noise gets on my nerves. Like when the TV is on and people are talking, or I'm with a group and several people are talking at once, sometimes I feel like screaming.—ANTI-NOISE.

DEAR ANTI-NOISE—If you think he doesn't sense your worry about him and about other things, you are kidding yourself. He fears what you fear.

Work for your own physical health and peace of mind. Then when he comes running, soothe and comfort him. He will begin enjoying this noisy world when you do.

DEAR DORIS—Would you please tell me where I can write or how I can find out about the forms for the Marine Veteran's Pension or Allowance? I would like to know if I can apply for it.—MR. R. H.

DEAR MR. R. H.—Get in touch with the Regional Office of your provincial welfare department, which will handle your application.

TO GAIL R., FUTURE SOCIAL WORKER, HIGH SCHOOLER AND OTHERS—Please send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope and ten cents for my leaflet on the career you mention.

DEAR DORIS—I am 16 and my boy friend is 22. I met him at my summer job and we really fell for each other. Since then he has made a trip home to see the whole family is crazy about him. My problem is that he wants me to wear an engagement ring and get married when I finish school. (I'm in Grade 10 now.)

For the past two years I have gone with many boys and I can't seem to stick with any of them very long (it seems after about five dates they get so boring), and yet with my present boy friend, I feel completely comfortable and happy. And also if we would become engaged I would be alone most of the time as we live almost 300 miles apart.

Whenever he brings up this "ring" business, I try to laugh it off and tell him he couldn't buy me a large enough diamond, but, Doris, he's very serious and to tell you the truth, I'd love to wear his ring.

Please, what should I do, accept it?—MIXED-UP TEENAGER.

DEAR MIXED-UP—No, no, no! The ring will keep and so will the boy, if he is the right one for you. But it's test to one you'll get bored with him before long. Just tell him you do not want to be serious for a while.

* * *

(There's a solution to your dilemma. A letter to Doris will get you some help with it. Remember to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

The Golden Years

Retired Husband's Wife Asks His Ex-Boss for Some Advice

By THOMAS COLLINS

Dear Mr. Boss:

It was nice of you to send my 65-year-old husband home last month with his pension. That's what a wife is supposed to say, isn't it?

Anyway, I've got him now and you haven't. Or you're rid of him and I'm not. Whichever way you want to look at it. And the purpose of this letter is to give you some helpful hints in exchange for some helpful hints I need from you.

First, I want you to tell me how you kept my husband from taking a nap every day right after lunch. You didn't let him take a nap at the company, did you? Well, he is now taking a nap right after lunch and it is disorganizing my whole routine. Please tell me how you kept him awake without making him mad.

Now for a helpful hint for you. You know about the fascinating company that sends him his pension. Your company makes, appliances. Why didn't you train him to repair them in his retirement? It could make him a salesman? He would have made housewives the envy of the neighborhood those appliances are the greatest thing since flush toilets. Before he'd learn to fix it. But you didn't follow through and now, just one month out, he's beginning to think pension checks don't care have prettier legs than you do.

I need to know one more thing from you. What did you do to my husband to get him out of his golf? He's a good pouter. He'll get mad at me for something and sit looking at daytime television all morning and not say a word to me. What did you do with him when he pouted at the company? Pet him? Kick him? What?

I think you owe me some serious consideration of these and such, also in their future when they come home. You don't have any bedrooms down there, do you?

The best helpful hint I can give you, I think, is to stop retiring your employee's loyalty whenever you retire the employee. My husband came home riding a rah-rah horse for the company and he would have punched anybody who said anything bad about it. Why didn't you train him to be a part-time commission salesman for the company's products after he retired? He could have sold on enthusiasm and devotion alone. You didn't follow through. You sent him home with a party and a bang. Then what did you do? You sent him the house organ. You big fellows don't follow through. And do you know where all that company loyalty goes after a man retires? It goes to the insurance company that sends him his pension. Your company makes, appliances. Why didn't you train him to repair them in his retirement? You could make him a salesman? He would have made housewives the envy of the neighborhood those appliances are the greatest thing since flush toilets. Before he'd learn to fix it. But you didn't follow through and now, just one month out, he's beginning to think pension checks don't care have prettier legs than you do.

I need to know one more thing from you. What did you do to my husband to get him out of his golf? He's a good pouter. He'll get mad at me for something and sit looking at daytime television all morning and not say a word to me. What did you do with him when he pouted at the company? Pet him? Kick him? What?

I think you owe me some serious consideration of these issues I have raised. I married my husband for 16 hours out of the 24, and for better or worse. How you come along when he's not as much fun as he once was and give him to me for 24 hours out of the 24. And that is not necessarily for the better.

Please answer.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Golden Years

Attacks Are Nothing New To CNR President Gordon

OTTAWA (CP) — They are calling for Donald Gordon's scalp in Parliament and burning him in effigy on the streets of Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec and Sherbrooke.

But controversy and attack are nothing new to the fifty-six-foot-three president of the Canadian National Railways.

The current dispute centres on charges he has been passing over French - speaking Canadians in making senior appointments in the publicly - owned NR.

Mr. Gordon's reply: He hasn't been discriminating against them, nor will he discriminate in their favor.

Complaints about a dearth of French-speaking Canadians in the CNR's upper echelons welled up Nov. 20 in the Commons railway committee—scene of other verbal battles between Mr. Gordon and parliamentarians in past years.

Mr. Gordon replied it was "a completely false impression" to to suggest that French - speaking Canadians don't hold senior positions.

SPONSOR RESOLUTION

Since then, along with the effigy-burning scenes staged by students, there have been these developments:

1. Fifty Quebec MPs of the Conservative, Liberal and Social Credit parties sponsored a resolution urging the CNR to move immediately to appoint French-speaking Canadians to every level of the railway's executive.

2. Deputy Social Credit Leader Real Caouette introduced a bill to reduce Mr. Gordon's salary to $1. At $75,000 a year he's the highest-paid public servant in Canada.

3. Resolutions calling for his dismissal have come from such organizations as the Chicoutimi City council and the Laval University Students Association.

4. Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) called him a "silly ass" during a Commons speech criticizing a switch in a passenger train schedule and declared: "We should get rid of Gordon." Some other MPs agreed.

5. There was a bomb threat scare in the CNR's Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal.

OBJECT TO NAME

The hotel was the centre of controversy a few years ago, when numerous groups in Quebec objected to the hostelry named Chateau Maisonneuve. They took out most of their ire on Mr. Gordon.

The Scottish-born Mr. Gordon, who will mark his 63rd birthday next Tuesday, has made no comment on the recent attacks.

The cry of "Gordon must go" has been swelling up periodically ever since he became CNR's president Jan. 1, 1958. Even then he had a reputation as a hard-nosed administrator, earned during wartime years as Ottawa's price control chief.

For nearly 12 months during 1960-61 it looked as though Gordon might be going. The government didn't renew his appointment, leaving him on a day - to - day basis. Finally in September, 1961, he was reappointed for two years as chairman of the CNR board of directors. The government finally swung behind him, it was reported, after top rail union leaders expressed their confidence in him.

Through the years, many of the attacks on him have been generated by heavy CNR deficits—and some by economy moves he has taken to reduce the deficit.

GORDON ATTACKS FISHER

Mr. Gordon goes on the attack himself sometimes. Last year he accused Douglas Fisher (NDP—Port Arthur) of "a document stolen from files on the CNR as a basis for hostile questions in the Commons committee over CNR trucking operations.

He also delivered a long statement denouncing "McCarthyist" attacks on himself.

The latest dispute began in the Commons railway committee when Gilles Gregoire (SC—Lapointe) said there were no French-Canadians among the CNR's top 28 executive posts—a group which includes 17 vice-presidents.

Mr. Gordon replied that the people in top jobs had worked their way up through 20 or 30 years' experience.

"This may be the result of a policy of 20 or 30 years ago speaking about these men, but not a policy for which I am responsible today. We have done nothing to block the path of French language in the CNR than any other organization in Canada."

HAS AN ANSWER

Former Liberal transport minister Lionel Chevrier said he didn't believe there were no French - speaking Canadians capable of filling the jobs.

"What you are asking for is discrimination," Mr. Gordon shot back.

He said the CNR has recruited many young French-speaking men from universities. In 10 years some of them would be in the top jobs.

"As long as I am president of the CNR, there is not going to be a promotion or an appointment made just because a man is a French-Canadian . . . He has to be able as the other fellow who has a claim on the job."

Three days later, back in Montreal, he issued a statement saying that more than 80 per cent of CNR personnel in upper-middle and senior management spoke were French-speaking. Some of them, he said, outranked in salary and responsibility the senior officers the committee had been talking about.

RETIRED LAST YEAR

Gen. McNaughton, retired last April from the IJC which helped to draft the treaty, was making his first major public utterance since then.

Gen. Pearkes, 75, had called his retirement the decision of political expediency. He could be referred to Prime Minister Diefenbaker, who said the general's age was the reason.

His statements Friday came in three parts.

While discussions have been going on between the two governments, a federal-B.C. impasse remains about financing power projects.

The U.S. quickly ratified the treaty nearly two years ago. But British Columbia, which wants to sell power owning Canada under the treaty and the Liberal opposition, has been to keep it.

COMMENTS ON LITTER

Another part of the general's statement was a detailed comment on a letter written by Prime Minister Macmillan to technical magazine. Mr. Fulton as justice minister headed the Canadian team in negotiations treaty which included B.C. negotiators.

The third part was a section of the analysis of the treaty that Gen. McNaughton has been writing, in hopes he will be able to testify before the Commons committee on rivers and waters when the Columbia treaty gets there.

The letters to the two party leaders Friday noted that Mr. Deifenbaker and External Affairs Minister Green both promised committee study before ratification.

Gen. Pearkes said he hoped would be glad to meet members of the committee study groups to discuss the treaty.

FIND REFUGEES

HONG KONG (AP) — Police seized a refugee-smuggling junk in Hong Kong waters Friday after a 50-minute chase, press reports said today. At least 50 refugees from Communist China were found on board the junk, the reports said. Two other smuggling junks turned back on the approach of the police and made good their escape.

CNE Recorded Profit of $475,000

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian National Exhibition recorded a surplus of $475,000 this year, an increase of $185,000 over 1961, Toronto's Mayor-elect Donald Summerville said Friday.

Mr. Summerville also released figures showing that the evening grandstand show took in $244,410 with costs of $339,541. The afternoon grandstand show drew 130,908 and cost $106,127.

He said the CNE's board of directors has set Aug. 16-Sept. 2 as dates for next year's show and is considering allowing two extra days — Aug. 14-15.

Further studies on lowering the general admission price from 75 cents to 50 cents will also be made.

sources said police reinforcements had been rushed to Weston on Brunei Bay, where the surgents had exchanged fire with North Borneo police.

Latest reports indicated the rebels still were in control of the oil town and the adjoining town of Kuala Belait.

Although they clashed with police Thursday evening, there were no reports of violence against Shell officers or other Europeans.

In London, a Shell spokesman said he had heard there was no damage to the installations in Brunei and no injuries to personnel.

The big Seria oilfield, which was damaged during the Second World War, is in the hands of the Japanese, produces about 4,000,000 tons of oil a year.

The Shell spokesman said he was not known whether the installations had fallen to the rebels.

About 200 expatriate families were reported working for Shell in Brunei, including some British, Dutch and Australian.

In Manila, Inche Azahari, president of Brunei's dominant Ryaat party, said the "national army" had 20,000 men and intended to stake over the territories of Brunei, North Borneo and Sarawak. Azahari said a new government was formed by the Sultan with Azahari minister of defence. Liberal Brunei, "United States of Borneo."

Azahari warned that his insurgents, who he said struck at 20 towns simultaneously, would destroy oil refineries and other British installations if they were attacked by British troops. Britain has said it has no plans now is to think twice and negotiate immediately," he said.

(Azahari blamed "British stubbornness" for the revolt, claiming the British refused to grant his people the right of self-determination. The rebels want the projected union in 1963 of the three territories with Malaya and Singapore in a federation to be called Malaysia.)

were forced to spend Thursday night in the snow-bound Metrobranch area.

Most rural schools in Essex and Kent counties declared a holiday Friday and the scheduled opening of Lambton Central Collegiate in Sarnia was postponed.

The storms were blamed for at least two deaths Friday night. An unidentified man was killed in a traffic accident on Highway 17 near Aylmer, Ont., where police said the road was slippery and blowing snow reduced visibility. A Hamilton man was reported dead as a result of a heart attack suffered while shovelling snow.

Ask Cindy

CINDY GEORGE

Henry invites letters from readers. For the most interesting letter he receives each week, he will award a copy of his best-selling book, "Ask Henry," published by Prentice-Hall Inc. This week's winner is Miss V. Morris, Weston, Ontario.

Dear Henry — Why do young people between the ages 9-15, smoke on street corners against their parents' wishes. Please write in print an answer. — From A Wonderer.

Dear Henry:—How can I convince my 11-year-old son that friends are very important?—A Reader.

Dear Reader — I picture your son a quiet boy interested in science who likes to tinker around with his chemistry set.

No lecturing will change his opinions. So just stay out of it and you have a 100% chance that he will bump into another boy one day, who is quiet and interested in science. And they will stick. — HENRY.

Dear Henry — I got a problem. I make beds, I dry dishes, but I still don't get an allowance.—Donna S.

Dear Donna—The things you do are called "duties" and it is customary for kids to do these duties for parents free including tax. If you want to earn money, you might baby sit, clean out the drawers or even wash the car if you are desperate enough.—HENRY.

Dear Henry—I wonder why parents break promises? That's how my parents are. My mother promised me that she would give me an allowance. But I haven't got it for two months. What to do about it? — Jane.

Dear Jane—Have faith in parents. They didn't break their promise, they just forgot it.—HENRY.

Dear Henry—I have a problem on my report card. When I get a bad card I bet bald out. Then I don't get a bottle of pop. So why should our dad and mom sign our report card?—David N.

Dear David N.—The reason your dad and mom sign your report card is so you will get bawled out, so you won't get a bottle of pop and so you will get better marks next time.—HENRY.

Fish and Game Clubs Take Aim On Poachers

QUEBEC (CP)—The Quebec Federation of Fish and Game Associations has taken aim on poachers, which sometimes appear to be one of the better organized groups in the province.

In one area, the federation was told Friday, the poachers have a fund to pay the fines of those brought to court.

One poacher took 50 deer, marketing them in Ontario, Maryland or Montreal hunters who had no luck.

Another poacher was depicted as a man impervious to conservation education.

The club asked that the government blacklist anybody fined $50 or more for breaking game laws and ban them from the forests.

Government spokesman, after heated debate, suggested that possibly judges could impose a short-term ban on offenders, but a life-time ban on someone who had just made a mistake was too much.

Jean Duguay, chief of Quebec's Forest Protective Service, said a former association president had been picked up for poaching a baby bear. Was he a man from sports associations and the forests for one mistake?

"If we made a list of the poachers in the room," said one delegate, "I don't know how many we'd get."

Ted Glendenning, a Montreal delegate, replied later that he knew of no poachers in the room, and was sure no one else could point one out.

Delegates later passed a number of resolutions calling for more game wardens throughout the province.

Friday, the SIU called some of its members to testify before the inquiry. They praised the SIU, its wage gains, its welfare plan, its democracy and its services for its members.

But they also made under address and under cross-examination by rival lawyers.

Rudy Stapleton, a staunch SIU member from St. Catharines, said she voted for local union official but never for the top officers.

NOT ELECTED

Robert Brett, 34, of Hamilton, said he was on a negotiation committee but admitted under cross-examination that he was not elected to it. He said he "volunteered," as did the majority of its members.

Seaton Greaves, 29, of Montreal, vowed his faith in the SIU, but testified that he had to rejoin the SIU three times, each time paying a $75 initiation fee. To get his discharge book, he said, he paid another $100.

The hearing continues in Ottawa Monday.

LONDON (AP) — Joan Adamu, 11-month-old surving Siamese twin, left to rhome in Nigeria today after eight months in a London hospital and five major operations. Separated from her dying sister Jennifer May 22, Joan's only abnormality is a slight spinal curvature. Otherwise, doctors say, she is completely normal.

Safe Driving Week's Toll Is Worst Ever

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadian drivers ended their worst safe driving week in recent years Friday night with 70 road fatalities recorded across the country in the seven days.

This week's 21 more than last year's total and 13 more than the 1960 figure.

Ontario had the blackest spot with 27 deaths, nearly double last year's 14 total. Quebec ended with 18 fatalities, up five from last year, Saskatchewan had seven compared with last year's three and British Columbia had nine compared with four last year.

Friday was the second highest day of the week this year with 12 deaths reported. The first day, Saturday, there were 23.

New Brunswick Friday reported its first fatality of the week. Saskatchewan and Ontario each had two fatalities Friday and Quebec one.

No province went fatality-free this year. Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island had perfect marks last year.

Besides New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Manitoba had one fatality each. Nova Scotia and Nova Scotia and Alberta had two each.

Ontario's safety campaign sponsored each year by the Canadian Highway Safety Council to promote safety consciousness during the usually hazardous driving month of December.

Despite objections from Liberal Leader John Wintermeyer, the government announced that it will again present some departmental estimates prior to bringing down the annual budget.

Mr. Wintermeyer protested that "we have no assurance that a budget will be brought down before this session progresses."

The premier told the House that the estimates to be presented prior to Christmas will be "will not be of large departments." He mentioned that they would include those of his own department, the lieutenant-governor's department, reform institutions and "perhaps the mines department."

The Liberal leader protested to Speaker Matthew Wilson that it was his intention to bring in "as many bills as possible" after the session resumes following the Christmas recess.

Adam Bronakoski, whose son, Albert, 19, was among those trapped, said the premier received the information without visible reaction.

"What could we do?" he asked. "It's a temporary setback: I still have hope."

The discovery came in the third day of round-the-clock operations by specially trained eight-man rescue units at the U.S. Steel's Robena No. 3. mine, located about 50 miles southwest of Pittsburgh.

Picton Accused Found 'Not Guilty' Of Wounding

PICTON — Charles Harvey Brown, 46, of Amelisburg township, was found "not guilty" by a jury following a four-day hearing in County Court here yesterday. Brown was charged with shooting a Toronto hunter, Ben Jamin Santon in the knee when he and other hunters trespassed on his property.

Judge W. S. Lane, presiding, commented "I do not disagree with the verdict," and told Mr. Brown he was "lucky in many ways." He admonished Brown to be careful in handling guns in future. Jury deliberated two hours.

Santon was shot in the knee, September 3rd. Dr. W. R. Weaver, Trenton, said he had suffered a fractured left bone in his knee.

Earl Rathbun, Brown's neighbor, testified he had given the Toronto men permission to hunt on his property. Witnesses testified the hunter had been warned not to keep off his property, but that they had done so in another area of his farm.

Mr. Brown in a statement, which was admitted, stated that the hunters were armed and heard him. and his two sons with their guns aimed "at my belly."

"I fired two shots in the air and then fired one at the legs of the men," the statement said.

On the stand Mr. Brown said the hunters were standing as long as three minutes facing each other, about ten feet apart. "Santon looked very mad to me and I fired a shot at his leg."

R. E. Nourse appeared for Brown and Crown Attorney Lance Nethery for the crown.

Health Minister Monteith suggested that the question of costs might await release of the report by the restrictive trade practices commission on the drug industry.

But he did not rule out the possibility of the committee tackling the matter anyway.

It would be up to the committee to decide whether "market-ing" in its terms of reference would bring in the cost question. Mr. Monteith said he understood that the term "relates to the whole process of getting drugs on the market with proper safeguards."

TALK OVER BOARD

In other Commons business Friday, Cause-by-citizen leader of the government bill to create the Atlantic Development Board was resumed but it amounted in effect to another chapter in the debate started more than three days earlier in the week.

Had the House got into the meat of the bill, amendments which have been signalled from all four parties in the chamber would have come up and, with them, possibly crucial votes. There is general agreement ruling out such votes in Fridays when many MPs are heading home for the weekend.

The final hour of Friday's sitting there were only 38 members in attendance.

study in the Vatican later in the morning. Pope John recited the Angelus, blessed the crowd and waved to them.

The Pope's voice had its usual firmness. But he was pale and appeared tired as he walked into the basilica, unaided, and mounted to a throne to deliver his speech in Latin.

Although the end of the council was not imminent, the Pope said, it was "nonetheless consoling to turn one's gaze toward the benefits that are anticipated benefits for the Catholic Church hopes for our brethren who treasure the name of Christian, renewed attention on the part of all those countless children of ancient and glorious civilizations, which the light of Christianity does not desire to destroy, but in which she could . . . develop the richest seeds of religious vigor and human progress."

This was an expression of hope for eventual Christian unity, and also a hope that Christianity's message would be stated in a way to end the present Christian weird.

Out of the first phase of the council, four tangible results have emerged.

But both the Catholic bishops and the Orthodox observers agreed that merely in being here together a giant step was taken over the Church's understanding.

Not since the Reformation of the 16th century had so many representatives of the various Christian communities gathered at such a high level.

Shortly after the emergency alarm was turned into the Belleville fire department, Fire Chief Ellis was notified on the scene with one of the boy's parents' children.

AREA BLOCKED OFF

Police blocked off the surrounding area to traffic and pedestrians. No personal injuries to bystanders occurred during the blaze.

Firefighters from Frankford and Batawa, plus a foam pumper from the RCAF station were rushed to the scene. Some three hours after the first alarm was turned in, the fire was declared under control.

This morning, a full estimate of damage was still not officially available. Fire Chief Cecil Ellis said it might run to $300,000. Firemen picked their way through the blackened shambles seeking some clue to its cause.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

"What's wrong with Bobby Hull?" has been the question that has been fired at this department fairly consistently during the past few weeks.

The answer is "nothing"—if you want to compare his record to date with that of his record-tying 50-goal pace of a year ago.

BOBBY HULL

In fact the muscular blonde from Point Anne is slightly down in goal-scoring, but up in points. Last year on December 6, Bobby had played 23 games for 19 goals and 23 assists. To date this year he has eight goals and 12 assists.

A year ago this time Bobby was far down in the points race holding down 29th position. Today he is occupying the eighth spot.

"There's a lot more to come," Bobby told Chicago reporters. "I'm still not skating well. I usually get the puck when I'm standing still instead of on the move."

Hull scored six goals in Chicago's first seventeen games. He didn't score Number Six until Chicago's 19th game a year ago on his way to tying the National Hockey League single-season record he now shares with Rocket Richard and Bernie Geoffrion.

He admitted that he has started "pressing" which has affected his accuracy, normally one of his strong points. In one home game against New York he had 17 shots at the net, missed completely eight times and watched helplessly as Lorne Worsley stopped the other nine without too much trouble.

"You can't help but begin pressing," Bobby said. "I tried not to be worried. It doesn't help you score. I certainly did not stop trying. But I was concerned. The most pressure comes from the fans who expect you to score—especially on home ice."

Although Hull is monsensarily ahead of last year's pace, points-wise, nobody is talking fifty goals yet. Always a slow starter, Bobby had only 14 goals in the first half of the season a year ago. He scored a fantastic 36 in the final 35 games to tie the 50-goal record on the final day of the season.

If Hull's post-record year follows the general experience of athletes who reach the mark-breaking or tying circle, he won't score fifty goals this year—or possibly not approach it.

Remember the year Frank Mahovlich was belt-bent for the Richard record with reporters hanging on his every word, move and gesture, both on and off the ice? The "Big M" ended with 48 after watching Boom-Boom Geoffrion, undershadowed and unsung, sweep from nowhere in a home-stretch splurge and pass him to score his half-century.

And what happened to Mahovlich and Boom-Boom the next season? Both finished well below the league scoring leaders.

Roger Maris hit a controversial 61 home runs to break Ruth's record. Where did he finish last year? Maury Wills cracked the immortal Ty Cobb stolen base record last year. Who gets you a nickel he won't even approach his mark next season. And Willie admits it.

Sophomore years for champions and record-breakers usually are disappointments to their admirers and perhaps themselves. Lou Gehrig and Jimmy Foxx lacked a homer or two of Ruth's record in different seasons. After that they did not come close.

Personally I hope he does, but I don't think that Hull will equal his fifty-goal mark this season. And if he doesn't it should not be held against him. I hope he does if only to make the "knockers" swallow their unfair criticism that his performance last year was a "flash-in-the-pan".

Bobby was born with hockey-playing talent. He didn't acquire it. He has merely improved the potential that nature gave him. If ability is not worthy of recognition then those who do not want to recognize it, should confine their inane criticisms to their sympathizers.

Guelph Holds Hawks

Flyers Tie Habs 3-3

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The botshots and the collar-dwellers of the Ontario Hockey Association provincial Junior A group both came up with ties Friday night.

Niagara Falls Flyers claimed second place by tying the league-leading Montreal Canadiens 3-3 in Niagara Falls.

In Guelph, brilliant third-period netminding by Andy Brown squeezed out a 2-2 tie for his last-place Royals teammates against the fifth-place St. Catharines Black Hawks.

Brown turned aside six point-blank shots to hold the Hawks scoreless in the final frame. Jean Lafond and Bob Plager were the Guelph scorers. Fred Stanfield and Ken Hodge fired the St. Catharines markers.

Yvan Cournoyer scored two goals for the Canadiens and Bill Englis got the other. Flyer scorers were Terry Crisp with two and Ted Snell.

Hab Snipers, Off Target, Meet Wings

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Several of Montreal's big-scoring threats haven't been producing in the first third of the National Hockey League schedule, which may explain why Canadiens are in fourth place going into the weekend games.

Last year at this time, Montreal led the league while Claude Provost, Ralph Backstrom and Bill Hicke were among the leaders in the individual scoring race.

This year, Provost has 13 points compared to 22 after the same number of games last year, Backstrom five points compared to 19 and Hicke 10 compared to 19.

In addition, Bobby Rousseau, NHL rookie of the year last season, is having a bad case of the sophomore blues. He missed nine games because of injuries and hasn't scored yet this season whereas he ended with 21 goals last year.

Montreal coach Toe Blake feels Rousseau has been improving in the last few games.

"Maybe he's ready to show some of the form of last year," he said.

TWO STARS RETURN

Two injured Montreal stars that definitely have been producing—Bernie Geoffrion and Tom Johnson—are expected to play tonight against Detroit Red Wings. Their strict injuries are responding quickly to treatment.

This will be the third game in four days, for the Red Wings who lost their only game so far this season in Montreal 3-1 on Nov. 8.

However, the Detroit team has managed to keep right up in the race for league leader ship, despite predictions the bubble would burst.

About the only difference between the Red Wings who finished out of the playoffs last year and the 1962 Detroit model is the performance of the much-travelled Parker MacDonald.

He has scored twice as many points in Red Wings' 23 games to date as he did in 32 games he played for Detroit last year when he was farmed out to Hershey Bears of the American Hockey League for half the season.

FACE FORMER HAB

Montreal will be facing a four-year Canadiens, Andre Pronovost, for the first time in Detroit uniform tonight. Montreal traded him to Boston two years ago and he went to Detroit recently in a trade for Forbes Kennedy.

Maple Leafs tackle Chicago Black Hawks tonight and the record indicates the Toronto team isn't awed by the league leaders. Leafs have a 2-1 season record against Chicago, including a 3-1 victory Oct. 20 in their only other encounter in Maple Leaf Gardens.

The top four teams again trade blows Sunday.

Montreal will travel to Chicago to meet their nemesis.

New York Rangers play back-to-back games with Boston Bruins tonight in Boston and in New York Sunday.

Jerome Surgery A Success

VANCOUVER (CP) — Stage one in the operation to repair a left thigh injury sprinter Harry Jerome suffered at the British Empire Games appears to have been successful.

Doctors Friday removed the outer stitches from the thigh and said they were satisfied with the results. They said the torn muscle tissue around the injury is healing favorably.

Doctors said it will be at least another two weeks before they will know whether the injury is cured.

Griffith Rated Solid Favorite

By BOB MYERS

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Emile Griffith of New York risks his world welterweight title tonight and will enter the ring as a solid favorite to retain it against Jorge Fernandez of Argentina.

A crowd of around 6,000 is expected to attend the scheduled 15-rounder in the convention centre. It will be televised by ABC starting at 10 p.m. EST.

For Griffith, 23-year-old native of the Virgin Islands, this will be the second defence in his second reign over the 147-pound division.

Fernandez, 27, can view his chance as the climax of more than two years of frustration and effort to get Griffith into the ring again.

In 1960, the then little-known Griffith was outpointed the Argentine, the first time on a controversial split decision. He second by unanimous verdict. Both were 10-rounders in New York.

Griffith, who has had but 35 professional fights, was guaranteed $50,000 or 45 per cent of the anticipated $1 million gate receipts of $60,000 and $62,500 television money.

MUST PUT UP CASH

Fernandez gets a flat $12,500. He also was forced to put up a cash guarantee of $25,000, assuring Griffith a return match in the event Fernandez wins. Griffith's manager is Gil Clancy and Howard Albert, explained the rigid conditions. They said they are afraid Fernandez, if he wins, might take the title back to Argentina and virtually freeze it as far as Griffith is concerned.

Fernandez is a veteran of 81 fights. He has lost but five and claims to have knocked out 51 opponents.

Hull Ottawa Stops Frontenacs

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hull-Ottawa Canadiens hauled down the high-flying Kingston Frontenacs Friday night and killed Kingston's bid to match Canadiens' record 12-game winning streak in 1960.

Kingston had won 11 consecutive Eastern Professional Hockey League outings before losing 5-4 to Hull-Ottawa Friday night.

The win moved Canadiens to within five points of the first-place Frontenacs in the four-team league.

The third - place Sudbury Wolves stayed four points behind Canadiens by picking up a 9-2 home-ice win in an interlocking game with Port Huron Flags of the International Hockey League.

WILL FACE CHARGES

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—District Prosecutor Lester V. Chalmers said Friday 10 men still face bribery charges here in the basketball game-fixing scandals "will be brought to trial as soon as we can get them here." Two St. Louis men were convicted this week on charges of aiding North Carolina State College players to fix basketball games and were sentenced to five years in prison and ordered to pay fines totalling $30,000.

Unbeaten In Seven Starts

Kingston Downs Juniors

By GARRY ALEXANDER
(Staff Sportswriter)

Kingston Frontenacs increased their lead at the top of the OHA Eastern Junior Hockey League when they dumped the young Belleville squad 7-1 before a crowd 350 fans at Memorial Arena last night.

The gain was the Frontenacs seventh in as many starts while the loss was Belleville's fourth in six games. Don Barclay's squad has one win and one tie heading into a home and home set against Peterborough Monarchs Monday and Friday of next week.

Both squads were short several men for last night's tilt and it showed, especially in a scrambly first period. Kingston took a 1-0 lead in this heat but the score could have mounted at both ends except for erratic, shooting, poor puck control arms especially by Belleville's Hashill, and a number of queer bounding pucks.

The Frontenacs added three goals in the second period and upped the lead to 7-0 before Stu Muirhead bagged Belleville's lone marker at the 12:27 mark of the third. The clubs were playing four men aside, as they did quite often in the third, when Muirhead carried in from centre, skirted the defence and ruined Neil Gerry's shutout with a pretty backhander. Earlier Gerry Jones had walked in all alone only to have Perry sprawl and make the save with his outstretched stick.

Referees Ted Hurst and Tim Williams, who called just about everything "roughing" dished out 23 penalties in all, 12 to Belleville and 11 to Kingston. Fourteen of the sentences came in the third period, after the winners had gone ahead 7-0 and all were minors except fighting majors to Bob Rawson and Gary Reid near the end of the game.

Gerry Lavalle and Ron Earl were two-goal men for the visitors with Ron Robertson, Jim Scott and Bob Rawson adding singletons. Ed Long and Chuck Gardiner were three aces apiece. Ron Reid two, Lavalle, Robertson, Bob Bruce and Guy White one apiece.

Haskill was as hot as a jumping jack as the teams traded nearly scoring chances without success. Lavalle broke the double goose egg while Adams of Belleville was in the sin bin at 13.25.

Again in the second Haskill rolled out the heat stops just before Lavalle made it 2-0. Earl bounced one through the Belleville goal crease just before Lavalle made it 3-0. Earl bounced one through the Belleville goal crease

Says Junior Plan Could Backfire

'Trial Balloon' Says Campbell

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Frank Boucher has designed a plan he feels will save junior hockey, but Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, suggests it could work in reverse.

Boucher, former NHL star who now is commissioner of the Saskatchewan Junior League, asks for a national junior league comprising six teams in the East and six teams in the West.

He suggests the 12 teams be of the super variety and play off for a special trophy. Other Canadian junior teams would continue to play for the Memorial Cup.

But Campbell, stressing he was speaking for himself not the NHL, said Friday it could result in a situation similar to the problem caused by the Alexander Trophy several years ago.

The Allan Cup has long been recognized as the top prize in senior hockey but the Alexander Trophy was set up for a super senior series which included the now-defunct Quebec League.

SETS UP PRO LEAGUE

Said Campbell: "All it did was to create a new professional league operating under the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association's jurisdiction and downgrade the Allan Cup to the point where it nearly disappeared."

He suggests a junior trophy for a special junior league would affect the Memorial Cup the same way.

"Community sponsors are not interested in a league as a factory for the NHL," said Campbell. "They want to have some pride of their own in a national event such as the Memorial Cup, which means something to the communities."

But not all reaction to Boucher's plan was critical. Al Leader, president of the Western League, said he wants to study it further before making a statement.

Boucher suggests that each of the six NHL teams deposit $50,000 a year in a junior hockey pot and each of the American and Western leagues be assessed $5,000. This would give junior hockey $345,000 a year, $210,000 for the national junior league and the balance divided among 50 others recognized junior teams in the country.

NHL GETS FIRST

Each year professional teams in the three leagues would draft junior players, with the NHL getting first choice.

Leader said he wanted to make sure the WHL got a fair share of top players in the draft.

He feels Boucher's proposal would help provide big cities "with the kind of hockey they deserve" and would also be better for smaller communities which have a tough time operating under current conditions.

Campbell calls Boucher's plan a "trial balloon" and says it may serve as a basis for discussion of problems affecting junior hockey.

He says NHL teams are aware there is a problem of assuring an adequate supply of players to man their teams. But he doesn't know how they would react to spending $50,000 a year on a national junior league.

Jelineks To Quit Pro Figure Skating

BY BRUCE LEVETT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Maria and Otto Jelinek, the brother and sister team from Oakville, Ont., who captured the world pairs figure-skating championship earlier this year, are quitting their fourth competition.

Here as headliners with the touring Ice Capades Show, the youngsters, 21 and 20, said Maria 20—said in an interview they'll get out of skating early next year.

"Then we'll return to the other Ice Capades company in the East," Otto said.

After that finishes in March, they'll freelance with ice carnivals in Boston, Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto for a couple of months."

GOES INTO BUSINESS

Then Otto will go into one of his family's businesses. They own a sporting goods manufacturing and importing concern and a cork-producing firm.

Maria will go abroad—"probably Geneva"—to study languages with an eye to becoming an interpreter.

The Jelineks have skated "more than 150 performances" in the three months since they turned professional and Maria is suffering from a sore back that gets little time to heal in the rugged grind.

"Sometimes I can hardly turn," she said.

"An amateur can pace himself," Maria said, but in professional life there's a "show-must-go-on atmosphere."

In the city where they are appearing here, they will play 19 performances.

Otto finds the professional life "completely different" to amateur skating.

Bill Collins Tops Field In Florida

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Bill Collins conquered a backache Friday and blasted a five-under-par 66 that gave him a three-stroke midway lead in the 72-hole, $30,000 Coral Gables open golf tournament.

Closest on his heels and tied at 136 were Al Kelley, the open's last-round leader who faltered to a 34-37, and Gardner Dickinson who matched Collins' 66 at 35-31.

The three paced 66 pros and 10 amateurs who survived the midway cutoff of above 143 strokes in this final PGA tournament of 1962.

APPEALS BAN

MANILA (AP)—The Basketball Association of the Philippines lodged an appeal Friday against a decision barring the Philippines from the fourth world basketball championship.

The exclusion was ordered by the executive commission of the International Amateur Basketball Federation as a penalty for the Philippines government's refusal to grant entry visas for a Yugoslav team that was to participate in the championship here. The Philippines association also was fined $2,000.

After the Philippine action championship was withdrawn from Manila and re-scheduled for Rio de Janeiro in May, 1963.

Sawchuk Out for Hab Game

DETROIT (AP)—Detroit Red Wings said Friday goalie Terry Sawchuk will miss his third consecutive National Hockey League game Saturday night because of a shoulder injury. Dennis Riggin will sub for him in the game against Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Wings also said all NHL clubs waived Friday on Vic Stasiuk, who is in his 13th year in the NHL. Stasiuk, 33, originally signed to leave for his Lethbridge, Alta., home, Friday but decided to stay on and give further consideration to a Red Wing suggestion that he join their Pittsburgh farm club in the American Hockey League.

Wolverines Hand Queen's 12-2 Setback

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Every man in the Michigan lineup except the goalie scored or assisted on a goal as the Wolverines rolled to a 12-2 hockey victory Friday night over Queen's University of Kingston, Ont.

Michigan held a 5-0 lead at the end of the first period, an 8-1 lead after two periods and picked up four more tallies in the final period.

Lancers Swamp Queen's

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Intercollegiate Senior Basketball League opened on two frosty Friday night and provided a close banger and a game that was no contest.

McMaster University Marauders took an early 16-3 lead over the University of Waterloo Warriors at Waterloo but had to fight to take a 65-53 win. Assumption University Lancers swamped Queen's Golden Gaels 67-43 at Kingston.

McMaster led 37-34 at half-time. Top scorer in the game was Waterloo's Gerry Raphael, who collected seven with 23 points. Top McMaster marksmen included Don McCrea with 14 and Glen and Leo Girard, with 13 each.

In Kingston, the Gaels were on the wrong foot from the beginning and had to rely mainly on foul shots, sinking nine of 10 in the first half.

Giants Meet Cleveland

Packers, Lions On Spot

NEW YORK (AP) — Green Bay Packers, a cinch to win the Western Conference title in the National Football League before their Thanksgiving Day disaster, now must win their last two to be tied unless Detroit stumbles along the way.

A year ago the Packers headed into their annual Calif ornia tilt with the conference crown already clinched. All they had to do was tune up for New York Giants. They lost to San Francisco.

Things are different this time. The Giants already have clinched the Eastern Conference crown and are assured of hosting the western champ Dec. 30 at Yankee Stadium. Green Bay (11-1) must beat San Francisco (6-6) Sunday and if the Lions keep on winning, they also must defeat Los Angeles Dec. 16.

The Packers thumped the Bears 31-13 Oct. 21 at Milwaukee and are favored to do it again.

Detroit (10-2) plays its last home game Sunday against Minnesota (3-9-1), a team that gave the Lions trouble before succumbing 17-6 Nov. 18. The Lions finish Dec. 16 at Chicago.

Both get money and a trip to the Playoff Bowl in Miami, Fla., in the main consideration in the Eastern Conference where the Giants (10-2), having clinched, meet third-place Cleveland (6-5-1) at Yankee Stadium. The Browns knocked off the Giants, one of their two defeats, 17-7 on opening day.

Pittsburgh (7-5) risks second place at Philadelphia (3-8-1) in a game with the revived Eagles.

In the American Football League, one Saturday game finds Buffalo (6-6-1) at New York (5-7), the season's last game for the Bills. On Sunday, among other games, Houston (9-3) will try to nail down the eastern title at home against Oakland (8-5-2).

Oysters, Golf, Hotel Suites

Lions Woo College Cubs

VANCOUVER (CP)—Like a spinster with a few charges left for marriage, British Columbia Lions are ardently courting a pair of southern gentlemen.

Oysters, golf, sightseeing, night life and suites in the best of hotels are their lot.

Baker is a six-foot - three 218-pound end. He was the No. 3 draft choice of Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League and No. 7 choice of Houston Oilers of the American League. He has been selected to play in the Blue-Grey game and the Senior Bowl game.

Tackle Bobby Garvin, six-three and 232 pounds, was the No. 17 choice of Cleveland Browns.

Both say they will return home and await offers from United States pro teams before making any decisions.

"It's kind of like marriage," says Baker. "You have to guess right the first time."

Sunday Hockey Was Costly

GLACE BAY, N.S. (CP)— Team officials, referees and players in this Cape Breton mining community have found that it can be costly to play hockey on Sunday.

Magistrate W. A. D. Gunn levied fines and costs totalling $393.40 Friday on 43 persons involved in a Nov. 18 game after they pleaded guilty to charges of violating the Lord's Day Act.

The game that became a test case was between the Sydney Millionaires and the Glace Bay Miners of the Cape Breton Senior Hockey League.

"We don't think anyone is in this for personal gain but a deliberate breach of the law is not a remedy for anything," Crown Prosecutor Neil Ferguson said.

Donald Gillis, Glace Bay barrister, told the court the miners' hockey club enlisted the Sunday game brought in an additional $500 in revenue compared with the usual receipts from scheduled games.

It Won't Affect Beliveau Play

'Austin Motor, Cadillac Body'

MONTREAL (CP)—Jean Beliveau, Montreal Canadiens giant centre, has been told by doctors that he has an Austin motor in a Cadillac body.

He has also been told that something—Beliveau isn't sure just what—shows on his electro - cardiogram. But he has been told by the same doctors that he has no heart trouble, that he is 100 per cent and that he can go right on playing hockey.

Beliveau, 31, was commenting on a lengthy article in the current issue of La Patrie, Montreal French-language weekly, which referred to his peculiar condition.

"I'm surprised nothing about this has come out before," Beliveau told The Canadian Press. "I had been hoping it wouldn't until after I decide to retire.

"Whatever it is, it has existed since I came to Canadiens nine years ago. The condition showed up then when I underwent an examination and it apparently has been the same since.

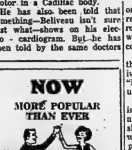
CAN KEEP ON

"I went for a checkup two years ago and was again told there is nothing seriously wrong and that I could keep on playing hockey. I was also told I had no actual heart trouble and that I could pass for insurance.

"I asked: 'Are you sure I am not damaging my health playing hockey?' I was told 'No'."

Three years ago last spring, during the Stanley Cup playoffs at Chicago, Beliveau suffered a severe back injury. After the playoffs he went to the Leahy Clinic in Boston. The story was the same—from the electro-cardiogram to assurance that he was okay in that respect.

"I went back again that fall and I was still told the same thing.



"The only thing I have noticed about my condition is that it seem to tire more quickly than some of the other play ers."

Beliveau, 6 foot three, weighs 205 pounds.

"Beliveau has assurance from the doctors that he can play. He alone has the decision about playing. If the doctors had told him he can't play I certainly would not let him play."

Beliveau in recent seasons finished first once, second twice, third three times and eighth once in the scoring race. He made the first National Hockey League all-star team six times and the second team once.

Bore a 'Charmed Life'

Colorful 'Bobo' Newsom Dies

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP)—Bobo Newsom, who bore a charmed life as baseball's most travelled pitcher, died Friday, less than 20 years after he had played in his last major league game. He was 55.

The big right - hander, was born Jamie Norman Newsom but was known to one and all as Bobo because that was the way he greeted everybody, from the owner of the club to the team's batboy.

Standing six - foot - three and weighing in the neighborhood of 225 to 240 pounds, he talked and acted big—and pitched almost as well as he talked. He pitched for long years who would have him and nearly every team in the majors did.

Until he finally put away his uniform in 1953, he pitched for 18 clubs, half of them in the big leagues. In 25 years, he changed uniforms 26 times. He was with Washington Senators on four different occasions, St. Louis Browns three times, and Brooklyn Dodgers and Philadelphia Athletics twice each.

IN BOTH LEAGUES

He also played for both New York Giants and Yankees as well as Boston and Detroit in the American League and the Chicago Cubs in the National.

Bobo, pitching for some of baseball's poorest teams as well as some of the best, managed to record 211 triumphs in the big leagues but he also lost 222. Four of his wins, 10-9 and 200 in both victories and defeats.

His best season was in 1940 when he helped pitch the Tigers to the American League pennant. He won 21 games and lost only five.

Bobo created almost as many headlines off the field as on it. Except for Ty Cobb, he probably was the only player ever to be the cause of a walkout by his teammates. That happened in 1943, when as a member of the Dodgers, he was fined and suspended by manager Leo Durocher. The rest of the Dodger players threatened to go on strike unless Newsom was reinstated and the fine rescinded. Durocher was granted the request and the Dodgers proceeded to win the next game 22-3.

While pitching for Washington against the Yankees, Bobo was knocked unconscious when hit by a line drive through the box. Regaining consciousness, Bobo insisted on continuing and proceeded to blank Lefty Gomez and the Yankees 1-0.

On Sept. 18, 1934, wearing the uniform of the Browns, Newsom hurled a no-hit, no-run battle against Boston. The Red Sox beat him in the 10th 2-1.

Who else but Bobo would this happen but to Bobo?

HAS NO PREFERENCE

NEW YORK (AP) — Jerry Stovall of Louisiana State, the most sought-after running back in college football, said Friday he has no preference for either of the rival pro football leagues. Stovall, the 194-pound All-American halfback who runs with both speed and power, was the No. 1 draft pick of St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League and the New York Titans of the American Football League.

No Mustard Buns With These Dogs

VANCOUVER (CP) Guard dogs will protect the referees Sunday when North Shore United and Columbus take the field to replay a Pacific Coast Soccer League game that was called off last week.

The dogs were ordered by League President Bill Findlater after the British Columbia Referees' Association demanded protection at all future Columbus games. Any fan invading the playing field during a match will be prosecuted.

The stern measures were adopted after referee Dan Kulai was attacked by two fans as he headed for the dressing-room last Sunday after calling the match shortly before half time.

Western Hockey

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Portland Buckaroos won the hockey game 6-4 but goaltender Jim McLeod of San Francisco Seals got the blames.

Miss Novak was among the 6,200 fans who attended the contest in San Francisco's Cow Palace.

In a second Western Hockey League game, Edmonton Flyers played at home, scored their second victory in 17 starts, defeating Seattle Totems 6-2 before 2,086 fans.

Athletics Nip Maroons

WOODSTOCK (CP) — The Woodstock Athletics outlasted the Chatham Maroons to claim a 6-5 overtime victory in a Senior A OHA game played here before 600 howling fans.

The game which was lightning fast featuring a wide open style of play, saw the Maroons force the game into overtime when defenceman Don McGregor slapped in the tying marker with just one second of regulation time showing on the clock.

Jerry Theberge provided the real sparkplug in the Athletics' drive to victory, scoring his second goal of the night at 5:29 of the overtime period. Andy Gauthier, Butch Graham, Bryle Klinck and Dennis Lawrence tallied the winners' other goals.

Goalie Al Bennet of the Maroons was yanked for the second time in the game in favor of a skater forward with the stunt almost backfiring on two occasions.

The Sarnia at Galt game was postponed.

Blues Put Paille On Block

NEW YORK (CP)—New York Rangers have put minor league goalie Marcel Paille on the trading block, hoping to obtain a centre for him from another NHL club.

Rangers manager Muzz Patrick of the Rangers, who describes Paille as big - league material, says he has made concrete offers to Toronto, Boston and Chicago for Paille but that none have yet responded.

Paille, who plays with Providence Reds of the American League, was brought up by the Rangers after Gump Worsley was put out of action temporarily with a shoulder injury. Paille was in the nets when Rangers tied to a 3-3 tie with Detroit Sunday.

Sports Snapshots

By KEN CLARK

WINNIPEG (CP)—A Winnipeg department store executive has organized a super curling league where the best play the best as part of a campaign to restore Manitoba supremacy in the sport.

George Glazier, a curling veteran at 51, hopes the high-calibre competition in the rink inter-club league will soon produce a Canadian champion.

The chances lack of stiff competition for Manitoba's decline as a national curling power and its displacement by Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Manitoba last won the Canadian championship in 1956 when three-time winner Bill Walsh of Winnipeg turned the trick. Up to that time the province had dominated Canadian curling, winning the title 15 times, far more than any other province.

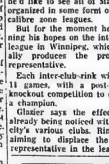
Glazier, assistant manager of his store's men's wear department, got the inter-club league going Nov. 3. Last summer he persuaded 22 of the 26 Greater Winnipeg clubs to participate. Each club enters its two best rinks of the 11-rink schedule. If a rink falters in the heavy going, it is replaced by an other.

"The better the competition, the better you become," he says. "I don't believe this coming year will have any earth-shattering results but I do believe it will have some effect." Glazier, the league chairman, says the need is for a super-rink. Over-all quality of Manitoba curling is as good, for example, as Saskatchewan, he says, but that province has a super-rink led by Ernie Richardson of Regina, winner of the Canadian title three of the last four years.

Glazier, the Deer Lodge club champion, got the idea for the inter-club league from a similar setup among Winnipeg golf clubs.

Eventually he hopes to invite rink champions from outside the province to play exhibitions with the Winnipeg elite. And he'd like to see a Manitoba organized in some form of high-calibre zone leagues.

Each inter-club rink will play 11 games, with a post-season knockout competition to declare a champion.



Glazier says the effects are already being noticed within the city's various clubs. Rinks are aiming to displace the club's representative in the league.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Both Buddy and I have been close to the top many times, but we never quite made it. Now we're up there, and I can assure you it feels mighty good."

This was Irene Ryan talking. She and Buddy Ebsen are stars of The Beverly Hillbillies, the unexpected hit of the 1962-63 television season. In a mere five weeks on the air, it shot to the top of the audience ratings. It even defeated Bob Hope in the surveys. No show had been able to do that to a Hope special before.

If Irene wears a slight glow, it's understandable. She has been in show business since she was 5—we won't ask how long that has been—and has always exacted a good living without achieving stardom.

Granny Clampett, the pipe-smoking rustic, has changed that.

GOT AUTOGRAPHS

"When the kids came to my house on Hallowe'en, they didn't ask for nuts; they wanted my autograph," said Irene. "This is something entirely new to me."

The actress started early in vaudeville, later had a successful husband-wife act with husband, Tim Ryan. When vaudeville broke up, they moved into radio with their show, Tim and Irene. When Tim and Irene broke up, she continued as a single, playing in movies, night clubs, legit and radio, notably a two-year stretch as foil for the above-mentioned Hope.

The Beverly Hillbillies made it to the top in the face of some of the most brutal reviews in television history. Irene chuckles over them. "One critic said we should all have signs on our backs saying 'we are comics.'"

RECALLS WITCH HUNT

AT THE BELLE — James Stewart and Grace Kelly provide the romantic interest in Alfred Hitchcock's suspense thriller, "Rear Window", playing today, Monday and Tuesday at the Belle Theatre. Photographed in color by Technicolor, the thrill-filled film co-stars Thelma Ritter and Wendell Corey with Raymond Burr of TV Perry Mason fame.

Astrological Forecast

For December 9
By SYDNEY OMARR

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Fine for adjusting sense of value. Be sure you are on right track. Taking time to attend place of worship could prove of immense benefit. Be quiet within. Strive for domestic harmony.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Read, test, evaluate ideas. Be especially careful in dealing with public. Your "image" could be tarnished by careless comment. Be precise. Realize that some persons want to misunderstand.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Great joy comes from service today. You gain by doing things for friends, family members. You make excellent guest at social affairs — because you glow with appreciation, good will.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Pay attention to "inner needs." Gain satisfaction by obtaining answers to personal questions. Courage of convictions needed. Friends help. You gain schooling.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): Tendency to "speed" should be overcome. Try to relax. Refuse to be irritated by foolish comments. Accept constructive criticism and discard whining complaints.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Follow through on "good intentions." Set example for younger persons. Realize you eventually receive what you "give." Today fine for creative endeavors, hobbies, reading, writing and visiting.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take time to go over budget matters. Check gift list, holiday cards. Plan for future. Later, very good for social gathering. Confirm facts, especially in connection with "story" related by friend.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Perceive over-all picture. Otherwise you could go "off track." Tendency is to see persons, situations as you wish they could exist. Strive for reality. Realize there is power in truth.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Much in your favor if you accept facts. All may not be pleasant. But you have opportunity to help. Be generous. Give others benefit of doubt. The more lenient you are, the more you gain.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Good lunar aspect today points to fulfillment, personal satisfaction. But first make sure home is in order. Handle details personally. Avoid temptation to overextend yourself.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 29) The more you "press," the less you are likely to achieve. A relaxed attitude can accomplish wonders, especially in dealings with members of opposite sex. Be flexible!

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Intrigue may highlight day. Adhere to principles. Friend may try to talk you into journey. Be perfectly sure that you really want to go. Otherwise, say No.

If today is your birthday . . . you have special talent for arousing caring for those who are handicapped. Study your sees you also helping yourself.

For December 10

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): You could encounter envy among associates today. This is opportunity to find out who is "true friend." Maintain philosophical attitude. Be diplomatic. But do not back down.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Take loved one into confidence Share desires, ambitions, hobbies. Good for collecting facts, ideas for future. Think of family, security. Read Capricorn message.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Cycle up. Today you can flash Gemini personality to excellent advantage. Be ready for surprises, changes, requests from unusual sources. Show you are strong, but compassionate.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Sense of honor, duty, responsibility moves to forefront. Be true to principles. Avoid fear of economic consequences. Much in your favor if you act on convictions. A good day!

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): Good lunar aspect; today stresses opportunities for making new friends. Treat others as you might wish to be treated. Indications are that past knowledge proves valuable.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Day of surprises. You are inspired by realization that conditions can improve. Move with confidence. Be creative, original, independent. Contribute to community welfare.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Rely upon intuitive intellect. You are able to perceive true meanings regarding situations and individuals. Don't take second - hand reports literally. Check personally.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Opportunity to spread influence quite apparent. You must make clear judgments. Decide where you want to go, how much you want to spend. Remember, you never receive something for nothing.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Attention to details! Slow pace. Conserve strength. Realize limitations. But know that you are only gaining "second wind." Best to remain close to home tonight.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Good day for paying special attention to business, hobbies. Fine for displaying affection. Don't make flat demands. Be willing to share. Win your way instead of forcing issues. Read Taurus message.

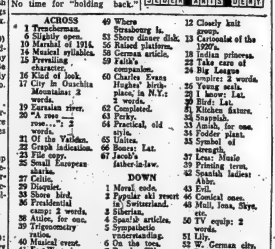
Give of yourself. Lunar emphasis on affairs of heart. Good day for business or profession. What starts out as dreary day ends excitingly.



Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Like Gemini, be flexible. There are many past duties which can no longer be put off. Utilize modern methods. Throw tradition out of window if it causes grief. Be up-to-date.

If today is your birthday . . . you are independent, intense in beliefs, but also sympathetic to needs of friends, family members.

• • •

CAMPBELLFORD

F.M. Rutherford Loses Position As Mayor

CAMPBELLFORD — Mayor F. M. Rutherford lost a decisive race to Deputy-Reeve Morley W. Tanner here on Monday when the municipal result was evident from the first poll.

The vote was not heavy with exactly the same number voting for mayor as last year, 1605.

Another nomination meeting to fill the two vacant positions on Council will be held on December 12th and if more than the necessary two qualify, the election will be held the following Wednesday, December 19th.

55 Legionaires Attend District Council Meet

DESERONTO — The council of District F of the Royal Canadian Legion met at Deseronto on Sunday, December 2nd at the Legion Hall on Main St. District Commissioner, Comrade Al Burgess of Pickering was in charge of the meeting which had representatives from 33 branches. There were about 55 Legionaires present from the four zones of District "F" which extends from Oshawa on the west to Gananoque on the East and from Coe Hill on the north to Wellington on the south.

Following the business session the Ladies Auxiliary of Deseronto Branch served dinner to the group.

BATAWA

H-S Assoc. Views Ski Club Films

BATAWA — Batawa Home and School Association held their December meeting last Monday evening in Batawa Public School.

Mrs. Harvey Ackerman, president, was in charge of the meeting. Guests and new members were welcomed.

Prior to this meeting "Open House" was held in the school and Mrs. Ackerman thanked the teaching staff for their kind co-operation.

The Home and School Association have made plans for a dance to be held on January 10th in the Batawa Recreation Centre.

Miss Rhonda Geldard gave a piano solo. The UNICEF report was given.

Mrs. Ron Mitts introduced the executive members of the Batawa Ski Club, who presented an excellent program on skiing. Films were shown, followed by a discussion period.

AT WINDSOR CASTLE—The Queen, shown with Prince Philip and children on the grounds of Windsor Castle, marked the 10th anniversary of her accession this year. It was a quiet year for Her Majesty, who travelled abroad only once—to Holland. Philip, however, visited South America, Canada and Australia. This photo was made by Archie Parker. Princess Alex's Surprise Engagement Was Probably Big Royal Story of 1962

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — Princess Alexandra's surprise engagement to Hon. Angus Ogilvy, 34, a London company director and second son of the Earl of Airlie, was the big royal story of 1962. Westminster Abbey may be the setting for the wedding next year.

The announcement from Kensington Palace late in November surprised even close friends of the Kent family who had overlooked the dark-haired Scot in speculation upon whom Alexandra might marry.

Earlier her name had been linked with a couple of European princes, or perhaps the Irish peer Lord O'Neill. But the Duchess of Kent's daughter, who will be 26 on Christmas Day, kept them all guessing.

Alexandra has known Ogilvy for eight years, and the couple became engaged during a week-end shoot at the Airlies' Highland estate near Kirriemuir six weeks before the official announcement.

This romance of the popular "Princess Alex" gave sparkle to a royal year that was perhaps somewhat lacking in glitter and pomp.

QUEEN'S CALM YEAR

With two royal tours done in 1961, and the coming state visit to Australia and New Zealand, it was inevitable that the Queen would spend a quiet 1962—the year that saw the 10th anniversary of her accession on Feb. 6.

She ventured abroad only once, to Holland in May for the silver wedding of Queen Juliana and Prince Bernhard—an occasion that brought the dwindling band of Europe's royalty together for a two-day gathering at Amsterdam.

In May she attended the consegration of the spectacular new Coventry Cathedral, risen like a pink sandstone phoenix from the ashes of the blitz at a cost of nearly £1,500,000.

But if the Queen had a stay-at-home year, her consort made up for it.

In February and March Prince Philip flew around South America, piloting his own plane much of the way, in a breezily informal tour.

May saw him in Canada for the second Commonwealth Study Conference, a pet project. A crowded 25-day itinerary took him across the country from Montreal to Vancouver, with time out for a visit with former governor-general Vincent Massey and a flip across the border to the World's Fair in Seattle.

In November he flew to Perth, Australia, for the opening of the Empire Games. A brief visit in mid-December to the RCAF station at Soellingen, West Germany was the windup to one of the energetic Duke's busiest years.

Philip's hand was also believed to be behind the Queen's decision to shake up her royal household by calling in work study experts to improve the economy and efficiency of palace routine. The plan is scheduled for early in the new year. In 1961 the cost of running Britain's royal palaces was nearly £700,000.

The start of 1962 saw another royal innovation when Princess Margaret's husband, the Earl of Snowdon, took a job with the Sunday Times, owned by Canadian publisher Roy Thomson.

Despite a few sour comments that had appeared in the press about the Snowdons leading a life of leisure, the appointment provoked some irritation in Fleet Street. The Observer, chief rival to Thomson's Sunday Times, led the attack by arguing that a member of the family shouldn't get involved in the newspaper jungle with its sharp political undergrowth.

The former society photographer went to work at Thomson House Feb. 1 as "artistic adviser" to the Sunday Times color supplement. Later in the year there were complaints from the National Union of Journalists that Snowdon was getting some preferential treatment as a press photographer.

Princess Margaret's first big royal assignment since her 1960 marriage came in August when she represented the Queen at the Jamaica independence celebrations. Later that month the Princess Royal performed the same task at the independence of Trinidad and Tobago.

ROYAL BABY BORN

The Queen Mother visited Montreal briefly in June to attend the centenary celebrations of the Black Watch of Canada. She is colonel-in-chief of the regiment.

A baby son was born June 26 to the young Duke and Duchess of Kent, becoming 10th in line to the throne. Named George Philip Nicholas, the baby was given his father's subsidiary title of Earl of St. Andrew's.

So far the only big royal event arranged for 1963 is a 12-day tour of New Zealand starting Feb. 6 followed by a six-week state-by-state trip around Australia.

There's a possibility that the Australian state now known simply as the Northern Territory may be renamed Elizabeth in honor of the visit. Citizens of Darwin, the state capital feel it would improve the standing of their Cinderella state which still is largely undeveloped desert.

Garden Notes

Selecting Gardeners' Gifts

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

Anyone who works with plants, either the house plant or garden variety will appreciate a gift that helps him with his hobby.

It can be a new plant, or a gift certificate that will enable him to select, a potted plant, a shrub, bulbs or garden equipment. He might like a trellis, a garden seat, or tools. Nurseries and garden centres offer gift certificates from one dollar up.

If you want to select the gift, do a bit of listening, or observing. See what is lacking, out of date, or the worse for wear and take it from there.

When bulbs are the favurite source of plants widen his collection by selecting lily bulbs to bloom outdoors next spring or indoors this winter. Nurserymen still have on hand many bulbs to be planted as late as December or they may be ordered for spring delivery.

In Many Forms

Fertilizers come in 100 pound bags down to 25 cent pkg. They take many forms, pellets, powders and liquid. There is one for growing plants in water called hyponics. Any of these will give the favorite plants a boost.

Easy cutting tools for pruning such as rolecut secateurs or pruning saws will give years of satisfaction.

For the gardener who has evergreens, or one who does transplanting buy, willprut. It prevents winter burn in evergreens and keeps plants from wilting while being moved, and protects them until new roots function.

Stainless steel garden tools from England are long lasting and food looking. They come in sets of two trowels and one fork or separate pieces. A graduated trowel, marked in inches up to one foot, takes the guess work out of planting bulbs.

Green thumb garden gloves are vinyl treated and keep the hands safe from soil, staining, scratches and bruising.

Metal labels are light weight non corrosive alloy and anodized for regular or indelible pencil, waterproof. Life-time plant markers of white plastic come in several forms and sizes from tags to stake types. For flower arranger

For the flower arranger pair of Japanese scissors, flower bowls, glass or metal frogs, floral clay, wire, cutters, oasis for holding flowers, plant shine, or floralife to prolong the life of cut flowers.

The passive observer will enjoy a bird feeding station and a supply of bird food. The winter months will be brightened by feathered visitors. Feeders may be quite simple from a short log bored with holes to fill with suet and seeds to glassed models with various compartments for different kinds of seeds, to suit different kinds of birds. A source of unfrozen water is a great attraction to birds in the winter.

The garden enthusiast will welcome anything from a new light weight wheelbarrow, a portable cold frame, or a garden light down to a two ounce package of plant pills.

Nehru Rejects Chinese Terms For Settlement

Wants Issue Referred To International Court

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Nehru today rejected Communist China's terms for settlement of the India - China border war but offered to refer the border dispute to the International Court of Justice if China withdraws from Indian territory.

Nehru told Parliament India continues to demand that the Chinese withdraw to the positions held Sept. 8. China has called this "utterly unacceptable."

Nehru warned: "This war may drag on for years or more but I feel confident we shall win."

He called on the Indian people for "determination to refuse to bow down to the imperialist tactics of China whatever happens." He said the survival of Indian freedom is at stake.

TALKS TO NEUTRALS

Nehru also had words for the Commonwealth prime ministers meeting in Ceylon in 'a search of a solution to the India-China conflict. He said they will remember there can be no compromise with expanding militarism," he said.

Nehru's rejection of the Chinese terms appeared a strong possibility of renewed fighting.

Nehru was cheered when he said India will not accept peace on the conclusion the words of the Chinese government cannot be relied upon."

The prime minister said the last five years have shown that the Chinese change their interpretation of the border with circumstances.

"They accept the line most advantageous to them," he said.

Parliament members here been amazing duplicity and cynicism in what the Chinese have said. The whole thing is so insufferably and outrageously improper and wrong."

PEACE-OUT TALKS

In Colombo, meanwhile, Ghana proposed to the six-nation conference that India and Red China negotiate an "area of disengagement" for ceasefire purposes and then work out a border settlement. The Ghana delegate said if the two countries could not agree, the six non-aligned countries should arrange the disengagement and that these recommendations be a border settlement.

The six nations are the United Arab Republic, Ghana, Indonesia, Cambodia, Burma and Ceylon.

"The aggression must be undone and the status quo restored," Ghana said. "At present there is no meeting ground between us."

Seria, Brunei, — Airport Seized By Highlanders

Planes Land in Fields, Surprising Rebel Force

CP from Reuters-AP

BRUNEI TOWN, Brunei — About 200 British troops today recaptured the airstrip at the rebel-held oil town of Seria and were advancing to recapture and secure the town.

Brig. J. B. A. Glennie, commander of the British force in the British protected sultanate of Brunei said the men had been reinforced by more troops and others would follow.

Glennie said the over-all military situation in Brunei was "looking very much better now."

He said raids have been made on the headquarters of the outlawed rebel Rayaat party and on the homes of party members and several arrests were made.

"We have taken a good deal of incriminating evidence," Glennie said.

Some 200 rebel prisoners were penned in a concrete tennis court opposite the police government buildings here. Many of them were in uniform.

CASUALTIES LIGHT

(A British army spokesman in Singapore said that latest reports state British forces have suffered a total of 30 casualties —one Gurkha killed, six seriously wounded, and 13 others wounded).

Four troop-carrying aircraft landed on a level stretch of ground on one side of Seria while the attention of the rebels was on the airstrip.

He said there were no reports of fighting at the airport or on the outskirts of Seria as the troops—the Queen's Own Highlanders—advanced.

Glennie said the British navy vessels were on their way to Brunei and were expected shortly.

He said, Kuala Belait, near Seria was apparently still in rebel hands and Brunei Town is fall, about 15 miles out, was also rebel-held. He said it would be dealt with later.

A British army spokesman in Singapore said the Highlanders had landed up the airport at Penaga police station in Seria. Further reinforcements of Highlanders had landed at another airstrip. More than 1,000 British troops have arrived from Singapore.

An air force spokesman in Singapore said 150 Malayan police had been flown to Brunei to reinforce British security forces there.

He said the British high commissioner to Brunei, Sir Dennis White, has left Singapore by air for Brunei.

Gurkhas and the Queen's Own Highlanders landed by helicopter the oil-rich little sultanate on the northern coast of Borneo as

Recover Bodies Of 7 Miners, Sight 7 More

CARMICHAELS, Pa. (AP)— Rescue workers reported today the sighting of seven more bodies in the mine explosion which trapped 37 men underground. Seven bodies were recovered Sunday — leaving 23 miners unaccounted for.

They were sighted in an area . . . still in advance of a fresh air base located 1,758 feet from where a tremendous blast occurred Thursday at U.S. Steel Corporation's Robena No. 2 mine.

Previously, the highest number of bodies located at one time was two. This indicated, officials said, that rescuers were penetrating into an area where most of the trapped miners were working some 1,950 feet underground at the face of the mine.

U.S. Steel spokesman said the mine's ventilation system in the area where the latest bodies were sighted is "completely disrupted."

He added that repairs to the ventilating system will take considerable time, and it will be a while "before it is possible to venture in the airstrip."

Rescue workers recovered six bodies Sunday and one on Saturday from the small coal mine located some 50 miles southwest of Pittsburgh.

The latest grim discovery bore out a prediction by Lewis Evans, state secretary of mines, that "there is a good possibility we may reach more men within the next 1,000 feet."

Rev. Andrew Horvath of Point Marion, a Roman Catholic priest who spent last rites of his church to some of the victims in a makeshift morgue in rescue headquarters, said some of the bodies were badly mangled.

John Moore, an industrial hygiene management official, said "a gas ignition (explosion) had killed them."

James Lord, assistant superintendent, said rescue work in ventilating shafts "hope that there may be some men alive even though our hope may be only one per cent."

Cabinet Will Not Interfere With Sentences

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal cabinet will not interfere with the death sentences of two men scheduled to be hanged in Toronto at midnight tonight for capital murder, the justice department announced today.

A statement issued by Justice Minister Fleming's office said the cabinet will not interfere with death sentences imposed upon Arthur Lucas, 54, and Ronald Turpin, 29.

It noted that both the accused had appealed to the Ontario Court of Appeal and the Supreme Court of Canada.

"These appeals were dismissed. There was no recommendation of mercy by the jury in either case."

Turpin was convicted of capital murder in the shooting of Const. Frederick Nash of Toronto last February. Lucas, a retired resident, was convicted of capital murder in the Toronto slaying of Frederick Carter, an undercover agent for the Detroit Bureau of Narcotics.

Jury Member Approached Says Free Press

DETROIT (AP)—An approach to a jury member led to last Thursday's mysterious hearing in Teamster President James Hoffa's conspiracy-bribery jury trial at Nashville, Tenn., the Detroit Free Press says.

In a copyrighted article, The Free Press says the contact was reported to government officials but that the juror's statement declined comment.

The Free Press says that following the report, details of which are still secret, government officials stopped the trial and asked Federal Judge William E. Miller to investigate.

The investigation was closeted last Thursday of everyone except Hoffa, a stenographer and the lawyers for both sides.

The article said Judge Miller then questioned witnesses, including at least four FBI agents and two officials of Nashville Teamster Local 327, before recessing the seven-week trial until Monday. He ordered the jury locked up for the weekend.

The Free Press says no information was available as to who made the alleged approach or how or why it was made.

Hoffa is accused of conspiring to violate the Taft-Hartley Act by using influence to set up a profitable trucking business.

At Nashville, Judge Miller, asked about the Free Press report, said he could not discuss any aspect of the trial.

Explosives-Laden Ohio Barge Drifts Cross Erie to Canadian Side

CLEVELAND (AP) — The coast guard called off its search and rescue today for a barge loaded with explosives that has run aground on the Canadian side of Lake Erie.

The 150-by-30 foot barge broke loose from its moorings at Ashtabula, Ohio, Saturday. The coast guard then began a search using the cutter Ojibway. The barge, owned by Merritt-Chapman and Scott Corporation, is loaded with 2,000 pounds of explosives.

But a coast guard spokesman said the explosives contained no detonating devices and were considered to be of an insensitive nature. There were no crew members reported aboard the barge.

The barge is high and dry, the coast guard reported. "She is broadside to the beach along the breaker line in shallow water. There are eight to 12-foot seas in the area and thus the Ojibway is being sent to Buffalo."

When the weather subsides, the coast guard expects the barge owners to recover the cargo and free the craft, which is located seven miles west of Long Point, Ont. That is 40 miles north of Erie, Pa.

THREE SAINTS CANONIZED BY POPE JOHN

Pontiff Looking Well at Service

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope John, full of vigor and looking his best since becoming seriously ill, proclaimed three new saints of the Roman Catholic Church Sunday.

His voice was strong as he read the proclamation elevating three 19th-century priests to the sainthood: Pierre Julien Eymard, a Frenchman, and Antonio Maria Zaccel and Francesco Da Camporosso, Italians.

The Pope, on doctors' advice, took part in only half the three-hour ritual. But those 80 minutes represented the longest time he has been at any public function since his Stat birthday, three weeks ago Sunday. A stomach ailment, possibly an ulcer, and anemia forced him to bed Nov. 27.

As usual at canonizations, the Pope was carried into the basilica on his portable throne. But at the altar he moved vigorously through the phases of the ceremony, sitting at times, chanting prayers, standing for long periods, and kneeling once.

The Pope sat on a throne covered with white silk. He wore gold-brocaded cape and mitre. In two long rows flanking the aisle before him were 49 cardinals. Ambassadors in full dress sat behind them. A thousand bishops dotted the throng.

The crowd was so large that thousands milled outside in the square, because the doors had to be locked 20 minutes before the ceremony began.

Pope John read documents describing the lives and Christian virtues of the three saints before proclaiming them and extending his blessings. He spoke first in Latin, then in Italian and French.

The new saints are:

Six Killed In Algeria

ALGIERS (AP)—Five Frenchmen and an Algerian were killed in three violent incidents in Orleansville Saturday, resulting in a vigorous diplomatic protest by Premier Ben Bella to Premier Ahmed Ben Bella's government.

The French embassy said in a statement that the dead Moslem was a uniformed soldier of Wilaya (military zone) 4, which has not yet been brought under control of the Algerian government's official army. It said the Moslem was shot by a French gendarmerie sentry while trying to penetrate into a military camp in the predawn darkness.

The second incident occurred about noon when a band of Algerian soldiers killed three French gendarmes assigned to guard a bus load of French school children. Two children were wounded.

Common Market Jockeying May Be in Final Stretch

BRUSSELS (Reuters)—Britain and the six European Common Market countries today headed into three days of ministerial level talks in what may be the start of the final two or three-month stretch of negotiations on the British membership application.

Ministers from the Market nations met alone this morning before Britain's chief negotiator, Deputy Premier Edward Heath, was to join them this afternoon.

Officials on both sides have agreed the moment has come for major political decisions.

Senior officials and technical experts have covered most of the details of Britain's membership agreement and cannot make much more progress until the ministers have resolved some basic problems.

The Six—despite a certain reluctance on the part of France to negotiate the British negotiations as the priority item on the market's calendar—appear to have realized this and agreed last week on a program of more intensive ministerial negotiations in January.

Heath will be asked to approve this schedule, wh Hastig,ocic's meetings Heath and the Market representatives will try above all to find a solution to the problem of Britain's guarantees to British farmers.

The Six want Britain to abolish its system of subsidies for farmers immediately when it joins the Market, while Britain wants to phase the program out over a period of at least seven years.

'Sale and Supply' of Arms To Portugal UN Issue

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—

Thirty-one countries seek support for a proposal that the United Nations General Assembly ask all member countries to prevent the "sale and supply" of arms to Portugal.

Jamaica and 30 Afro-Asian co-sponsors said Sunday in a resolution following a week-long debate on the situation in Portugal's Angola colony that Lisbon is repressing the nationalist movement in its African territories with military and other equipment supplied by "some of its allies."

The measure says that if Lisbon refuses to negotiate independence for Angola and Mozambique the Security Council should apply sanctions.

During the debate Afro-Asian spokesmen concentrated their fiercest fire on NATO as well as Portugal although the United States and Britain denied that their military aid to Lisbon was used in Portugal's colonies.

Soviet-bloc delegates charged flatly that Portugal is using military aid to the NATO allies to battle rebel fighters in its big Angolan possession which has a population of some 4,000,000.

The African and Asian delegations were reported to have turned down a proposed U.S. resolution to send a UN representative on a fact-finding mission to Angola and Mozambique.

An African delegate said they did so because the United States had not produced an acceptable candidate for the job and because they were not satisfied with mere fact finding. They want a good offices or mediation mission to work toward independence for the two African countries.

Winding up the week-long debate, Portugal's Ambassador Vasco Vieira Garin reiterated the charge that "foreign-supported terrorism" was solely responsible for the fighting that broke out in Angola in March last year. Further violence was threatened from rebel training bases in other African countries.

There was no crisis within Angola, Garin declared; adding that if outside forces left the territory alone there would be no need for Portugal to maintain military units there.

UN Blames Katanga War On Tshombe

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo (AP)—The United Nations today charged responsibility for fighting in North Katanga squarely to President Moise Tshombe of Katanga province.

"All fighting and destruction is a result of Katangan secession and therefore you may say that Tshombe is responsible by definition, a UN spokesman said reporters.

He was commenting on a protest letter to Tshombe from Robert Gardiner, head of UN operations in the Congo, after spoils of the Katangan leaders "secessionist policy of civil war.

The letter dated Dec. 8, said destruction of a bridge over the Lualaba River during the retreat from Kamina by Katanga town of Kongolo was an "unwarrantable act of vandalism. Kongolo was recaptured by Central Congolese troops last week, after being under the UN flag-long road and rail bridge were blown into the river.

Gardiner said it will take six months to repair the bridge, the cost will be $1,000,000, and "The Congo has again to suffer from acts done by mercenaries who give their service to encourage a secessionist policy. —

Socred Chiefs Address Rally

QUEBEC (CP)—The two top men of the Social Credit party, Leader Robert Thompson and his deputy, Real Caouette, appeared together at a weekend meeting in the Social Credit stronghold.

The meeting was held at suburban Charlesbourg in the constituency of Quebec-Montmorency where Dr. Guy Marcoux, the party whip, rolled up a 28,000-vote majority in last June's federal elections. More than 300 packed a school basement to hear the speakers.

CHILLY WEATHER EXPECTED FOR P.E.I. ELECTION

The Potato Is Main Issue

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — The type of weather that hampered Prince Edward Island farmers during the last growing season was expected today as islanders voted in what many considered a farmers' election.

The Progressive Conservative government of Premier Walter Shaw will be trying for its second consecutive term in this province of 105,000. The Liberals, ousted by the Conservatives in 1959 after 34 years in office, will provide the only opposition with all 30 legislature seats straight two-party fight.

Rain started Sunday and wind and rain were expected today. Voting hours were from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Premier Shaw, who will be 73 in 10 days and is Canada's oldest premier, called the election a month ago, seeking voters' support to abolish individual hospital insurance premiums and replace them with money from the provincial treasury.

WOULD DO SAME

Liberal Leader Alex Matheson, a former premier, immediately said this was no issue as a Liberal government would do the same thing.

The Liberals claimed the provincial finances were in a mess and the government denied this.

Perhaps the main issue—and the one leading to the campaign being dubbed the farmers election—was the potato. This vegetable is the biggest cash crop in the island's big farm industry.

The Liberals promised a potato floor price with the government countering that such a plan would ruin the potato industry.

Mr. Robarts said he ordered the earlier closing to assure that "all persons on licensed premises 'and the general public as well to spend Christmas Eve with their families.

Nova Scotia Senator Tells How He Got Agreement on Trade Meet

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Senator Frederick Murray Blois, credited with scoring something of a diplomatic coup for Canada at the United Nations, has this bit of advice:

The 69-year-old Senator from Nova Scotia was the key negotiator of a compromise that enabled the 17th United Nations Conference on Trade and Development to end on a happy note.

A plain-spoken man of business and friendly personality, Blois held some 50 private meetings with small groups, large and general committees during winning agreement on the timing of the conference.

Underdeveloped countries of Africa, Asia and Latin America wanted a conference by next September at the latest because, for one thing, they fear the European Common Market and Britain's possible entry into it.

The United States, Britain, France and some other trading nations stressed the need of adequate preparation and threat-

Giants, Celtics Win Games

The Warriors beat the Giants by a 14-13 squeaker in the opening game of a doubleheader in the YMCA Senior Basketball League held in the "Y" gym Saturday afternoon. The second tilt saw the Celtics take the Globetrotters by a 17-14 score.

The second game saw the Celtics' Bob Watson defeat the Globetrotters with a 17-point scoring spree which accounted for all his team's points. Top scorer for the Globetrotters was Dave McLean with six points.

Lineups:

FIRST GAME

Warriors — D. Beresford (6), Hoard (4), Maybee (3), McMaster, Acton, Loynes (3), Bellstedt.

Giants — Hayman (7), Behrne (2), Lovett (4), Hall, R. McLean, Gibbons.

SECOND GAME

Celtics — Watson (17), Pugh, Slater, Ward, Law, Hume, Hisser, Narasewic.

Globetrotters — D. McLean (6), D. Beresford, Phillips (4), Buchanan (4), Allore, Search, Buchan.

DANCE FLOOR COLLAPSES

FOLIGNO, Italy (Reuters)— Several dozen people were in the hospital here with broken bones—after a twist party that literally brought the house down.

They were dancing the twist at a dance hall when the centre of the dance floor gave way and about 60 dancers fell into poultry shop on the ground floor below.

Youth Admits Robbery at Booth TV Store

A Belleville youth, who had his request for a penitentiary term turned down by the court last week, may yet have his verbal petition granted.

Robert Bennett, sentenced to 21 months by magistrate T. Y. Wills for two break-ins last Thursday, this morning pleaded guilty to the May 26 safe robbery of Booth Radio and TV on Belleville's Front Street.

Last week the magistrate refused to increase his sentence on the two earlier charges to the penitentiary term of two years.

After hearing evidence on the safecracking charge this morning, the magistrate told Bennett: "Well, I guess you will get your wish. That's what you wanted isn't it?"

"That's right sir", replied Bennett.

"Well, I will think about it between now and tomorrow morning", said the magistrate, remanding Bennett for sentence.

Inspector J. B. McLauchlan told the court Bennett was one of four men who went to the store. Bennett and Archibald Murray, already serving a year for the same charge, broke into the premises through a skylight and shot off the rear-door lock with shells taken from a display case.

Then, said the inspector, "assisted by two other persons" the two dragged the safe into an automobile and drove off to Trenton on occasion of Thurlow Township.

It contained over $1,000 in cash, property bonds and cheques and Canada Cement Company stocks.

They deposited the safe in a field, battered it open and divided it (the loot) among four persons".

CHEQUES BURNED

The cheques and stock certificates were later burned.

Before returning Bennett in custody this morning the magistrate cleared up one detail outstanding from the earlier charges on which Bennett was sentenced — break-ins at Lafferty Pool Room and C. L. Hyde and Son's store.

Magistrate Wills recalled that $36 was taken from Bennett at the Lafferty break-in — where $70 was reported missing — was claimed by the accused man as his wages, not loot from the pool room.

"Is he prepared to allow that ($36) to go as restitution?" asked the magistrate.

Bennett discussed the moment then replied:

"Yes sir. Alright sir."

The magistrate ordered him to sign a statement to that effect.

UP AGAIN — Canada's cost-of-living index rose again in November from the post-war record set in October. November's level was 131.6, up four-tenths of a point from October's 131.5. Graph traces trend in index from January 1961. (CP Newsmap)

Larry J. Wood Charged With Theft Attempt

City detectives and CNR police, said that a lumber suspects after night station ticket agent William (Joe) Enright said he was threatened by an unknown man masked with a nylon stocking.

Enright said the man approached the wicket of the ticket office and demanded all his money for else." The man held an object, concealed under paper, that might have been a gun.

The bandit fled after Enright dropped behind his desk and grabbed an intercom phone linked to the night despatcher's office.

Wants Labor, Management to Get Together

MONTEBELLO, Que. (CP)— The president of the Canadian Construction Association called today for new efforts by both management and labor to achieve stable industrial relations in Canada.

"Under present conditions, neither labor nor management can any longer afford to resort to the costly folly of pitched battles on every possible occasion," Hugh R. Montgomery of Montreal told a pre-convention meeting of the association's executive and management committees.

"A serious and dangerous start has been made so that both camps can learn to live with each other," said Mr. Montgomery. "Every effort should be made to make this a reality."

It is surely wiser in the long run, said Mr. Montgomery, for unions to approach negotiations on the basis of "What can the market take?" than on the basis of a fixed demand.

Mr. Montgomery said that for a construction worker, annual income is more important than his hourly wage rate. "The staff of our economy places unions in a position today where they have to pay much more attention to keeping their members fully employed," he said.

Careless Driving Charge Brings Fine of $25

Gerald Francis Lakins was fined $25 and $11 costs.

He was charged November 10 after police stopped two automobiles at College and North Front streets.

Magistrate T. Y. Wills dismissed the impaired charge after hearing evidence from police officers and the accused.

Picket Protests Back-to-Back Hangings Tues.

TORONTO (CP) — Only one picket braved icy winds in solitary protest outside Don Jail gates Sunday against the scheduled back-to-back hanging of two men at midnight Tuesday.

The federal cabinet was expected to consider commuting the death sentences today—the last cabinet day of life imprisonment for Ronald Turpin, 28, convicted of slaying Toronto Constable Frederick Nash last February 2, and Arthur Lucas, 54, sentenced for the murder of Thetford Crater, an undercover agent for the Bureau of Narcotics in Detroit.

Douglas Campbell, a bearded pacifist demonstrator, said he hoped the federal cabinet would commute the doomed mens' sentences.

Frank McGee, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for York-Scarborough and a parliamentary secretary, said Sunday night he had made representations to the cabinet seeking commutation. He said other representations he had received during the weekend would be presented today.

Mr. McGee introduced a private member's bill to abolish capital punishment in 1959, but it was 'talked out'.

Since 1956 when the Conservatives came into power in 1957, only 12 of 80 sentenced murderers have been hanged. Canada has commuted 48 death sentences to life imprisonment.

Since 1961 the criminal Code has classified murder into two types — capital murder which carries the death sentence, and non-capital murder which carries a mandatory sentence of life imprisonment. Both Turpin and Lucas were convicted of capital murder.

Russia Boosts Arms Spending In Big Budget

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet government today unveiled a record budget of 87,000,000,000 roubles for 1963, including a 3.6 per cent increase in acknowledged military spending.

The new military budget will be 13,900,000,000 roubles as compared with 13,400,000,000 this year. Officially, one rouble is valued at $1.11.

The budget provides for income of 87,000,000,000 roubles and expenditures of 86,100,000,000. During the current year, income was 81,700,000,000 and expenditures were 87,700,000,000.

Garbuzov said the new defence budget will ensure "the maintenance of the Soviet armed forces at a proper level."

He asserted the Soviet Union will strive for world peace, but "until the problem of general disarmament is solved in a practical manner, the Soviet Union is compelled to set aside part of the national income, for strengthening its defence potential."

Two game winner with a 34½ was a rink skipped by Dr. A. McCorquodale of Quinte and the runner up was a rink skipped by Lyle Carter of Trenton, also with a 34½.

One game winner was an RCAF rink, skipped by Len Reid and the one-game runner up was a rink skipped by Les Platt of Trenton. 84 rinks from Trenton, Bellevills, Cobourg and the RCAF took part.

CAR SCORCHED

Angus MacDonald of 6 Whitley Lane in east Trenton reported at the Trenton police station on Saturday, that his car, left parked in the vicinity of the McNair block on Friday night, had been badly scorched by fire, during the disastrous blaze which gutted the building.

TRENTON — "Everybody was wonderful".

Today, Fire Chief Cecil Ellis of Trenton thus summed up his feelings about the co-operation demonstrated in Trenton Friday night when the McNair block fire was in progress.

Chief Ellis said that only the hard-fighting tactics of the firemen from five separate departments saved the buildings to the east of the gutted block. He said that the men fought almost at one unit throughout the duration of the fire. Losses, at first thought to run as high as $300,000 upon checking amounted to only about $125,000, said the chief. The McNair furniture store, of frame, insul-brick construction, was valued at around $40,000. The Spotless Cleaners' store, to the west of the gutted furniture store, was not badly damaged. Owner, Jack Goldberg expects to be in business again by Saturday. Contents of these items were saved. Records and a small amount of cash from the probation office was rescued. Records from the Fraser Realty office were rescued.

Chief Ellis praised Trenton Salvation Army corps for supplying the weary firemen with refreshments when the fire had been brought under control.

Two years ago the late owner, Councillor N. J. McNair, had the building renovated with the east end of the building made into offices.

Three Guelph Residents Die In 2-Car Crash

BRANTFORD (CP) — Three Guelph residents died following a two-car collision that also injured three Brantford residents Monday on highway 24, about six miles north of here.

They were the only passengers in the car driven by Mr. Brown. He died about 15 minutes after being admitted to hospital here. One woman was found beneath the car when wrecking crews removed it from the bottom of an embankment. The other woman was dead on arrival at hospital.

Carl Howard, 39, of Brantford, driver of the other car, was in good condition in hospital here with a dislocated elbow and lacerations.

Robert Henderson, 21, a passenger in the Howard Car, was in good condition with minor injuries.

Another passenger, Robert Nagy, 28, of Brantford, escaped injury.

When the collision occurred, the Guelph car plunged down

Jock Austin, Wooler, Will Have Some Pictures Shown At Exhibitions in Europe

Jack Austin, of Wooler, began taking pictures about 1906 as a hobby. He's still at it now, and this year for the first time he is showing photographs at European shows, but photography is still a hobby for him.

He made his living with the Hastings and Northumberland Telephone Company, which he and his father started about 1910, with 27 telephones. In 1956, when Jack sold the company, it operated about 1,400 phones, in Frankford, Batawa, and Wooler. These telephones were connected by 11 miles of line.

Always an outdoorsman, Mr. Austin took up serious nature photography after his retirement. He won his first award at the Toronto International Salon Photography show in Toronto, in 1958. Last year, he placed among the top five of that show, he had a total of 76 acceptances in 30 international shows, he won ten honorable mention ribbons and three silver medals, and two of his color slides are being shown at the Newcastle on Tyne International show. Mr. Austin does not plan further European shows though. He explains that slides sent to a European show are tied up for several months, and then they might be entered in several North American shows during this time.

STRICTLY AMATEUR

All the international shows Jack Austin enters are strictly amateur, and the only benefit he gets is the recognition. But he has entered some pictures in competitions sponsored by private firms, and won cash prizes.

He works mostly with "set-ups," setting a camera and electric flash unit aimed at a nest or other spot where he expects a bird to come, and taking the picture by remote control. The bird pictures are a specialty, but for variety he stalks mammals with a light camera and telephoto lens. His equipment includes about five cameras and lenses up to 400-mm focal length, extreme telephoto.

Looking for pictures Jack Austin travels throughout Ontario, but she emphasizes that this is not necessary for the beginner. Some of his best shots have been taken in his own back yard, of birds at his feeding station and sitting on the fence. For this sort of work, Jack has the ultimate in convenience. One of the back windows in Jack Austin's home has a special sliding flap, just big enough to poke the lens of a camera through. Nature photography can be one of the ruggedest sports known, but with an arrangement like this, it can be an armchair recreation for those days when nobody feels like doing anything.

ESCAPES INJURY

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP)—Bryan Johnson, 28, figures he is a lucky man. He was dusting a pepper field early Sunday when the engine of his small plane failed. The plane crashed into a row of pine trees, fell to the ground, landed on its nose, pushing the engine into the cabin and pitching Johnson against twisted metal. The plane was demolished but Johnson was treated at a hospital and released.

A wild bird feeds from Jack Austin's mouth, in this picture by nature photographer Jack Austin, of Wooler. Mr. Austin mounted the camera on a tripod and took the picture by remote control.

Heavy Snowfall Causes Rash Of Mishaps

The Belleville area registered a near-miss in weather — and many a near-miss in traffic accidents Sunday.

Heavy snow swirled in from Lake Ontario Sunday afternoon, striking areas of Prince Edward county and falling further east in the Kingston district.

The result was a rash of early-afternoon mishaps in the Kingston-Cataraqui area. The fallout left Belleville high and dry until late Sunday evening.

By midnight, a thin film of snow greased the Quinte countryside, making highways and municipal roadways treacherous for the careless driver.

Provincial and city police recorded no serious accident in the area, however. A spokesman for the OPP reported a number of minor mishaps on grass, roads and said country sidroads in the district this morning were still treacherous.

Elsewhere on police traffic logs over the weekend:

A two-car crash at Bayside on Highway 2 sent one of the drivers to hospital with face injuries. Police say John Boeder, R. R. 4 Trenton, suffered severe cuts and a broken nose when his car was involved in a mishap with an automobile driven by William James Bryden, 26, of Trenton. Damage to the Bryden car, which also struck a hydro pole, was $600 and $800 to the Boeder vehicle.

Four Attend Kingston Meet From This City

Four representatives from the Belleville area attended the recent meeting at Cataraqui Golf and Country Club of the Purchasing Agents Association of Eastern Ontario.

The were J. Hunter, (Corby Distillery); A. Stacey, (Black Diamond Cheese); A. Evans, (Stephen-Adamson), and H. M. Burley, (International Hardware),

Guest speaker at the event was R. J. Blenkenhassett, sales manager of Better Packages of Canada Limited, Montreal, who stressed the basic qualifications needed for successful salesmanship.

The prime requisite, he reminded the meeting, was the personal job of selling oneself on a product.

He impressed upon his audience the importance of talking in terms of the other person's interest and having the conviction that you or your product are all — and more — than you claim.

"There are two ways to arouse desire in your prospect —at the point of a gun, or persuasion", said Mr. Blenkenhassett."

Since the former method, while effective, is not conducive to continued harmony, the salesman must develop his persuasive powers.

He also stressed the importance of being interested in a sales prospect to the point of rendering more or less unrelated service to him.

New Licences Go on Sale At Bureau

New 1963 auto licences went on sale at the local licence bureau today with office operator George Olsen reporting approximately 50 sets of markers having been sold up until late morning.

Most of the licences sold, however, were for new cars sold by local dealers, although Mr. Olsen said a few owners were coming in for licence renewals.

Hundreds See Display at The Museum

The special Christmas display at the Hastings County Museum in Belleville has attracted several hundred visitors since it opened on Saturday, December 1.

The puppets are from the collection of the Ontario Puppetry Association and have never been shown before locally. There are puppets from Canada and the United States as well as from Mexico, Holland, England, France, Germany, Czechoslovakia, China, India, Burma, and other countries.

Each day, there is a special demonstration arranged by Mr. Rodger Greig of Moira Secondary School in Belleville. Mr. Greig demonstrates several of the puppets each evening, Monday through Friday at 7.30; and on Saturday and Sunday afternoons at 3 and 4 o'clock.

This is the last complete week for the special display and it is expected that several hundred more people will take this opportunity to visit the museum at 240 Church Street in Belleville.

There are always free popcorn and other treats for the children, which help to give the museum a festive air.

Wollaston Twp. Reeve Returned In Election

Reeve Mac Wilson of Wollaston township was re-elected by a better than two-to-one vote Saturday as township ratepayers went to the polls.

Mr. Wilson won out over former reeve Victor Hughson, polling 193 votes to his opponent's 84.

All of the current council members were also re-elected. The vote was William O'Brien 179; Stan Stewart 158; Howard Gunter 132 and Albert Vader 134. Other candidates were William Crosby 99, Harold Hunter 94 and Richard Tinney 38.

Two school board members, Mrs. Jean Moore and Roy Ingram were elected by acclamation.

Skootamatta Lake Dam May Be Taken Over by Authority

The possibility of the Moira River Conservation Authority taking over operation of the dam at the outlet of Skootamatta Lake to increase late season downstream flow in the Moira River will be one of the topics under discussion at the final meeting of the Authority at Camnifton on Thursday.

The Authority water control advisory board has recommended the project be taken over by the Authority.

Skootamatta Lake is in Angicies township on Lennox and Addington county on the upper reaches of the Skootamatta River, one of the main tributaries of the Moira.

The present dam was constructed in 1953 for the Ontario Department of Public Works, replacing an original dam built in 1934 by a lumber company for power purposes. The present dam was designed to provide a regulated summer water level for the benefit of summer residents on the lake.

OPERATED AS COMPLEMENT

It is felt however that the Skootamatta dam can be operated to complement the Lingham Lake Dam on the Black River, now used to increase late summer and fall flow in the river.

The suggested method of complementary operation of the two dams would be increase flow from the Lingham Lake dam during the critical months of July and August and then after Labor Day draw water from the Skootamatta dam.

The result would be that the average summer flow in the lower Moira could be substantially increased.

Authority Will Hold Meeting At Camnifton

The final full meeting of the year for the Moira River Conservation Authority will be held at the Camnifton township hall on Thursday of this week. The meeting will get underway at 1.15 p.m.

Reports of the various Authority committees, covering work accomplished during the year will be given by the respective committee chairmen.

Committee chairmen are Bruce H. Smith — conservation areas; Gerald O. Irvine — education extension; T. Clarence Graham — forestry, and Graham Bell, water control. Cecil R. Ketcheson is the Authority chairman.

Also on the meeting agenda will be recommendations for the purchase of certain properties for reforestation and recommendations concerning the 1963 budget.

Indefinite Definitions

The Israeli Supreme Court, which may or may not be considered by Jews as the highest authority on this question, has been called upon to define a Jew. It has decided that a man's claim to being a Jew does not depend solely on his birth. Brother Daniel, a Polish Jew who was converted to Christianity while hiding from the Nazis in a Roman Catholic convent, is no longer a Jew, in the court's opinion. "We (Jews) do not cut ourselves off from the historic past, and we do not deny the heritage of our forefathers," the court says.

But we doubt whether the Israeli Court would say that being a Jew is solely a matter of religion. Is Sammy Davis, the Negro movie actor, a Jew, just because he has been converted to Judaism? Would his religious beliefs automatically earn for him the right to settle in Israel, under that country's "law of return?" Some may answer in the affirmative, but surely there would be those of contrary opinion and another court case would probably be required to settle the issue.

It appears that whether one is a Jew depends partly on one's religion, but not solely on it. It can hardly be said to be a matter of race—the Irish Jew is of different stock than the Russian Jew. Nor is it a question of nationality. Many and most Israelis, but not all Israelis are Jews, for Israel has offered Israeli citizenship under legislation other than the "law of return" to the man judged no longer a Jew.

Jews are not the only people whose limits are hard to define. Any person of whatever race who is born in England of English citizens is an Englishman. But if he leaves the country and accepts citizenship in another land, he may, or may not, continue to be an Englishman. Partly it is a question of race. The Englishman of Russian stock would no longer be considered an Englishman, by Englishmen, if he moved to Canada. But let an Anglo-Saxon couple settle in Africa and have sons there and these sons may, if they wish, call themselves Englishmen without their claim ever being questioned.

An Englishman is best defined as a man who says he is an Englishman and is recognized as an Englishman by Englishmen.

A Jew, therefore, should be a man who says he is a Jew, which Brother Daniel does, and who is recognized as a Jew by Jews, which he is not.

It would be helpful if we could apply this law on a wider scale. Think how much controversy would be eliminated, for instance, if we would admit that a communist is a man who says he is a communist and who is recognized as a communist by communists.

Seafare's Anchor

Last Tuesday, the Seafarers' International Union of Canada, in putting its case before the Norris Shipping Inquiry, insisted that counsel of unequal witness be interrogated, and permitted to answer, in French, his mother tongue. Later, the SIU lawyer, also fluently bilingual, asked the questions of the same witness in French. The lawyer's mother tongue is English.

By these tactics, the Union gained only time and confusion, as almost everything said in the court had to be translated. That there was no need for the process was indicated when the witness several times began to answer the questions in his fluent English, then remembered that he was supposed to speak French. Mr. Justice T. G. Norris, conducting the inquiry, permitted the process, but left no doubt that he considered the Union's demands nothing more than an attempt to strangle the inquiry.

Just what the union hopes to gain by using such tactics is beyond our comprehension.

Obviously True

The MacLeod of MacLeod is something less than convincing.

She is enraged at another Scot who has published the heresy that an Englishman gave the Highlanders the kilt.

John Feller Duncan says the kilt was originated in the 18th century, when a Sassenach named Thomas Rawlinson found iron ore and hired Highlanders to work it. At that time, says Duncan, the Scottish national dress was a single garment, a plaid the host wrapped around himself. To make this dress handier for his miners, Rawlinson cut it in two, the lower part becoming the kilt.

"The people would never have accepted a thing like this from an Englishman," declares Dame Flora.

Nonsense. What Scot could resist an innovation which gave him two garments for the price of one?

Childhood No Longer World Apart

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

We are concerned, as we should be, about the delinquency problem. It is growing every year, and the violence and intensity threaten the whole fabric of society.

But it is also wise to keep in mind the words of Dr. Lawrella Bander of New York University. Dr. Bender said in a speech some years ago:

"Far more children should be delinquent than actually are. They have such a amazing capacity to tolerate bad parents, poor teachers, dreadful homes and communities."

As we look around at our disrupted society today, with its corruption, its fierce competitiveness, its nervous instability, its terrible existence under the cloud of atomic catastrophe — it can then be seen, more coolly and clearly, that young people do have an astonishing tolerance for growing up under adverse conditions.

For how can we compare the world today with the world in which we ourselves spent our childhood? Within one generation, the world has moved a thousand times faster than in all the previous generations since Adam. Most of the familiar landmarks have disappeared — not only the physical ones, but the psychological, social and moral landmarks as well.

It is hard to believe that when I was little boy, 40 years ago, there were virtually no automobiles, few telephones, the radio had barely been born, and the child's world was utterly divorced from the adult's world.

My playmates and I moved in a separate sphere; indeed, until the Depression of 1929, we were not aware of the adult world. Our diversions were different, the things we heard and saw were designed for children, the activities we engaged in were sharply marked off. There was no such thing as a "teen-ager" in my day.

Now of course, children are exposed to the adult world from the earliest age. The auto, the telephone, the television, imbue upon their senses from the time they can walk and talk. Crime, war, calamities of all sorts are part of their very natural environment. There is no longer a "world of children"; the ages have been largely blended into one long continuum.

This fearful acceleration in the physical world has made for an equal acceleration in the emotional. Children children become sophisticated before they become wise, cynical, before they become knowing, jaded before they become satisfied, ambitious before they become able, and sometimes successful before they become civilized. The real wonder and delight is that so many children still retain as much as decent human beings in the setting we have provided them.

Drank Beer Bride Fined

St. Thomas Times-Journal

It is about 150 years since Mr. Bumble, one of Charles Dickens' characters, declared that "the law is a ass, a idiot."

Recently an English couple got married and held a reception in a place which was licensed to sell liquor. By way of celebration, the bridegroom poured some beer into his wife's glass of lemonade, thus converting her drink into what is known as "a shandy gaff."

The bride was not 21, and someone told the police. Subsequently, the young husband for supplying liquor to a minor and she with drinking it. Both were fined.

The girl was old enough to get married, but not to have a drink of lemonade with a dash of beer in it.

If Mr. Bumble was alive today, he would still agree that the law is "a ass, a idiot."

A young couple at Darlington needed milk one evening for her baby. She went to a nearby grocery, which had what is known as an off-license. That is to say, anyone could buy beer there in the same way as they could buy groceries over the counter. So she bought two bottles of milk.

Someone told the police about this criminal purchase. The purchase was made about ten minutes too late, and it is illegal to sell milk after 8 p.m. But it would have been quite legal to buy beer.

Quote Mr. Bumble again. —

CLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

December 10th, 1942.

Good natured banter between the audience and the prospective candidates at municipal affairs, a concise explanation by those in office of their stewardship during the past year, featured the annual get-together of the Wharf Street Debating Club. This was the 32rd affair of its kind and definitely it showed that residents of Foster Ward take a keen interest in municipal affairs.

A record of 296 blood donations at the Kiwanis Centre Blood Donor Clinic, have been completed thus far this week, was the announcement by clinic officials this morning; this number included a special clinic held for RCAF personnel on Thursday evening. By far the greater majority of those attending Thursday's clinic were members of the RCAF (Women's Division) at Trenton, there being 60 in all, with 25 officers from the station also donating their blood. The girls of the Air Force were enthusiastic about the privilege of attending the clinic, all being anxious to do this extra "bit" for their country.

Quick work on the part of the emergency fire-fighting department at the Reliance Airsled and Tool Company saved the plant from what might have been considerable damage last evening when an overheated steam pipe is reported to have set fire to supporting woodwork. The blaze was discovered before it had an opportunity to gain much headway and was practically under control of the plant firefighters when the Belleville Fire Department arrived.

Fast Reader Under Fire

By C.M. Gutarie in Minneapolis Tribune

It's no longer what you read but how fast you can read it. Anyone who can't whip through a 400-page book in one evening — even allowing for time consumed in eating — is apt to forgot to pick up the steak while on route home — is practically illiterate and in need of a speed reading course.

The speed reader gulps paragraphs and even pages at a glance. He does not read each word or each line. He thinks not about word sounds and meanings.

The eye must travel down the middle of the page, picking up two or three words to the line. This exercise is supposed to be a clue to the peripheral material and give the reader a rough idea of what the writer has to say.

I'm frankly appalled by those who claim an ability to read from 4,000 to 20,000 words a minute — not only appalled but suspicious. I have to go into throttle to read 500 words a minute, and even then I must hesitate to read 40 times that fast.

I doubt that the 20,000 words-a-minute man gets much pleasure out of reading or has more than a foggy notion of what he's read. He has no time to look up the meaning of a strange word, to appreciate a deft turn of phrase or to ponder a fruity sentence. He must skip over these obstacles and hurry on to the rest of the book so he can brag that he read War and Peace in five hours.

The slowpoke, however, should try to increase his speed. With so much printed matter afloat, the plodder can absorb only a fraction of what's available. He finds himself less and less well informed — and it is a truism that an informed citizenry is our best hope for the future.

Publisher Likes Comics

By BASIL DEAN
Publisher, Edmonton Journal

It used to be a standard article of faith in our business that the best newspaper in the country couldn't survive unless it had good comic strips — "good" in this context meaning popular. If this was ever true, it certainly don't think it is true today.

In the golden days of comic strips, for example, it is a recorded fact that the President of the United States wrote a letter to the creator of Little Orphan Annie to express sympathy for his predicament in which Annie at the time found herself. The affairs of the fanciful comic strip characters were not only followed with breathless attention by millions of people; the readers took a personal interest in those affairs, and their interest ran all the way from inventing names for the Bumstead children to threatening to lynch the creator of Terry and the Pirates when he killed off his famous character, Raven Sherman.

I think that the radio soap operas in their hey-day, and later on the television production, drained much of the juice out of newspaper comic strips. But I don't think we still devote, all told, rather more than a page to comics in the average paper. I have often wondered to myself what would happen if we just left the comic strips out. News editors tend to look longingly at all that wide-open space in the daily, but they could put to much better use.

On the basis of a study which we have just completed, I am not at all sure that it would be prudent to get rid of our comics. I think, however, I am sure that the funnies are read in 80 per cent of the homes of normal subscribers.

In 58 per cent of these homes somebody reads all the strips and all the comic strips. Young people tend to read them more thoroughly than adults, as you would expect, but not by a very wide margin.

I should add that I read them all myself — on the specious and demonstrably false excuse that I have a duty to keep track of such things. In reality, I read the comics shortly after the paper arrives at my desk because I enjoy them.

This Is Hard On Historians

Toronto Star

The quarrel between Russia and China appears to be growing fiercer, yet it is still being conducted according to the curious conventions of the Communist world.

The official spokesmen for each country remain reasonably polite when speaking about the other. The Chinese, however are denouncing Marshal Josip Tito of Yugoslavia with extraordinary bitterness — even their real target is Nikita Khrushchev). Russians are equally indignant about the criticisms of Albania (though they really intend it for Peking).

Thus the Peking People's Daily has this to say:

"Josip Tito and his like, lackeys of U.S. imperialism, have tried by book or by crook to bring pressure to bear on the Cuban people and force them to accept terms which impair their rights and sovereignty so as to meet the insatiable demands of U.S. imperialism."

The right-hand man to Marshal Tito's action in attempting to install nuclear missiles in Cuba, and then withdrawing them when he discovered that the United States was prepared to use force to destroy those missile bases.

For its part, Pravda has denounced Albania for "unrestrained slander against the Soviet Union," for "filthy" anti-Communist propaganda," and for carrying out "provocative actions" which "no one neither but undermine the cause of peace and socialism."

Pravda has also taken a reference to Albania's invasion of India.

There is no doubt these propaganda darts reach their intended targets; everyone in Moscow and Peking must know who is really meant.

But we pity the historians of A.D. 4,000 who have to reconstruct the diplomatic and military history of the 20th Century from a few fossilized copies of Pravda and the People's Daily.

Correct Prostate Trouble With Proper Treatment

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please write about the prostate gland. — J.P.K.

Today's and tomorrow's column will be aimed solely at men. If some wives read them, too, and needle their husbands into understanding what can go wrong, and what can be done about it, that's good.

The prostate is an organ, or "insertion," as we like to call it, situated at the outlet of the bladder.

It is shaped somewhat like a doughnut — round with a hole through the middle — but like a doughnut cut from very thick dough, and hence as high as it is wide.

Most tissues in the body are of a single type: Bone, muscle, glandular, skin or whatever.

But not the prostate. It is a muscular, part gland, and subject to the ailments of either type of tissue.

Let's remember that prostate trouble is extremely prevalent, but that with proper treatment it can be corrected in most cases — sometimes very quickly, occasionally only with long persistence. And that the glandular, skin or whatever tissue of the prostate will develop, all told, rather more than a page to describe in detail. Therefore, I have often wondered to myself what would happen if we just left the comic strips out. News editors tend to look longingly at all that wide-open space in the daily, but they could put to much better use.

On the basis of a study which we have just completed, I am not at all sure that it would be prudent to get rid of our comics. I think, however, I am sure that the funnies are read in 80 per cent of the homes of normal subscribers.

In 58 per cent of these homes somebody reads all the strips and all the comic strips. Young people tend to read them more thoroughly than adults, as you would expect, but not by a very wide margin.

I should add that I read them all myself — on the specious and demonstrably false excuse that I have a duty to keep track of such things. In reality, I read the comics shortly after the paper arrives at my desk because I enjoy them.

1. Simple enlargement of the prostate, with the glandular tissue predominating.

2. Prostatitis, or inflammation of the gland.

3. Cancer of the prostate which, of course, demands the earliest possible attention. However, if detected early, the prospects of cure are excellent. In cases in which the patient delays treatment, the condition becomes grim. The most important advice we can give is: don't dawdle around. Don't just "hope it will go away," and don't waste time on patent medicine.

Nearly one-third of men over 50 years old will have some prostrate enlargement; cancer occurs in about one in five cases of enlargement. So it should be warning enough. Treat it early, when it is curable.

Although the majority of prostate cases do not involve cancer, they are annoying and distressing.

Enlargement of the gland can reduce or even in time shut off the flow of urine, since the urethra passes through the centre of the prostate. A kidney stone, a smaller-than-usual bladder stone, or irritation from some other source can do the same thing.

Early signs usually include urinary distrubances: urgent desire to urinate but decreased force of the stream; a feeling of incompleteness after voiding; increased urge to void at night.

Acute cases of prostatitis can be quite painful, inability to sit for any length of time in com-

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

In almost all of Canada, the word veyer is pronounced voyer. But there appears to be no justification whatever for this pronunciation in any dictionary. The word is lawyer, and it should be the way he says it should be pronounced.

But when enunciated in that fashion, it bears a rather disconcerting resemblance to another word. Try it and see.

"I'm a lawyer."

All it comes out as, is a rather slow-spoken admission of a sinful condition to which few of us would candidly confess.

And to think of a whole profession, of thousands of gentlemen in good clothes, and often in gowns with fancy bibs, going about gravely announcing "I'm a lawyer" is beyond the bounds of reason.

Therefore, to whom must we give credit for the peculiar Canadian pronunciation of the word? The lovers themselves, of course. It seems to show what professional solidarity can do even to the dialect of a whole nation.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — Canada Southern Petroleums jumped back into the stock market limelight today, rising to a years peak price on rapid turnover.

Trading more than 40,000 shares in the first hour, the stock reached $5.35 before easing to $5.30 ahead 45 cents.

Canada Southern leaped to life mid-way through last week on speculation over drilling results on the company's property in northern British Columbia.

Meanwhile, industrials drifted lower in unspectacular action. Banks were the major weakening influence, with Nova Scotia, Royal, Toronto - Dominion and Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce all down in a ¼ to ½ range.

Aluminium, BA Oil, CPR and Consolidated Paper all declined ¼.

On the exchange index, industrials slipped .35 to 562.25 and base metals .33 to 187.27. Golds rose .13 to 85.35 and western oils .08 to 119.26. The 11 a.m. volume was 566,000 shares compared with 553,000 at the same time Friday.

Among base metals, International Nickel and Falconbridge both dipped ¼ and Noranda and Consolidated Mining and Smelting both ¼. Gunnar Mining climbed 20 cents to $9.25.

35 Fatalities Across Canada During Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Accidents on slippery, snow-covered roads were responsible for 29 of 35 accidental deaths across Canada during the weekend.

A Canadian Press survey from 6 p.m. local times Friday to midnight Sunday listed 17 dead in Ontario, including 13 on roads, and five in British Columbia, including two in traffic accidents. Road crashes were responsible for all deaths in other provinces—five in Quebec, three in Saskatchewan, two each in Alberta and Newfoundland and one in Nova Scotia.

Three persons were drowned in Ontario and another three were lost in British Columbia lakes.

The survey does not include slayings, known suicides, industrial accidents or death by natural causes.

Ontario dead:

FRIDAY

Verner Herbert Marquart, 50, Schult, when an acetylene tank he was using to thaw a leak exploded on the back of a truck parked outside his home.

Menzi Theodore Mitchell, 19, in a two-car collision near Toronto.

SATURDAY

Michael Joseph Dupuis, 29, Cobden, when a car in which he was a passenger went out of control and struck a tree near Renfrew.

John Blackwell, 12, Stratford, drowned as he tried to save Dale Trotter, 7, Stratford, who was also drowned when the toboggan they were riding slid into the Avon River.

Herbina Barry, 62, Port Perry, in a two-car collision on Highway 121 near Minden.

SUNDAY

Robert Brown, 39, his wife Isabella, 38, and her sister, Mrs. Margaret Bradburn, all of Guelph, in a two-car collision on Highway 24 near Brantford.

Robert Nelson, 32, unemployed labor, believed drowned in a creek near Nipigon, about 60 miles northeast of Fort Arthur.

Raymond White, 21, Simcoe, and Michael Bartlett, seven-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Bartlett of Jarvis, in a two-car collision on Highway 3 near Simcoe.

Around The Tee

Under the direction of Harold Mott as general chairman a successful one-day mixed bonspiel was held at the Quinte Curling Club on Saturday and in one of the games the ultimate happened when an eight-ender was scored. There were eight rinks in competition and a rink of Mrs. Lonnie McCollam, Enos David, Mrs. Ann Stairy with Al McCollum as skip succeeded in winning three games. The two-game high score was a rink of Mrs. Ruth Murphy, Jack Murphy, Mrs. Mavis McLean with Stan Reston as skip. The one-game high winner was a rink of Mrs. Gwen Monson, Ken Monson, Mrs. Geneva Mole and Ken LaPain as skip.

Charlie Lovell's rink of Mrs. Doreen Lovell, Norman Moore Mrs. Kay Moore with Charlie on the broom and provided the thrill of the tournament. He was playing Ernie Jones and unfortunately for Ernie, Charlie had the rocks of his rink placed nicely and when the last rock was thrown there were seven sure counters lying about and when the measurement was over the Lovett rink had an eight-ender and that is the most you can get on one end. Naturally a picture was taken of this event and is reproduced elsewhere in this edition. Congratulations to the rink.

Three mixed rinks visited Trenton on Saturday for a mixed bonspiel and a rink of Mrs. Helen McCorquodale, Lloyd Lantz, Mrs. Jean Smith with Dr. McCorquodale in the driver's seat won a two-game sward in their section. The rink was beaten in the second game by another Belleville rink of Mrs. Ann Alexander, Ken Bean, Mrs. Agnes Bean with Mac White as skip but each rink won two games apiece and Mrs. Pete Acton with Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Graham Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Graham in the prize for the prize for the most. There were 32 rinks in play.

On Wednesday last the members of the Women's section of the club held a two-game bonspiel in the afternoon and Mrs. Betty Waymark, Mrs. Agnes Walker, Mrs. Patsy Wambolt with Kae Pinder as skip won the tournament. In second place was a rink of Mrs. Kay Black, Mrs. Eileen Durrant, Mrs. Edna Hume, Mrs. Doris Bannon as skip. The one-game high winner was a rink of Mrs. Berna Sills, Mrs. Joan Loder, Mrs. Louise Johnson with Mrs. Dorothy Walsh as skip. The women enjoyed a box lunch between the first and second games while tea was served after the conclusion of the spiel. It was a most enjoyable afternoon for those participating.

Tire on Bus Catches Fire

Provincial police Sunday evening received a call that the rear tire of an eastbound bus on Highway 401 was afire. Officers got it stopped east of the Trent River overpass. The vehicle was filled with secondary school students homeward bound from Toronto's Royal Ontario Museum to the Thousand Islands.

With the bus out of commission, the high school contingent was transferred to a vehicle hastily chartered in Belleville and continued on its way.

Boy Admits Killing Sister In Fit of Rage

BOSTON (AP) — Baby-faced 14-year-old Thomas Cadigan, who's never been a problem to his family or police, was held Sunday for the strangulation killing of his 17-year-old sister.

State Police Capt. Michael Cullinane said the boy signed a statement saying he killed his sister, Margaret Cadigan, in a fit of temper over whether a radio in their home should be on or off.

The pretty drum majorette and drill team captain for a Roman Catholic youth organization unit was found dead in her third floor bedroom of the family home in nearby Winthrop Friday night.

The girl's neck had been cut with a 12-inch kitchen knife and her head was immersed in a partly - filled - pressure cooker, but medical examiner Michael Luongo said death was caused by a pair of pyjama pants tightly drawn around her throat.

Miss Cadigan's death was the eighth strangulation of a female in greater Boston in the last six months. The other seven are still unsolved.

FAILS LIE TEST

Young Cadigan's admission came at state police headquarters after he failed a voluntary lie detector test.

"All right," the boy was quoted as replying.

Thomas said he and his sister were home alone about 6 p.m. Friday and he hit her during an argument over putting on the radio in one of the back rooms.

When she fell to the floor, Cullinane said the boy as saying, he wrapped the pyjama pants around her neck, picked up a kitchen knife and in rage stabbed and cut her several times. Those wounds, however, were superficial.

Cullinane said that when the boy realized what he had done, he ran to the kitchen, half-filled a pressure cooker with water and tried in vain to revive his sister by submerging her head in the water.

Scouting Activities

The Parkdale Cub and Scout Mothers' Auxiliary met at the home of the president, Agnes Ryall, with thirteen members present. Mrs. Hyatt introduced the guest for the evening, Alexis Trusman, who gave a talk on Cubs and their activities, with the help of the Pack's Progress Chart. The mothers were able to see how the boys advanced from Tenderpad to Second Star and thence to Badge Work.

Mr. Drennan wound up his talk with a question and answer period which was much appreciated by the Cub mothers particularly.

Films which had been made during the summer were then shown. The first film showed the Parkdale Cubs, Brownies, Guides and Scouts attending the annual church parade with other Belleville groups. The second film showed the Sea Scouts enjoying (?) life aboard the brigantine "St. Lawrence II," under sail, then on as crew members during a five-day voyage in July. A dozen Sea Scouts, assisted by Mr. Harry Brooks, enjoyed this unique experience.

The round trip voyage from Kingston to Chaumont, N.Y., and touching at various ports, was made under perfect sailing conditions and, judging by the film, the Sea Scouts enjoyed a wonderful sample of life on the ocean waves."

Following the film showa short report was made by the treasurer who stated that the silver collection taken at the "Coffee Breaks" had been very encouraging. It was decided that the weekly coffee breaks be resumed in January.

The next meeting, a potluck supper will be held at the home of Mrs. Conley, 332 Sidney St., on Thursday, December 13th, at 7.00 p.m.

Russia Offers to Operate Robot Devices to Police Ban

GENEVA (AP) — The Soviet Union offered today to install three internationally - operated robot devices on Soviet territory to police a ban on underground nuclear tests.

Western spokesman said the offer of three "black boxes" was totally inadequate.

Soviet delegate Semyon K. Tsarapkin told the 17/- nation disarmamint conference the Soviet Union would permit international inspectors to service the devices and remove the automatically - recorded tapes of earth tremors.

The Soviet offer was first put forward—apparently by mistake—in a press conference given Friday by Soviet spokesman Alexei Roshchin. Roshchin told reporters Tsarapkin had made the offer and then denied it. All spokesmen agreed that the Soviet delegate finally made the firm offer at today's two-hour conference session.

ONLY AN AUXILIARY

The Western powers maintain that the black boxes can serve only as an auxiliary to other method and can never fully replace manned control posts and on-site inspections.

Western officials said Tsarapkin's offer of one monitor in each of the Soviet Union's three main earthquake regions was completely inadequate even as an auxiliary system. The West believes at least 100 would be necessary inside the Soviet Union.

Tsarapkin said the Russians were prepared to allow installation of the devices in the Kamchatka-Kuriles region on the Pacific coast of Siberia, in the Altai Mountains of southern Siberia, and in the mountains of central Asia.

Tsarapkin said the black boxes should be serviced by Soviet personnel, but "if the West insists, the Soviet Union would be prepared to accept that this should be done by international inspectors with appropriate safeguards."

The Soviet Union has consistently opposed all Western proposals for on-site inspection on the grounds that the inspectors would be merely espionage agents. Tsarapkin said the Russians were ready to agree to additional black boxes being placed in countries around the borders of the Soviet Union.

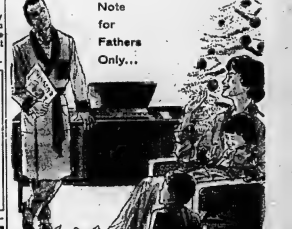
Tommy Douglas Lauds Catholics For Tolerance

MONTREAL (CP) — T. C. Douglas, leader of the New Democratic Party, Sunday called Protestant groups who are critical of Roman Catholics.



He said the test of true Christianity is in the spirit, not in church membership.

"You hardly have Christianity when it takes 23,000 troops to put one Negro into a university in Mississippi, Mr. Douglas said.

"Down in the southern states, the only Christians opposed to segregation are the Roman Catholics. I am ashamed to have to compare their attitude with that of my own Baptists down there who still favor segregation.

Mr. Douglas, a Baptist minister, was speaking to the congregation of the St. James United Church.

LAB DOG DEAD

MOSCOW (AP)—Grishka, a dog that lived for five months with two hearts and an extra piece of lung, is dead, apparently from a blow. Dr. Vladimir Demikov, the doctor who installed the extra heart and lung he had taken from another dog in a series of experiments, said Sunday there was evidence Grishka had been hit but he could not imagine how or when.

Seria, Brunei,

the British pressed to put down the three-day-old nationalist uprising.

More than 500 rebels were reported to have surrendered, and many others were reported to have fled into the jungles.

The government banned the territory's only sizeable political group, the Rakyat (People's) party, and charged it was linked with the revolt. The party, often accused of leftist leanings, holds 15 of the 33 seats on the legislative council elected last August.

USED AS 'SHIELDS'

Unconfirmed reports said Shell Oil Company European employees at Seria were used as "human shields" by the rebels and that two were killed and eight gravely wounded.

The self - proclaimed rebel leader, A. M. Azahari, vowed in the Philippine capital of Manila "we shall not lay down our arms until the last British colonizer is driven out." But he sent an appeal to President Kennedy and other world leaders to mediate with the British government for a peaceful settlement of his demand for independence for Brunei and the neighboring British Crown colonies of Sarawak and North Borneo.

The Philippines, whose Palawan Island is only 100 miles from Borneo, has itself laid claim to North Borneo but is maintaining an officially aloof attitude toward the present revolt. Azahari said he is in Manila only in transit to New York to appeal to the United Nations and after that would head back to Borneo to take personal command of the rebellion.

Faulty Points Cause Car To Run Poorly

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

Distributor points are just about the cheapest parts of the ignition system to replace, and it certainly costs very little to have them checked, cleaned and regapped, a few times yearly. Yet, points are often responsible for car trouble.

When the car won't start — or starts hard and runs poorly — it may be due to badly burned, oxidized or dirty points. If there's an engine miss noticeable only at higher speeds, the point gap may be too wide . . . or if the gap is too narrow, engine miss will occur at low speeds only. Lack of engine power is another possible penalty when points go bad. In such cases, they are likely to be sticking, pitted, burned or bouncing.

Naturally, all around economy will suffer too when any of the above defective point conditions exists.

From N.E.: "My six cylinder engine runs very well when I feed gas, but if I brake to a stop or let the engine idle, it usually stalls. The hand choke works properly, there's no sign of flooding, and no trouble starting the car."

(A) A slight amount of air leaking into the intake manifold (usually at the mounting or base of the carburetor) can lean out the mixture enough to stall the engine at idle or low speed.

P.V. writes: "My youngest son thought he'd be helpful and clean the car windows. Much to my horror, he used a liquid car wax I had in the glove compartment. What's the best way to remove all traces of this?"

(A) Use a soft cloth dampened with naphtha to remove wax . . . and rinse thoroughly afterwards.

Test-Ban Treaty Out the Window Report Made

GENEVA (Reuters)—The 17-nation disarmament conference reports today to the United Nations on its failure to make any progress toward a nuclear test-ban treaty.

The report from the United States and Soviet co-chairmen of the conference says "it is not proved possible to reach agreement on the cessation of nuclear weapon tests in the brief period of two weeks since the resumption of negotiations."

Only three weeks remain before the New Year deadline for a halt to all tests set by the UN General Assembly.

Hopes have ebbed that the conference will present agreement on a test-free world in 1963.

Such an agreement could result only from a complete about-face by either Russia or the West on the issue of on-site inspection to check on suspected underground tests.

Russian delegate Semyon Tsarapkin has repeatedly agreed to compulsory on-site inspection of its territory. Once he said that even 1,000 more inspections a year would not change this stand.

Britain and the U.S. are equally emphatic that there must be some on-site inspections, although they have whittled down the number to 10 annually or even fewer, to make absolutely certain there are no clandestine underground tests.

DRAWS KNIFE TO DEFEND SELF — An unidentified Negro man, knocked to the street when he passed a restaurant in Nashville, Tenn., where a sit-in attempt was going on, stands with knife drawn amid demonstrators and Saturday shoppers. A newsman at the scene said the man did not participate in the demonstration. A restaurant employee urged the man to move on, breaking up the fight. It was the third straight week of demonstration at downtown eating places here. Four white youths were arrested. (AP Wirephoto.)

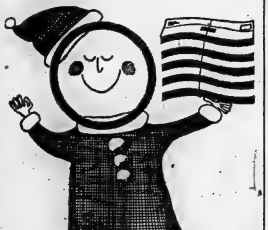
dustry. The government, in turn, promised compensation to farmers who were unable to harvest their grain crops because of this fall's wet weather.



LIMITS FRANCHISE

Because of P.E.I.'s unique voting system which allows every adult Canadian to vote for half the 30 members but limits the franchise for the other 15, it is impossible to say how many eligible voters there are. The House is made up of 15 councillors and 15 assemblymen, each with equal rights.

Only property owners, their wives or husbands, and overseas war veterans and clergymen may vote for councillors. This means, theoretically, that a person owning property in all districts could vote for 15 councillors.

In the last provincial general election, Sept. 1, 1959, the Conservatives won 22 seats and the Liberals eight. At dissolution Nov. 8 the Conservatives held 22 seats and the Liberals six. There were two vacancies.

Shopping for a $600,000,000 Christmas present

What a present! Actually, $600,000,000 is the nice round sum of money that the people of Ontario could give themselves every year. 600,000,000 vital dollars to circulate and help create as many as 60,000 new jobs.

How can we go about this? The answer lies in our day-to-day shopping decisions. Some things have to be imported, but we've become the world's biggest buyers on imported manufactured goods. We each spend an average of $235 a year on goods made in other countries. By itself, $235 may not look like much. However, when we look at the equivalent figure for a few other nations . . . Britain $75; West Germany $60; the United States only $35 per person . . . it's evident we've been on an import spree.

Start with Christmas shopping. If each one of us took steps to reduce our spending on imported goods by $100 and diverted that money to Canadian-made products, the results would be dramatic. At the end of a year we'd have our $600,000,000 and all the jobs and opportunities it would create.

What a Christmas present!

STILL IN USE AFTER SIXTY YEARS—This silver tea service was given to Mr. and Mrs. James Cretney, of 89 Octavia St., Belleville, as a wedding present. The couple celebrated their sixtieth anniversary yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Cretney Happily Wed 60 Years

Mr. and Mrs. James Cretney, of 89 Octavia St., celebrated their 60th anniversary yesterday, at their home. They were married December 9, 1902, at the Church of England at Copenhall, in the County of Chester in England. Rev. Cawley performed the ceremony.

The couple came to Canada in 1907, and excepting the time Mr. Cretney was overseas, during the First World War, they have lived here ever since. Mr. Cretney worked, until three years ago, as a blacksmith, in Ameliasburg. He moved to Belleville after his retirement.

Mr. Cretney is a member of the Masonic Lodge in Amelias-burg and a life member of the Army Navy and Air Force Association, in Belleville. Mrs. Cretney is a member of the Christ Church Guild and a life member of the Mountain View Women's Missionary Society.

For the celebration, the Cretney children, Mrs. Margaret Whitefield, of Belleville, Dick and Sid Cretney, of Vancouver and George Cretney of Brockport, N.Y., presented the couple with a rose - beige chesterfield.

Many personal and intimate friends among them many veterans, met at the home to offer felicitations to the happy couple.

Grapefruit Moulded In Green Jelly

by Mary Moore

(Third and last item for Economical Dessert Party)

In about five minutes' time I will be finished writing about the Holiday Dessert Party I've prepared for and mentioned over the past few weeks.

The final item is grapefruit moulded in green jelly. If you are still with me on this idea of an economical dessert party invite your guests — about ten or twelve.

I would suggest featuring the Snow-White Coconut Cake (November 22nd) at the centre of your dessert table — preferably on a pedestal cake dish; at left have the two bowls containing the Cherry Compote and Zabaglione (December 3rd) and at the right the fruit sections and pour all into a crystal bowl from which this may be served. Cover and chill 24 hours.

Originally I intended to turn this mould out to serve but the soft texture that the above amounts yield is far more desirable than a firm jelly, for it allows some of the sweetness of the jelly to penetrate the grapefruit pulp.

At back of table arrange candlesticks or candelabra with red tapers. Border with little pine boughs. If you want a more elaborate party add silver-ed fruit cake and a variety of cheeses. Provide bountiful amounts of hot coffee and cream and sugar in your best coffee service.

GRAPEFRUIT MOULDED IN GREEN JELLY:

To serve 10 or 12 buy 2 packages lime jelly powder and 8 of the run-of-the-grove grapefruits that we often can buy at bargain prices. Empty the 2 jelly powders into a big bowl, pour over only 3 cups boiling water and stir to dissolve. Start this cooling. Now with sharp knife pare the grapefruits, one at a time, deep enough to cut off the white skin under the yellow skin. With small paring knife cut out the sections so that no membrane remains on them. Work over a bowl and put the sections in it as you cut them for when you are finished I want you to drain off the excess juice. Keep on until you have pared and sectioned all 8 grapefruits. Drain off excess juice (and drink it). When lime jelly begins to congeal but is still a liquid add the grape-

Christmas Party Held by Pioneer Girls

One of the highlights of the Christmas activities at the Alliance Church was the Pioneer Girls' Christmas party which was held on Thursday night in the lower auditorium of the church. Over 190 mothers, pals and girls gathered to enjoy the evening.

The auditorium was attractively decorated for the occasion in Christmas motif. Lighted Christmas trees flanked the platform and colorful decorations hung from the walls and ceiling. As the group gathered and were mixing one with the other, a contest was in progress to see who could make the most words out of the name "Pioneer Girls." Mrs. F. Allan and Mrs. L. Vardy were the winners of the prizes.

Mrs. Sackville Palmer, chairman of the Pioneer Girls' Committee, extended a welcome to the mothers and pals. Miss Dorothea Atyeo, Guide of the Colonial division, read the names of the pals present and a girl was given to each one of them to pray for and help along in any way possible during 1963.

CAROL SINGING

A period of carol singing followed and this was led by Miss Mildred Vondracek.

The Pilgrim Group presented their part of the program. The group joined in the singing of the carol, "Away in a Manger" but Miss Joy Millard and Miss Linda Vardy. Ruth Ann Rodberg gave a recitation, "The Way You Feel Inside," which was followed by a duet by Heather Hannah, and Linda Parks, "There's a Song in the Air."

The Colonist Group presented two items on the program. The first was a short essay, written by Miss Linda Wannamaker entitled "Why I Am Glad I Am a Christian," and the second was a skit, "Pioneers of Yesterday and Today." The skit was both humorous and educational as Ruth Dixon, dressed as a grandmother of olden days, contrasted the life of the pioneer in years gone by with the life of today.

The history of Pioneer Girls was related briefly and the skit was brought to a fitting close as the Colonist Girls, under the direction of Becky Rodberg, did their formations and sang the Pioneer Girls' theme song and "My Desire to be Like Jesus."

GIFTS PRESENTED

After this part of the program, Mrs. William Rodberg, guide of the Pilgrim group, presented each girl with a Christmas gift from under the tree. These gifts had been bought for the girls by their pals.

A delicious buffet lunch, conveyed by Mrs. W. Leonard and Mrs. K. Thompson, was enjoyed by all. The large tables were attractively decorated with Christmas cloths and tall candelabra. The tables were supervised by Mrs. W. Simmons.

Following the refreshments, the girls of the Pilgrim group presented their pals with lovely corsages which the girls had made in their meeting the week before. The girls of the Colonist group presented their mothers with Christmas centre-pieces. These had also been made by the girls.

Much of the success of the evening was due to the planning and hard work done by the Chief Guide of the Pilgrims, Mrs. William Rodberg and her staff—Mrs. J. Chumbley, Miss M. Vondracek, Mrs. A. Rogers, Mrs. E. Parks, Miss F. Vardy and Mrs. L. Lumley. In the Colonist group, appreciation is extended to Miss D. Atyeo, Mrs. C. Fentou and Mrs. H. Sheldon.

Mrs. J. Miller; treasurer — Mrs. N. Wilson flower fund — Mrs. C. Hamilton; press reporter — Eleanor Hart.

Mr. Black was presented with a gift from the Guild, and an exchange of gifts among the members took place.

Lunch brought to a close an enjoyable evening.

St. Paul's Guild Makes Gift to Rector

St. Paul's Guild held its annual Christmas meeting at the rectory on Wednesday evening. The president opened the meeting.

There were 12 members present. Treasurer gave her report of the year's receipts and balance on hand which were gratifying.

Program consisted of readings by Mrs. H. Goodfellow, Mrs. J. Miller, and Mrs. J. Hart.

Collection amounted to $3.38 and birthday box collections of $5.52.

OFFICERS ELECTED

Mr. Black took charge of the election of officers for 1963— Mrs. John Hart was elected president; vice-president — Mrs. C. Madden; secretary —

Holy Trinity Holds Yuletide Party-Meeting

SHANNONVILLE — Mrs. Ruth Long and Mr. Long opened their home for Holy Trinity Christmas meeting. A lovely Christmas tree, candles, and Christmas music set the theme for the season.

Mrs. Fitzgerald opened the regular business meeting. Ten regular members answered roll call.

Helen Spencer expressed thanks for many gift and good wishes sent to Mr. Spencer in hospital. All are happy to see him looking well again.

Greetings from Mrs. McBride were read and a card was signed by all to be sent to her.

Appreciation was shown to Mrs. Henderson for her services at the organ recently.

Next's meeting will be at Mary McKenzie's on January 3rd.

The president called a number of visitors welcome among whom were: Miss Lilly Craig, who graciously conveyed thanks for flowers sent to Mr. and Mrs. Joe Huff, on the occasion of their 50th anniversary.

After the business meeting, Mrs. Cavalier read the "Thoughts of the Sheperds" in a beautifully written story of the first Christmas Eve.

Mr. Cavalier led the carol singing which was enjoyed by all. A "Spooky Tale" read by Mr. Cavalier and acted by the members, brought a good laugh, especially the crow. (Mrs. Whitile). Also a contest won by Ruby Kilpatrick.

Names were drawn for the Christmas gifts piled under the tree and everyone enjoyed their surprises.

Mrs. Long served refreshments and Mrs. Josie Williams thanked Mr. and Mrs. Long for their hospitality.

WINNER OF ART GRANT—Montreal painter Rita Brainsky, whose married name is Mrs. Joseph Presament, examines a print she has turned out on the etching press she bought with a $2,000 Canada Council grant this year. She often uses her daughters, seven and 11 years old, as models and considers them among her severest critics. (CP Photo).

Children of Artists Make Excellent Models

MONTREAL (CP) — Unlike most children, Wendy, 7, and Anna Presament, 11, of Montreal are accustomed to staying still—sometimes with bolts of cloth draped around them.

They're the children of artists Joseph Presament and his wife, who works under her maiden name, Rita Briansky. When the children aren't around, he will sit still it's usually because one of their parents is doing a quick sketch of them.

"Sometimes they don't know I'm sketching them," said Polish-born Mrs. Presament in an interview. "Other times they're aware of it and will hold a pose—though not for too long. Sometimes I have to bribe them, with a nickel or a dime, but generally they're co-operative. If I'm having trouble with the folds of a garment on a girl I'm painting, for instance, I'll ask one of them to drape a cloth around her so I can see how it should be.

"This is all natural to them. They have lived with it all their lives, so it doesn't bother them.

The children have become quite astute critics.

FRIENDS ALSO POKE

"They're exposed to so much art here that I think they have an awareness that other children might not have," she said. "Both are good critics and Anna, the older of the two, can analyse a painting very well—why she likes or dislikes it. In fact she is not afraid to show her my paintings."

The children also contribute their friends as models.

"Their friends enjoy it. And all of them think I'm a great artist, which boosts my morale considerably."

Mrs. Presament, winner of a $2,000 Canada Council grant this year, frequently uses her own friends as models, too—not to save money but because she likes to know the model in order to interpret "what is inside the person."

She does most of her painting during the day, though she paints an occasional evening, and keeps her weekends primarily for the children. Her husband, a commercial artist, does his serious painting in the evenings and on the weekends when her water was kept.

Bayside H-S Assoc. Hears EMO Talk

The Bayside Home and School Association met recently at the school with a good attendance, despite the heavy fog.

Mr. Denyes's class at Bayside school won the room count for the month.

Mrs. Gordon Akerman introduced the guest speaker, Colonel Angus Duffy, whose topic was "The Emergency Measures Organization." Col. Duffy pointed out what local residents could expect to happen in this district in the event of nuclear attack, and how to prepare for such an emergency.

There were many questions which were answered clearly and concisely.

Col. Duffy brought along official booklets and pamphlets dealing with the subject, so that any members of the audience who had not obtained them already, were able to help themselves to this information.

The evening was brought to a close with an enjoyable social period, and the serving of refreshments.

LEARNS LESSON

ALICANTE, Spain (Reuters) Mary, a 45-year-old dancing elephant with a visiting Italian circus, woke up Saturday with a hangover she will never forget. She tackled a 25-gallon barrel of rum. Her tamer, Luigi Zoppe, said Mary mistook the rum barrel for the one in which her water was kept.

Dressed For Dinner

By VERA WINSTON

A delightful dress for a dinner and theatre evening is done in peau de soie and lace in such subdued shades as taupe and brown, as well as the inevitable black.

The front of the bodice is lace-seamed to give a shapely line. The back of the dress hangs straight.

Small Talk

By Rene Cherry

It was advertised as the romantic exotic Paris of the Caribbean.

It was, too.

I liked Cuba.

And sometimes I think of the fairy-tale buildings, pink and blue, yellow and green, but mostly white. The famed promenade El Prado; the sea-wall driveway Malecon, unique in the world; the handsome dark men in spotless starched white guayabera shirts.

Sloppy Joe's was fun. The Tropicana was the first night club with stars for a roof. I saw Ernest Hemingway at La Florida . . . in 1960 he was quoted, "This is a good revolution . . . a good revolution."

The Yacht Club served the best daiquiris, never duplicated anywhere else, even on the island. The Country Club's memorable, delicious flan dessert.

The white Capitol building in Havana had a diamond in the floor.

The foyer of the National Museum had this inscribed quote from Marti who led the 1905 revolution, "Among the dreams of man there is one that most beautiful, to overcome darkness."

The orphanage, Casa de Beneficencia, had a small wooden door in the brick wall. It opened to reveal a gaily painted turntable, divided into compartments. Here you could deposit a baby - - a baby you could not support or did not want. The weight of the child caused a bell to ring inside the building and a nun came running to embrace the new arrival.

There were 800 cockfighting clubs. I saw my first, and I hope my last, bloody cruel fight to death. I preferred to watch jai-alai, in The Palace of Shouting.

Funny how your mind goes back to food - - the big-clawed succulent rock-crab known as moro crab and found nowhere else but, in the surrounding azure sea. It was the only place I've ever had fresh pineapple juice - - there were big machines on every corner to squeeze the fruit. Why, in Hawaii, I defy you to get it. When I was there I complained to the President of Dole and he looked quite puzzled, "But we buy them all for canning - - we're in the canning business."

It's all so sad, so bad. The terrible terrifying thought I'm left with is, "How long before other West Indies Islands go the same communistic way" If I were Mr. Kennedy or anyone else, I wouldn't know how to stop it. The poverty, the suffocating hirtiness, how can one keep feeding them?

I just don't know.

Couples Club Enjoys Pot Luck-Supper

The B.B.C. Couples Club held a most enjoyable pot-luck supper on December 8th in Allisonville hall, which was decorated in the Christmas theme including a lovely evergreen tree. A fine number of members were present for the event.

The invocation was given by the Rev. J. Truax.

Following the bountiful meal, Clare McFaul, president of the Club, called the meeting to order, and asked Don and Mildred Parks to take charge of the devotional period, which included the singing of Christmas hymns and the reading of Luke 2. Mildred chose as her topic, "Christmas, and its Special Meaning."

RALLY REPORT

Clare spoke briefly about the rally held at Tweed on the 25th of November, mentioning that they were the only couple present from the Club. The services were interesting as was the group discussion which took place.

For lunch each couple was invited to a home, returning for the evening service, which included a talk on "Juvenile Delinquency."

Business was held over till the next meeting at the home of Clifford and Sherlo Hough. All members were asked to bring used clothing and toys, and Don Parks and Ronald Hough were responsible for their delivery to the Salvation Army.

Leon and Marguerite Caugh had charge of the program.

CANADIAN SHIP SINKS

ABWA Hears Talk on Kinds Of Charity

The final business meeting for 1962 of the Afternoon Branch of the Women's Auxiliary of Christ Church was held on December 6th. The president, Mrs. H. Pitt, opened the meeting with an Advent hymn.

Splendid reports were heard from various officers. Recently, a bale of new and good used clothing and including Christmas gifts, was dedicated by the rector, the Rev. R. G. Fleming, and sent to the Rev. G. C. Daley, at Emo, Ontario, in the Keewatin Diocese.

CHARITY'S EIGHT DEGREES

Mr. Fleming was welcomed to the meeting and, as special guest speaker, took as his subject, "The Eight Degrees of Charity," as set down by Moses Maimonides (1135 - 1204), a learned Jewish scholar, noted for his comments on the Scriptures, particularly the Old Testament.

The eight degrees or steps of charity were given and discussed by the rector, from the lowest degree or step of giving with reluctance, or regret, which is a gift of the hand but not of the heart — to give cheerfully but not proportionately to the distress of the sufferer, or not giving until solicited. The speaker stressed a further degree of giving by putting it in the poor man's hand; thereby causing him the painful emotion of shame or distress. Charity or love can go far beyond the charitable gift, if it goes from the heart of the person.

Other important steps were to give and remain unknown, or the recipient not known, also to assist and anticipate before aid is required and helping others to help themselves.

Agape, a Greek word, but a new Christian word, is "the Love of Christ" the perfect self-giving love.

Mrs. H. Hayes, on behalf of an attentive and appreciative audience, warmly thanked Mr. Fleming for his inspiring message and also said he had given food for thought as well as a challenge to every member.

A lively business discussion followed, including the appointment of a nominating committee, with Mrs. R. Godden as chairman, and Miss B. Thomas assisting.

Money was voted to the "Discretionary Fund" for Mr. Fleming's use; to the church wardens, a donation (undesignated); to Miss Hazell's Van Work; to the Diocesan Dorcas secretary for freight expenses on Christmas gifts to be sent to the Rev. and Mrs. R. H. Marsh and family at Wanipigow, Manitoba.

Prayer partners are to be remembered with a personal gift and money, and arrangements were made for gifts to shut-ins.

The meeting on December 13 will be the closing one for the holidays and re-opening date, January 10th, for the annual meeting.

Mr. Fleming closed the meeting with a special prayer followed by the benediction.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

QUESTION: A friend has asked me to go out on a blind date during school vacation with a young man she knows. He will be in town visiting for the holidays. We would be going out with her and her escort, whom I also know. I'd prefer it if my date were to call me in advance to introduce himself and make arrangements directly. My friend doesn't think this is necessary, and says that the times of them will come to my home to pick me up before we go to the dance. I don't want to feel embarrassed, and would like to know if this would be considered an appropriate arrangement.

—E. T., Chicago, Ill.

ANSWER: When arranging a blind date, it's more appropriate for the third party to request the young man to call the girl he is to take out and let her know he's looking forward to meeting her. The phone call, at least, serves as some what of a formal introduction, and it does make the initial meeting more relaxed. Naturally, parents should be present to meet the young man when he arrives with the client couple, and there should be enough time allowed for a brief chat all around before going off to the dance.

THE FAMILY CIRCLE

Mrs. A.R. — He's making a fool of himself over a woman 50 years his junior.

Mr. C. — It's the best rejuvenator a man could hope for, a young friend.

Mrs. A.R. — This is about my brother, a man of 75. For the past ten years he's led a dignified life as a sensible widower. Now he must have become senile or be in his second childhood, because he's behaving like a clown.

He goes around with a 25-year-old girl who's already had three children and goes to those public ballrooms. Imagine the embarrassment of my children and grandchildren to have one of their friends meet Sol there! Now he talks of going ice-skating with this athlete. Believe me, there's no fool like an old fool because she isn't seven pretty. And what does he think she sees in him? It can't be his baby blue eyes that haunt her! She probably sees only an old codger with money to spend on her if she kids him along long enough.

Mr. S.C. — It's my life and frankly I'm out to make the most of what's left of it. This young lady has made me suddenly realize that I'm not on the shelf yet. I don't always have to sit on the sidelines and look at the "young people" having fun. I'm flattered that my new friend considers me good company and helps me participate in activities she enjoys herself.

As for my sister and her family, what did they ever do to lift the heaviness in my heart all these years? I was just "Old Uncle Sol" to them. I began to believe I'd never be anything else until I noticed this young girl in the park. Every day she takes a hike around the lake. When I saw that her pace was the same as mine, I asked whether she'd mind if I hiked along with her. She agreed. Since then we've been discovering new joys together every day.

The Council: There's life in the old beast yet, Sol. R., let the chips — and the chippies — fall where they may! Back in Biblical times, according to the First Book of Kings, that was one of the approved tests of vitality — "bringing on young damsels and watching what happened to the "old and stricken in years." When King David, for example, failed to perk up at the sight of Abishag, the beautiful Shunamite, his followers knew it was time to name a new king and prepare for the early passing of this moribund one.

The combo of the septuagenarian and the chorine has provided jokes, gossip, and raised eyebrows from time immemorial. Usually the assumption is that he's an old fool and she's a conniving tootsie. But once in a while more wholesome interpretations of this attraction are ventured. For the girl it's called a "father complex" or, at the other end, a "maternal urge." When marriage ensues, she may praise his meekness, tolerance, patience — qualities which she couldn't find in men her own age.

But marriage hasn't become an issue here. (If it should, we'd say No, as a general comment. The age disparity is too great.) This is a go-together for a well-preserved, healthy senior citizen and a young female who is considerate enough to show up and let him fall in line without being obvious about it. What a boom for his ego!

Let them be, Mrs. R. Even if there's nothing more in it for the girl than free tickets to fascinating places, she's offering her brother a fling he's ripe for. But there's probably more in it for her, Mr. C. has no illusions. He may well be the means whereby she meets the husband she'll settle down with. At one of the centres Mr. C. escorts her to, she can meet a poor young clerk — or a rich one! — and the current jaunts will "pay off" in extra measure.

As for Mr. C., his rest reminds us of the man whose doctor told him to quit tennis when he reached his 70's. "I did," he said. "But I could hardly wait for my 80's to play

Progressive, Conservative Labels Applied to Bishops At R. C. Ecumenical Council

VATICAN CITY (AP)—"This has been a period of crystallization," said an American bishop as the Roman Catholic ecumenical council ended its first phase.

"Call them what you will, the two elements now know where they stand."

Progressive and conservative are the labels most generally applied to the two forces—forces that have been at work the last eight weeks among the 2,300 council fathers of the historic gathering here.

Pope John set the councilly tone when he called the world-wide assembly of Roman Catholic bishops and gave as their prime task an "aggiornamento" —a bringing up to date of Catholicism in the 20th century.

Many bishops have put themselves into the two mainstreams by their personal approaches to the job.

PREFER OLD WAYS

Persons close to the council here describe as conservatives those prelates who want little change, who prefer the old ways and what they consider the safe paths, who tend to resist departures from the norms of centuries.

The progressives are seen as those who favor new and broad answers to old problems, the widest degree of reform consistent with unchanging doctrine and the modern mood of doing everything possible to bring all Christianity closer to the reunion.

A Jesuit biblical scholar familiar with the issues before the council has commented:

"These differences of approach exist not only in every church but also in every field of human affairs. This is the old story of administrators versus intellectuals. There are always those, who want to churn ahead and those who don't want the boat rocked."

FORCE NEW IMAGE

The leaders of the progressive group have seemed to be strong in the hierarchy of northern Europe. The "Transalpini," or those "across the Alps," forced a new image of Catholicism in Germany, Austria, Holland, France and Belgium while those nations were resurrecting themselves materially from the ashes of world war. They have carried that spirit with them into the council.

Observers here identify the Vatican curia, the several hundred prelates based in Rome to handle the day to day administration of the church, with the conservative element. Their staunchest allies are said to be many of the older bishops and cardinals from a number of nations.

Hundreds of bishops presumably belong to neither side, but support one group or the other, depending on their views on a particular matter.

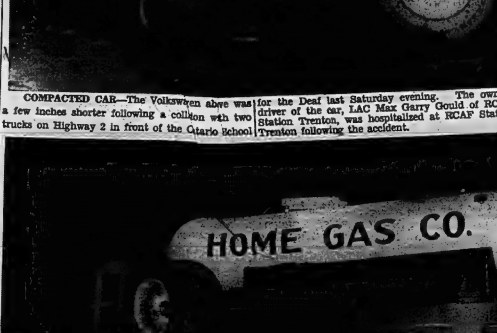
Council sessions in St. Peter's Basilica have been closed affairs and the words that bishops spoke on the council floor have been kept secret.

REFLECT ATTITUDES

But from attitudes reflected in the official daily communiques and from the lists of daily speakers, the progressive and the conservative arguments have shown through in much of the debating of the first session.

During examination of a thesis on liturgy, or public worship, progressives favored the greatest use of modern languages in the Latin mass and the widest application of regional customs to the fixed forms of the liturgy in mission fields.

When the council tried to make heavier use of the bible as sources of revelation, so-called conservative thinking was blamed for what many speakers saw as rigid phrasing and failure to consider the impact that a theologistic approach to scripture and tradition could have on Protestants and Orthodox church followers.



MET OBJECTIONS

Pope John was said to have met persistent objections of the progressives when he ordered the original thesis sent to a special commission for revision and resubmission to the council next year.

At the council adjourned for its nine-month recess Saturday, progressive - minded bishops were urging that the changes be made in a thesis on the nature of the church to get rid of its juridical tone and shape it as a more understandable exposition of natural character.

The differing views in this final address Saturday when he said there was "good reason for sharply divergent views" as the council delegates became accustomed.

He called the initial phase a "slow and solemn introduction to the great work," and said it was understandable that there was not immediate agreement. Since it was meant by the church fathers to "make each other's closer acquaintance, to learn from each other squarely in order to understand each other hearts."

Lord Milford, New Communist Peer, Undecided

LONDON (CP) — The new Lord Milford, a Communist who succeeded to the title at the death of his father Friday, said Sunday he will decide within a week whether he will take his seat in the House of Lords.

The former Wogan Philipps, a gentleman farmer, was leader working at a Communist bazaar at Cheltenham, Gloucestershire.

"I will have to consider the political carefully before making a statement," he told reporters. "I do not want to do anything that will upset the family."

The late Lord Milford, 88-year-old former shipping magnate and race horse owner, was vice-chairman of the Wales and Monmouth Conservative Association.

COULD RENOUNCE TITLE

Still he would technically be a peer and as such could not be elected to the House of Commons. He was an unsuccessful Communist party candidate for the Commons in 1950 and was a Communist member of Cirencester local council from 1947 to 1949.

If he were to decide to enter the Lords he would need two sponsors and there was wide speculation Sunday night as to which two members of that august House would volunteer for the job.

Lord Milford's third and present wife is the widow of William Rust, who was editor of the Communist newspaper Daily Worker. Earlier this year they visited Russia to study agriculture and Lord Milford wrote articles on the trip for The Daily Worker.

The Communist party issued a statement saying there is no "rule in the Communist party which members using titles if they inherit them."

Crown-Owned IDB Has 53 Per Cent Jump in Loans

OTTAWA (CP)—The Crown-owned Industrial Development Bank, which specializes in backing small businesses, registered a 53-per-cent jump in the number of new loans during its fiscal year ended last Sept. 30.

The annual report of the IDB, made public today, also outlined the rapid extension during the last two years in its role of helping to finance the growth of business and industry in Canada.

The 2,085 loans made during the year compared with 1,365 a year earlier and with only 740 two years earlier. The year accounted for one quarter of all the loans made during the IDB's 18-year history.

The bank is a subsidiary of the Bank of Canada, and bank of Canada Governor Louis Rasminsky, reporting as IDB president, pointed to two main factors for the jump in business in the last two years.

MADE MORE ELIGIBLE

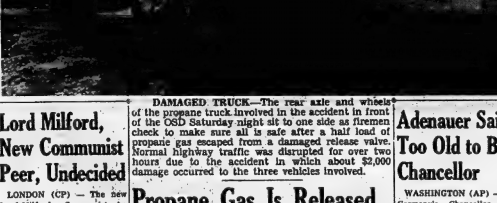
One was the 1961 move by Parliament enlarging IDB's lending field to cover almost all types of business including retail and wholesale trade, hotels, motels and tourist facilities. About one-third of the year's loans were to newly-eligible businesses.

The other was the increase in the number of IDB branches across Canada from 13 to 24 in the last two years.

Value of loans made in the last fiscal year totalled $91,981,000, up 29 per cent from $71,236,000 the previous year and 138 per cent more than two years ago.

Mr. Rasminsky noted that when the bank began, it was limited to loans for manufacturing. Over last year, 27 per cent of loans were for non - manufacturing businesses. Among the loans were 269 to personal service trades, 261 to retailers, 106 to agricultural businesses and 69 for recreational projects.

Small business came in for a greater share of the bank's attention. Just over half of the loans were for $25,000 or less, and the average size of loan fell to $44,000 from $52,000.



Vaniers Play Host to 200 Of Boys Club

OTTAWA (CP) — Governor-General and Mme Vanier found time on Saturday to play hosts to more than 200 members of the Ottawa Boys Club at the annual Christmas party at Government House.

The parties were started in 1952 by Governor-General Massey and have been continued since the Vaniers occupied Government House.

After huge amounts of sandwiches, cakes, cookies, ice cream and fruit juice were consumed, the guests made a terrific noise - makers. After feinging fright at the ensuing uproar, Mme. Vanier joined in the merry-making to the delight of her guests.

The boys, most of them from poor families from the older districts of downtown Ottawa, was presented the Governor-General's banner. For Mme. Vanier there was a gift of flowers.

DAMAGED TRUCK—The rear axle and wheels of the gasoline truck involved in a collision of the OSD Saturday night sit to one side as firemen check to make sure all is safe after a half load of propane gas escaped from a damaged release valve. Normal highway traffic was disrupted for over two hours due to the accident in which about $2,000 damage occurred to the three vehicles involved.

Propane Gas Is Released In Collision Close to OSD

Danger lurked on the doorsteps of the Ontario School for the Deaf and a number of homes in Highway 2 Saturday night as the OSD for over an hour Saturday evening, as the highly explosive gas from a wrecked propane carrier spread through the area following a collision on Highway 2 about 7.30 p.m.

Firemen and city police blocked off the area from traffic and spectators for fear of possible ignition of the propane gas by the hot exhaust pipes of cars or by a careless smoker. Nearby residents were required to shut off their furnaces lest a spark ignite the gas.

The gas was readily detectable by a sweet-sickly smell after it gushed like steam from a broken release valve on the truck. No action could be taken except to wait for the gas to vent and to minimize the possibility of an explosion, until the pressure lessened enough for a process which took over an hour. A slight breeze would fan the fumes in an easterly direction.

Traffic was diverted for almost two hours through the OSD property to Palmer Street and then along Bridge Street.

The propane truck, which was proceeding east on Highway 2 at the time of the accident, was carrying a half load of propane under a pressure of about 90 pounds, according to the driver, Charles Borden Walt, of Brighton.

The truck was in collision with a small sedan car, owned and driven by LAC Max Gould of RCAF Station Trenton. The force of the collision tore the rear axle and springs out of the truck, allowing the frame to hit the pavement, breaking off the pressure tank valve. The truck skidded sideways on the highway, coming to rest with its front wheels off the road and the tanks blocking the south bound lane of the highway.

SECOND COLLISION

The small car also suffered second collision, with a mail truck, driven by Lloyd Eugene Tripp of 196 McClellan Street, Trenton, which had been following the propane truck into Belleville, before it came to rest on the north shoulder of the highway. The mail truck appeared to have suffered a damaged front axle and the front portion of the small German car was heavily damaged. About $2,000 damage was caused by the accident.

Three persons from the Gould car were taken to hospital at RCAF Station Trenton, following the accident. Mr. Gould was treated for fractured ribs and released. A passenger, LAC Rollfiet is in hospital with a fractured skull but is reported as "resting comfortably." A second passenger, LAC Archambault, received attention for undisclosed injuries and was released.

Sgt. Keith Wright and Const. Don Yearwood of the city police investigated the accident. Fire Chief Gerald Vance and Captain Al Rump of the fire department, directed the safety measures taken.

Friends Say Stevenson Will Not Be Fired and Will Remain in U.N.

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—Friends of Adlai Stevenson say he neither expects to quit his job as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations nor to be fired as result of the rockus over his Cuba role.

There is plenty of talk in UN corridors, however, about possible damage to his prestige here. There is speculation that he may be on the skids despite assurances Stevenson has the full support of President Kennedy.

A "Dear Adlai" letter from Kennedy, expressing fullest confidence in Stevenson, undoubtedly bolstered his position. But many UN diplomats believe Stevenson's official lies are more likely to mushroom than to subside.

There is evidence that forces are aligned against him both inside and outside the administration.

VIEWS DISTORTED'

Some of his friends seem convinced that someone high in the administration had a hand in the controversial magazine article which touched off last week's bubble. They say Stevenson's views were distorted in an effort to picture him as favoring a soft policy toward Cuba.

Stevenson's associates firmly reject any theory that Kennedy himself was connected with the Saturday Evening Post story ai. The reasoning in the Stevenson camp is that the president and his chief UN delegate were never closer than during the Cuban crisis. They say Stevenson advocated the successful Cuban policy of the blockade and won plaudits, even from normally critical newspapers and politicians, for his speeches here.

Stevenson claims that every reference to him in the Post article was inaccurate, but there was enough accurate statements in the rest of, the article to convince him that someone high in the administration that leaked information on the confidential discussions which led to the blockade.

WON'T WORRIED'

While Stevenson publicly insists that he is not worried, some observers contend his strength in UN negotiations may be sapped if the Russians and others at the bargaining table have doubts as to his weight in Washington policy-making.

Stevenson and the president were not close at first because of Stevenson's delay in joining Kennedy bandwagon at the 1960 Democratic convention. Some of the president's partisans are reported against naming Stevenson as UN delegate.

A Stevenson associate says, however, that all this changed in December of last year when Stevenson was asked by Democratic leaders in Illinois to resign his UN job and run against Senator Everett Dirksen.

Stevenson is said to have been on the verge of accepting the invitation when Kennedy intervened and urged him to remain at the United Nations.

Adenauer Said Too Old to Be Chancellor

WASHINGTON (AP) — West Germany's Chancellor Adenauer is getting the same shove former prime minister Churchill got and for the same old. The reason is the same: Too old.

None of the other old-timers who have been dominating world events in the 20th century's middle years shows any signs of quitting voluntarily Nonè, however, is in his 80s, like Churchill and Adenauer.

Adenauer will be 87 in January. He's been the only chancellor West Germany has had since it was established in 1949.

In those 13 years Adenauer not only led West Germany into close alliance with some of its enemies of two world wars—the United States, Britain, France—but into a democratic society away from its ancient authoritarianism.

Like Churchill, Adenauer has been reluctant to go. Like Churchill he still feels he has unfinished business. In his case it's tighter relations with France and cementing the Common Market, of which Germany is a part.

IS A FORCE

If there ever is a United States of Europe it will probably spring from those beginnings. Thus Adenauer has been a tremendous force.

His successor is expected to be Dr. Ludwig Erhard, minister of economics. He's expected to concentrate more on domestic problems, leaving the foreign ones to others.

Churchill's going meant no basic changes in Britain. But Germany has had a democratic system only 13 years and, before that, a long history of authoritarianism. While Germany under Adenauer was both a friend and an ally it may not remain that way under those coming after him.

One-Room Amish School Depends on Sun for Light

KALONA, Iowa (AP) — The grey late-autumn sunlight filtered softly through the windows of the one-room school house to dull the bulbs that brighten the growing darkness inside.

The bearded Amish school teacher rose from behind his cluttered desk. "I'll turn on my lights," he said, as he raised the shades.

The remark was intended as a joke, and Eli Stutzman smiled. He explained that the Amish, because of their religious beliefs, generally shun modern conveniences.

"Lights would be nice," he said, "especially on cloudy days but the (public) school board has never put in electric lights."

The Amish resistance to change and desire to live a quiet, unadorned life, unmarred existence focuses curious attention upon them and frequently brings them into conflict with a more worldly society.

WHAT IS AHEAD?

What is the future course of the Amish whose biblical interpretations and simple dress have remained unchanged for centuries from their medieval European beginning?

"I don't know," said the schoolteacher, 46-year-old Amos Yoder, a college graduate and partner in a rural setting undreamed of in most other conditions which they can control, there will continue to be strong Amish settlements in Iowa and elsewhere.

"But if they must send their children into the consolidated schools . . . an increasingly large per cent will be taken away from their childhood culture."

Dan Bontreger, 62, who farms in a northeast Iowa Amish settlement near Oelwein, agrees generally with the older order Amish thinking.

"The old-fashioned way is good enough for me," he said. "So why bring in the new? You don't need change. If we keep our faith in God that is good enough and let it alone, we'll be nearer to Him."

WAY EMERGE

As the 20th century jet age overtakes the Amish horse and buggy, a new Amishman may emerge—one like schoolteacher Yoder.

Although he is a wordly man to Amish go and he needs only one more summer school session to obtain a masters degree in education at the nearby University of Iowa, Yoder has remained a devout Amishman, a symbol of being married), has five children, drives the quaint horse and buggy, and dresses in a black broad - brimmed hat, baggy trousers held up by suspenders and lapeless coat fastened by hooks and eyes.

Yoder's school, operated by tax money from residents of the school district, has 21 pupils, all from Amish families. He teaches eight grades in the one room and the text books and curriculum conform with state regulations.

READS FROM BIBLE

"I give no (Amish) religious instruction," he said, but "I do read from a Bible story book at the opening of each and each day and we sing religious songs on Friday."

The old order Amish, the most conservative branch of the Mennonite church founded in Zurich, Switzerland in 1525, feel that an eighth-grade education is sufficient to maintain their simple farm life. Yoder gives the impression he is not sure.

Their desire to educate their children in private and their objection to social security have involved the Amish in two new controversies.

Some Amish families involving about 75 persons therefore plan to move from the Oelwein area to Canada over these controversies, and a variety of other reasons, some religious, some economic.

Police Seeking Car With Man In the Trunk

WHITBY, Ont. (CP)—Police today sought to locate two cars after a service station attendant reported five or six men forced another man into the trunk of one of the cars and drove off.

Service operator Donald Pindar took the license number of one of the two cars which, he said, drove off in the direction of Highway 401 in this Oshawa area town.

The attendant, Ralph Anderson, told police three men had sat in a parked 1956-model car near the station for about an hour.

A fight developed after several men, in 1955 model car drove up and got out. After a scuffle, the men forced one of the group into the trunk of one of the cars and drove off.

A.—George Washington. That silver dollar he threw across the Potomac was discovered to be small and dark brown in color.

Q.—If Jack Dempsey and Joe Louis were offered a million dollars to fight, and they accepted, who would be the winner?

A.—The U.S. Income Tax Department.

Q.—Who owns the records for the most passes thrown and completed in the National Football League?

A.—The officials.

Q.—Who composed the famous Four Horsemen of Notre Dame?

A.—I don't know. I never listen to 'em. I prefer the Kingston Trio.

Q.—If the Dodgers win the National League pennant next year, who will they have to beat in the world series?

A.—Mahoney, O'Hara and Pevrar—oops—Alexander.

Q.—Who invented the forward pass?

A.—The snake in the Garden of Eden. He handed off to Eve who tossed the pass to Adam. It was ruled illegal and both were thrown out of the park.

Q.—I am a great admirer of the Cleveland Browns' Jimmy Brown. Other teams do not appear to have an effective method of stopping him. Have you any suggestions?

A.—Yeah. Shoot him.

Q.—Dear Droopy, here's one for your "state" of mind: If Georgia were Virginia's New Jersey, what would Dela ware?

A.—Dunno, but Alaska.

Q.—I am an ardent bowler. My wife doesn't like the game and prefers to stay home alone, turn the lights down and listen to soft music. What would you advise me to do?

A.—Join another bowling league and get a new telephone number.

Q.—What is the greatest number of . . . . . scored in Grey Cup history?

A.—Sorry, the missing word was illegible. I couldn't tell if you wrote "points" or "plots."

Q.—In the caveman days the old man would grab his club, clutch the spouse by the hair and drag her out to a ball game. What would happen today if he wanted to do the same thing?

A.—He couldn't. Did you see the papers the other day how many modern women are wearing wigs?"

Q.—Is the 1962 Grey Cup the only sports event that was stopped by a fog?

A.—I wouldn't say that. Ask Floyd Patterson?

Q.—Why do a lot of major league—and others—baseball players chew a big wad of tobacco during a game?

Q.—In golf, "aces" have been scored in various holes. Is there any particular one that holds a record.

A.—Yes, the 19th.

'Backs Into' Golf Win

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP)—Gardner Dickinson backed into the $20,000 Coral Gables Open championship Sunday by playing a methodical par 71 golf for a 72-hold 276 aggregate while third-round leader Bill Collins faded, going over par on the last two holes to finish one stroke behind.

"It's a heck of a way to win," said Dickinson with a weak smile as he pocketed $2,800 in prize money.

Picking up $1,660 in second-place money along with Collins was bob-putting Don Fairfield, Fairfield had a 33-35—68 to share the runner-up spot at 278.. was unplaced. The Canadian pro was tied for fourth place with 71-70-69-70—278.

Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, Ont., was the top Canadian. He had a 74 Sunday and a final total of 72-69-71-74—286. George Knudson of Toronto finished 71-72-74-75—292.

SWEEPS MONTEBELLO

MONTEBELLO, Calif. (AP)—Tommy Jacobs of Palm Springs, Calif., eagled the last hole for a 6-under-par 33-33—66 Sunday and a 206 total to sweep the Montebello Open 54-hole golf championship and win $1,500.

New Zealand Defeats UBC In Row Race

DUNEDIN, N.Z. (Reuters)—New Zealand won by two lengths in the four with cox at an international rowing regatta here after taking an early lead.

The Canterbury provincial crew was second, half a length ahead of the University of British Columbia entry, which finished third.

In the paired oars, the Canadian crew of Bob Challier and Marty Gifford of Vancouver was unplaced. The Canadian pair went to the front early and never regained a competitive position in the wind-whipped water.

Hawks Edge Hos, Tie Leafs, Up Lead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sparked by the playmaking of 22-year-old centre Stan Mikita and the goalscoring of veteran Glenn Hall, Chicago Black Hawks have bounced back from a slow start this season to become the National Hockey League pacesetters.

Mikita and Hall played key roles as Hawks increased their lead atop the league standings to two points in weekend action. Chicago held the third-place Toronto Maple Leafs to a 2-2 tie in a goalies' duel Saturday night, and then beat fourth-place Montreal Canadiens 3-1 Sunday night.

Mikita's winning goal in Chicago Sunday night moved him into the league scoring lead with 36 points, one more than linemate Ab McDonald and Rangers' Andy Bathgate. The Hawks were tied for fourth place when Mikita returned after missing the first six games.

WINGS LOSE, WIN

Meanwhile Canadiens dropped Detroit 3-1 in a close-checking game in Montreal Saturday night. But the Red Wings came back Sunday night to beat the Leafs 4-3 in Detroit.

Leafs were hampered by the absence of right Winger Bob Nevin and defenceman Bobby Baun, both expected to be out for three or four weeks with pulled knee ligaments received Saturday night.

Boston Bruins provided the week's biggest surprise with a 3-3 tie with Rangers Saturday night and a 4-3 win over the same team Sunday night.

Boston's win Sunday night snapped a six-game winless streak. It was only the third win of the season for the last-place Bruins.

Chicago now has 31 points, two more than second-place Detroit, who trailed by only one point going into the weekend. But the Red Wings have played two games less than the Hawks.

The Leafs picked up a point on the weekend to stay in third place, eight points ahead of the Rangers are in fifth with 20 points and Boston last with 18.

The Hawks had a decided edge in play in their 1-1 tie in Toronto Saturday night, outshooting the Leafs 34-20. Defencemen Tim Horton of Leafs and Pierre Pilote of Chicago scored the game's goals in the second period.

Horton's goal came midway through the second period on a hard 25-foot shot that bounced in off Hall's pads. Pilote tied it up nine minutes later after Bobby Hull had rattled a shot off the goal post.

In Montreal Saturday night, Canadiens' centre Ralph Backstrom provided the winning goal early in the third when he slapped a rebound by Detroit goalie Dennis Riggin, subbing for injured Terry Sawchuk.

Andre Pronovost, a former Canadien acquired by Detroit a week ago from Boston, had given the Wings the lead at the one-minute mark of the second period. But Montreal right winger Bobby Rousseau evened the score 34 seconds later.

But Bucyk scored late in the second period and again early in the third period to pull the Bruins into contention. Then he assisted on the tying goal by centre Don McKenney with little more than seven minutes left to play.

Sunday night in Detroit, the Wings rallied again on Pronovost and on their suddenly-hot "third line" of rookie Alex Faulkner and Larry Jeffrey and second-year centre Norm MacGregor.

The Wings took a 4-1 lead over the Maple Leafs in the first period on goals by Pronovost—his third in four games with the Wings—Parker MacDonald, Faulkner and Jeffrey. But Terry Sawchuk's saves down to 4-3 in the second period on goals by Frank Mahovlich, who now leads the League in goals with 15, and centre Dave Keon.

Riggin suffered an injured groin muscle on Keon's goal at the 13-minute mark of the second period when he sprawled on the ice trying to stop the Toronto forward on a breakaway.

Sawchuk, who has missed three games with a bruised shoulder received in practice Tuesday, was handed into his equipment and maintained the shutout lead for the victory.

HOLDS THE LEAD

Chicago ran up a two-goal lead in the second period Sunday night and then held on against a determined Montreal goalie to the third period to beat Canadiens 3-1.

Montreal's Dickie Moore tallied but Hall with one minute and 32 seconds left to play. Canadiens outshot the Hawks for the third period 13-5 and in the game 30-27.

In Boston Sunday night, the Bruins took a 4-0 lead in the first half of the game and then held off a Ranger rally to take their 4-2 win.

Oliver got his ninth and 10th goals of the season, Jean-Guy Gendron and Cliff Pennington also scored for Bruins, while Andy Hebenton and Bronco Horvath scored New York's goals, both in the second period.

Snake Eaters Bid For Olmstead

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bobby Kromm wants to win the world amateur hockey championship with the help of a man who was one of the greatest professionals in the game.

Kromm, coach of Trail, B.C., Smoke Eaters, wants retired National Hockey League player Bert Olmstead on his team for the February championships in Stockholm.

"It would be a fitting climax to a brilliant career for him," Kromm said in an interview here Saturday.

Kromm said he has made his bid through a personal friend of Olmstead, former Chicago Black Hawks, Montreal Canadiens and Toronto Maple Leafs left-winger.

Olmstead was traded to New York Rangers by Toronto Maple Leafs for $30,000 last June after he helped the Leafs to their fourth Stanley Cup.

But the 36-year-old star quit the Rangers playing camp in Vancouver and returned to his farm in Grannum, Alta., despite a flattering contract said to be worth $20,000.

However, Kromm isn't taking any chances. With the nucleus of the 1961 team that won the world championship, he hopes to sign additional strength to win the cup back from Sweden, last year's victors.

TORI (CP)—Sam Etcheverry, star quarterback with Mal Alouettes, said with the National Football League's St. Louis Cardinals is not at the end of this ... which means they stance he could return to Cahn football.

Toro Star columnist Jim Proudt quotes Etcheverry as contract although he is under option until 1963. "I don't really see h I fit into their plans next year."

Etcheverry added: "So what might happen is that They'd try finish a trade for me. My contract is a fig one and I haven't shown much in this league who would want me."

"Faing to sel me, the Cards sut me on waivers. No body else me at the salary I'm getting so become a free agent and I co make my own deal."

Western Hockey

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Seattle Totems beat Los Angeles Blades 4-1 in a Western Hockey League contest Sunday night in a game featured by a wild third period of 12 penalties and at least five fights. In the other WHL game of the night Portland Buckaroos pasted San Diego Seals 8-2.

In Saturday night games the Seals beat Portland 5-2, defeated Edmonton Flyers 4-3 and Calgary.

Between fights, Seattle wrapped it up with goals by Bill Macfarland and Rudy Filion. Don Chupka and Jim Powers had scored earlier to overcome a first-period goal by Willie O'Ree of Los Angeles.

Orv Tessier scored twice and Art Jones, Tom McCarthy, Gordy Fashoway and Arnie Schmautz one each for Portland. San Francisco scorers were defencemen Moe Mantha and Tom Thurlby.

Griffith Wins Ring Rhubarb Epic

Unintentional Foul

By BOB MYERS

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—The private war of Emile Griffith, world welterweight boxing champion, and Jorge Fernandez of Argentina has endured nearly three years and 29 rounds of cuthbat.

And it still isn't really settled.

Officially, Griffith has whipped Fernandez three times. The latest was a ninth-round technical knockout Saturday night.

The first two, in 1960, were fairly controversial.

The latest was an epic in ring rhubarbs. Griffith won it on a punch to the lower groin. It was unintentional but a foul, ruled referee Harry Krause.

Fernandez fell, clutching himself.

The referee said it was a glancing punch. But just where it finally landed was open to wide speculation.

OPINIONS DIFFER

Griffith said it wound up in the stomach. Fernandez claimed otherwise.

What followed in a matter of five to 15 minutes was pure pandemonium. The crowd on hand and a national television audience were equally confused and astounded as the moments swept by.

Fernandez' handlers swarmed through the ropes. Their warrior was prone and writhing on the canvas, apparently in excruciating pain.

Griffith retired to a neutral corner and finally to his own, where his handlers were peering at Fernandez, on the floor.

Deskin already was busy mulling through the latest edition of the Nevada boxing rules. His research was not aided by the screaming Fernandez handlers, nor by the onrush of Griffith's manager, Gil Clancy.

COPS CAN'T DECIDE

Police got into the ring, too, but they couldn't decide who to separate or throw out.

It was a long time before order was restored.

Here are some answers for the curious:

Nevada boxing rules state that a fighter stricken on a low blow cannot win on the foul. A fighter, if hit low unintentionally, must continue after having received a reasonable length of time to recuperate.

On the advice of the commission physician, Dr. Donald Romeo, and under the rules, Fernandez was given five minutes to recover.

Additional time would have been given but Fernandez himself weakly said he was unable to continue. Official time of the knockout in the scheduled 15-rounder was 1:34 of the ninth.

Griffith, from New York, had floored Fernandez in the seventh round with an overhand right to the jaw. It was almost like a delayed reaction as the 27-year-old Argentine hit the canvas a split second after the punch landed.

A fighter can win a match on a foul, if accordance he regained the championship in his fatal knockout over Benny (Kid) Paret in New York last march. Paret died from the effects of the punishment he suffered.

Big Seven

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

John Bucyk of Boston and Dean Prentice of New York picked up most ground during weekend games in the National Hockey League's individual scoring race.

Mikita's goal Sunday in Black Hawks 2-1 victory over Montreal gave him 26 points on nine goals and 17 assists. McDonald went scoreless but remains tied for second with 25 points on 12 goals and 13 assists.

He is tied with New York's Andy Bathgate who picked up two assists in New York's 4-2 loss to Boston Sunday.

Bucyk vaulted into fourth spot by counting two goals and an assist against New York Saturday in Bruins' 5-3 tie and counting another assist Sunday, giving him 24 points on 10 goals and 14 assists.

Five players are tied for fifth spot with 23 points. The injured Bernie Geoffrion, who didn't play for Montreal on the weekend, has 11 goals and 12 assists. Murray Oliver scored twice against New York Sunday and assisted Saturday, giving him 10 goals and 13 assists.

Dean Prentice of New York moved up fast, scoring once Saturday and assisting in another, then assisting in both Ranger goals Sunday, to give him eight goals and 15 assists. Alex Delvecchio went pointless, leaving him with six goals and 17 assists.

The leaders:

SET PLAYOFF DATE

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — The American Football League championship game will be played Dec. 23 at Houston or Boston unless there is a tie for the Eastern Division AFL, AFL headquarters announced Saturday. If there is a tie the playoff for the right to meet Dallas, the Western Division winner, for the championship will be held Dec. 23. The winner will play Dallas Jan. 6.

Scores 20 Points For Bills

'Cookie' Sets AL Yards Mark

NEW YORK (AP) — Cookie Gilchrist of Toronto, who starred for eight seasons in Canadian football, became the first American Football League player ever to roll up 1,000 yards in a season and in the process scored all of Buffalo's points in a 20-3 victory over New York Titans Saturday.

Gilchrist, in his first AFL season, finished the 1962 campaign with 1,096 yards, rolling up 143 against the Titans. Two big gains came on touchdown runs of 42 and 30 yards in the second half after he got only 28 yards in the first half.

However, he chipped in with a pair of 42- and 27-yard field goals, and also kicked both extra points. The victory assured Buffalo of a third-place finish in the Eastern Division as the Bills ended their season with a 7-6-1 record.

Bill Shockley's 22-yard field goal that tied the score in the first period was all the scoring the Titans could muster.

Gilchrist, a six-foot-two 243-pounder who formerly played with Saskatchewan Roughriders, Hamilton and Toronto Argos, broke the 1,000-yard mark on his 42-yard scoring jaunt in the third quarter. He added the 30-yard run early in the last quarter. He entered the game with 953 yards. Ht broke Billy Cannon's single season record of 948 last week.

Whip Hawks, Habs Tie

Petes Tied For Second

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Peterborough Petes moved into a tie for second place in the Ontario Hockey Association provincial Junior A group during the weekend, whipping St. Catharines Black Hawks 4-2 at St. Catharines Saturday night, while Montreal Canadiens and Niagara Falls Flyers played to a 1-1 tie Sunday in Montreal.

Niagara Falls previously held second place alone. They now are tied with Peterborough, each with 20 points, four behind Montreal.

For St. Catharines, it was their first home-ice loss in eight games. It also marked the first shutout of the season for Peterborough's Chuck Goddard.

In the Metro Toronto Junior A League, Neil McNeil Maroons handed Whitby Dunlops a 4-2 loss in the first part of a double-header at Port Credit. It extended Whitby's winless streak to 15 games.

Decide To Carry On

Players Take Over Rams

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Players on the winless Sarnia Rams have decided to keep the club in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League and have formed a committee to handle the club for the remainder of the season.

After missing two games because of lack of players, Rams will restart Tuesday at Sarnia against Kitchener-Waterloo Tigers. Defenceman Tom Clark is chirman of the new players' committee and Ray Morton is business manager.

Rams have lost 18 straight games and are mired deep in the league basement.

At the other end of the standings, the leading Windsor Bulldogs and the second - place Chatham Maroons kept pace with Sunday victories.

Windsor beat the third-place Woodstock Athletics 4 - 1 at Windsor, while Chatham, trailing Windsor by two points, dumped Galt Terriers 8-2 at Chatham.

SCORES FOUR TIMES

Ted Powers scored four goals and added two assists in the Chatham win. Other goals were scored by Don McGregor, Gus Mortson, Harvey Neah and George Uditalo. Galt scorers were Bob Seager and Larry Pfaff.

At Windsor, the Bulldogs came up with a top defensive display for new goalie Wayne Rutledge, a graduate of Niagara Falls Flyers. He stopped 28 shots, while Woodstock's Ron Salter had 37 saves.

Swimmers Score In N.Z.

By J. C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

AUCKLAND (CP) — Canadian British Empire Games competitors, lingering Down Under for a series of track and field, swimming and rowing competitions, competed in four separate meets in New Zealand during the weekend with the swimmers faring best.

Dick Pound, one of Canada's two swimming gold medallists at the recent Empire Games in Perth, Australia, set a New Zealand record for the 110-yard freestyle at a meet at Lowerhutt. He finished in 57 seconds flat, 0.3 seconds faster than the previous mark set by K. Ishihara of Japan last year.

Another Montrealer, Steve Rabinovitch, was five seconds better than his nearest rival in the 110-yard breaststroke at 1:12.8.

BORROW SHELLS

Canadian rowing crews experienced difficulty with borrowed shells in a competition on choppy Lake Walhola near Dunedin.

The University of British Columbia team won the eights competition. It finished a solid three lengths in front of a New Zealand provincial crew.

The only Canadian winner in a track meet at Auckland was Don Bertoia of Rossland, B.C. who won the 800-metre run in 1:53.9. World record holder Peter Snell was not in the event.

Bisons Whip Hershey 4-1, Retain Lead

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Just a day shy of two months since he scored two goals in Buffalo Bison's opener Oct. 10, Eddie Kachur came up with Nos. 3 and 4 Sunday night as the Bisons whipped Hershey Bears 4-1 and maintained their seven-point edge at the head of the American Hockey League's Western Division.

The second-place Rochester Americans kept pace with a 4-3 triumph over Pittsburgh Hornets that extended the Hornets' winless streak to nine games.

Springfield Indians moved into a first-place tie with Quebec Aces in the eastern sector, with Providence Reds two points back, as the Indians walloped Cleveland Barons 7-3 and the Reds edged Quebec 3-2.

In Saturday action, Springfield dumped Quebec 4-1, Rochester downed Providence 4-2, Cleveland defeated Hershey 4-2 and Buffalo tripped Pittsburgh 5-2.

Hershey finally scored on Cleland Morison's goal in the final period. Doug Robinson and Gerry McInyre also scored for Buffalo.

PAPPIN SCORES

Jim Pappin scored two goals and Gary Jarrett one in the third period as the Americans came from behind to defeat the Hornets. Dick Gamble also scored for Rochester. Lowell MacDonald, Ray Hass and Al Johnson tallied for Pittsburgh.

Chicago's league - leading scorer, Stan Mikita, who scored the first goal in Black Hawks' 3-1 victory over Montreal Canadiens Sunday, a win consolidating his team's grip on first place.

Big John Bucyk who sparked Boston's come-from-behind 3-3 tie with New York Saturday by scoring twice and assisting in the other Bruin goal.

Boston's Murray Oliver whose two goals led Bruins to a 4-3 victory over Rangers Sunday, snapping a six-game Boston losing streak and providing the cellar dwellers with their third victory of the season.

Detroit's Kil-Line sparkplug, Bruce MacGregor whose playmaking set up the tying and winning goals in Red Wings' 4-3 victory over Toronto Sunday, keeping Detroit in second place.

Giants Win Token Victory

Packers Retain Game Lead Over Lions

NEW YORK (CP) — Green Bay Packers came from behind to beat San Francisco 49ers Sunday 31-21 and retain a one-game lead over Detroit Lions in the Western Conference of the National Football League. Each team has one game to play.

Detroit remained alive by taking advantage of Minnesota mistakes in a 37-23 victory over the Vikings. In order to get a tie, the Lions would have to beat Chicago Bears next Sunday.

New York Giants, who previously had clinched the Eastern Conference crown and a Dec. 26 title game with the western winner, won their fifth straight game by shading Cleveland Browns 17-13 with Ralph Guglielmi at the controls most of the way.

The Browns' defeat, combined with Pittsburgh Steelers' 26-17 decision against Philadelphia Eagles, put the Steelers into the playoffs.

Charley Johnson threw five touchdown passes for St. Louis Cardinals and scored once in a 38-20 rout of the favored Dallas Cowboys.

In the American Football League, Houston Oilers clung to a half-game lead over Boston Patriots in the Eastern Division with a 33-17 triumph over winless Oakland Riders while Boston downed San Diego Chargers 20-14. Each team has one game to play, Houston against New York Titans and Boston at Oakland. Dallas Texans, with the Western Division title clinched, knocked off Denver Broncos 17-10.

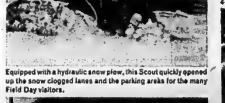
LOOK WHY THEY'RE BUYING

THE 4-WHEEL DRIVE

SCOUT!



These pictures, snapped during recent Scout Field Days, help to explain why the new Scout has made International the undisputed 4-wheel drive sales leader in Canada.

Hundreds of prospects climbed into the driver's seat and took the Scout over a no-holds-barred two-mile course that at times was blanketed with deep, wet snow. Mud was churned into troughs nearly two feet deep. The rain-swollen creek made engines steam—but not stall. The Scout zipped up steep hillsides slimy with mud.

It was an experience that the drivers would not soon forget. They proved for themselves (as you can too) that nothing can stop the Scout.

Snowbound? Not if you're a Scout owner. The Scout Field Days proved convincingly that the deepest drifts, on or off the road, are no match for the 4-wheel drive Scout.

Taking to the air after creating a steep hill, the Scout lands with a crunch that would seriously damage most trucks — but not the Scout, even after repeated landings.

Then, off the rugged Field Day course on to the highway where the smooth-riding, easy-handling 4-cylinder Scout converts in seconds to 2-wheel drive.

Heavy rains and snow turned sections of the Field Day course into quagmires and proved that deep-cutting farm tyres, construction sites and wilderness trails are made to order for the 4-wheel drive and high clearance of the Scout.

. . . and look who's buying the SCOUT!

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Should Wife Ignore Hussy?

DEAR DORIS—I cannot agree with the advice you gave to the wife whose husband is having an affair with a 22-year-old. To try to be patient and understanding is to invite more and more heartache, not only for herself but for her husband and children, as well. To begin with, when a tramp (is there any doubt of this?) takes up with a married man, she will do all in her power to destroy his marriage.

DORIS CLARK

My husband, who was the sole of honesty and decency, has been the victim of a girl, who considers herself real hot stuff, talks constantly of sex, indulges in sexy dances, full of bumps and grinds, and is the lowest form of female alive. My husband has told me all about her, obviously begged my forgiveness, but still is too weak to stay completely away from her. I think the fact I did forgive him has contributed to his weakness, instead of giving him the strength of character he needs.

Since then, she has seduced a young man with a fine reputation and an extremely nice family, including a beautiful wife. So, I ask, who will be the next victim in her collection of unlawful pastimes?

I find myself in a quandry. Should a wife be duty bound to protect her husband from the ghastly publicity of disclosing the situation; or should a man who enjoyed the game so much he forgot the value of the finer things of life, be subjected to his just desserts? Should I expose this woman in order to protect other families from the same treatment?—WORRIED MOTHER.

DEAR WORRIED—No point in patience with a tramp. Also, where there is some point in forgiving, this should not be coupled with an indulgent attitude, which in effect says, "Go ahead, dear, I understand. Apology and forgiveness must hinge on a promise to do better.

In your case a threat to disown your husband, if there's one more fall from grace, is urgent. Publicity, gossip, slander, should then cut no ice with you. You must think of the children.

DEAR DORIS—Sometimes my husband works shift work, which leaves me alone at night.

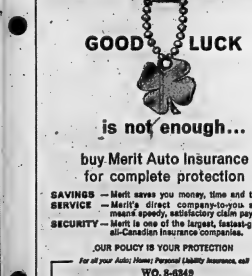
I am rather nervous alone and feel I need someone to stay the night with me. We live at the edge of a village; my little sister is not too far away and likes to come and stay with me.

Except for my husband, everyone laughs at me and says I'm being silly and childish. I've even been told to grow up.

I believe many women are in my shoes. I'm sure I'm not unusual; how can I prove this? Is there anything wrong with my needing company through the night.—BABS.

DEAR BABS—Nothing whatever. The strong, stalwart sex can stay alone when it likes. It's in the minority. A rigid determination to be brave just isn't your type.

If Little Sister and your husband understand you—fooey to the unkind fibes! Could you rent one room of your home to a congenial older woman? This has been the happy solution for some.



DEAR DORIS—My mother and father have been divorced. My mother is going to be married again. Would it be proper for my sisters and me to attend the wedding?—WONDERING DAUGHTER.

DEAR DAUGHTER—Cases differ. If you are living with your mother and rejoice with her in this new union, be there by all means when the knot is tied.

Anything short of this would indicate your disapproval. There are circumstances, of course, in which it would be poor taste (perhaps even an ordeal) for children to be present at a parent's second marriage.

TO K.S.C.—Covering a cheese box is a little out of my line. Go to your nearest public library. Enquire in the Arts and Crafts Department for a book on homecrafts. See if you can't find a chapter which deals with such things as upholstery for cheese boxes and orange crates.

(There's a Canadian resource to meet your need. Ask Doris about it.)

US College Football

NEW YORK (CP) — Frustrated by pass interceptions and fumbles for three quarters, Syracuse finally came from behind in the fourth quarter Saturday to beat Ballback John Mackey returned a punt 40 yards for a touchdown to defeat UCLA 13-7.

Central Oklahoma State, defeated Lenoir Rhyne 28-13 for the nation's Small College football championship in the Camellia Bowl at Sacramento, Calif. At Allentown, Pa., West Chester defeated Hofstra 46-12 in the first Cement Bowl game.

The Jackson, Miss., State Tigers upset Florida 17-12 and M. 22-6 in the 30th annual Oranges Blossom classic at Miami and the University of Omaha defeated East Central, Okla., 34-21 in the Pioneer Sports Bowl at Oklahoma City.

CANADIANS SECOND

MANILA (AP)—The United States all but wrapped up the Philippines annual basketball international basketball tournament championship Sunday night.

The American quintet thrashed Nationalist China 100-50 for their fifth straight win without a loss.

The Lethbridge, Alta., Nationals are in second place in the tournament with four wins against a loss. Their loss was to the U.S. team.

JOINS ALOUETTES

MONTREAL (CP) — Dave Hoppman, lows state tailback who led United States colleges in total offence in 1961, Sunday night became the first new comer to be signed for next season by Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference. The 20-year-old backfielder piled up 1,628 yards rushing and passing in 1961. He was third in the U.S. this season and made the Associated Press third all-star team.

Frank Sinatra and Dinah Give Fine Performances

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — There's an unwritten law of television requiring singers, between numbers, to appear in a little hall and, hopefully, funny conversation.

Most of the time this cue-card persiflage falls flat, even when Frank Sinatra tries in a jolly mood. Witness Sunday night's rather typical exchange between Dinah Shore and her guest star:

Sinatra: "It is true this program is going to be given free to foreign countries?"

Dinah: "Yes. Are there any foreign countries you'd like it to be given to."

Sinatra: "Well, I'd like some friends in the valley to see it."

That's about par for these bits on any show. Actually, Dinah's NBC special was a pleasant potpourri of melody with something for about every musical taste. Ones and lows and trying Berlin to gospel songs and way-out jazz.

Sinatra, when he could get away from the cue cards, was quite amusing. The alarmed expression on Dinah Shore's face when he decided to do a ballet with Miss Shore to her last number (she didn't understand the roar of laughter greeting a serious glance) is one of many unplanned fresh moments.

In the New York City area, without newspapers over the weekend because of a strike, the radio stations took over the Ever since Saskatchewan poisoned most of its coyotes to halt the spread of rabies, any place in the north of the province must seem a pretty fine town-o for a fox in search of a henhouse.

Things are so good for foxes, provincial wildlife experts report, that the sly fellows are spending their spare time whipping up a population explosion. This may lead to their undoing.

Then the province's coyote population will be reduced by thousands in a five-year poisoning program aimed at nearly two years ago. Most foxes, ranging shorter distances from their dens, have escaped nearly total finishing any of the far-flung poisoned bait stations.

S. W. Terry, game management officer for the department of natural resources in Prince Albert, says that if the rabies reported in northern Manitoba last spring showed signs into Saskatchewan, another poisoning program, with the bait stations much closer together, will be launched against foxes.

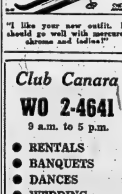
SOME COYOTES SPARED

Saskatchewan's municipalities have been slow to embark on provincially supported local fox-control programs, says Ivan Paynter, Saskatchewan Wildlife branch director, because of the danger of eradicating the remaining coyotes.

Nobody wants to kill all the coyotes in the province and revive a plague of rats, mice or rabbits, he says.

Mice multiplied so fast during an anti-rabies slaughter of coyotes in Alberta in 1952-53 that survivors often were afraid to walk across their lawns.

But the program did eliminate rabies, which has not been reported in Alberta since 1956.



Dr. E. E. Ballantyne, veterinarian in charge of the Alberta program which continues on a reduced scale compared with the killing of more than 123,000 animals from 1952 to 1955, says he wouldn't hesitate to recommend the same action again in the face of a rabies outbreak.

Saskatchewan's foxes have not yet started to move across the border to Alberta in noticeable numbers. But Alberta biologists say they expect larger numbers of carnivorous animals to be sighted in northern Alberta this winter for other reasons.

The rabbit population, large in Alberta during the last couple of years, has dropped, leaving less food for predators. Upland birds also are scarce in the north, and the mouse population is on the decline.

The resulting food shortage for foxes, coyotes, wolves, lynx and other species is expected to drive them into more populated areas in search of a meal.

Minor Hockey

It was another big weekend for the goal scorers in the Belleville Minor Hockey Association with plenty of goals in the Juveniles, Bantam and Peewee games played Saturday and Sunday.

JUVENILES

The Comets belied the Aces 7-5, sparked by B. Lange, who scored four of the goals and assisted on another pair. Doug Boyle fired two goals while P. Emerson had a goal and three assists. B. Ethier fired a pair for the Aces, singletons going to J. Pringle, Matt and Babcock. P. Soule and Murray had assists.

The Hornets whipped the Rangers 9-1 with Woodcock leading the way. Woodcock fired four goals and picked up one helper. R. Sine netted two goals, B. Goodfellow and D. Tomaso one apiece. C. Soonbower and R. McGuire drew three assists each. J. St. Denis one. A. Lentini fired the Ranger goal, aided by T. Bathwell.

BANTAM

Red Wings topped the Flyers 6-3, sparked by Chambers with two goals and one assist. C. White, Haley and Hudon, two apiece, Holton and Haley assisting helpers. D. Case scored one for the Flyers and set T. White up for the other marker.

Maple Leafs hammered the Black Hawks 11-2 with T. Shaw leading the scoring. Shaw scored three goals and assisted on another. The other goals were shared by Young, Gay, Bowen, C. Wilson, B. Tomaso, R. Anderson, L. Baker, B. Wickens and R. Martin. T. Bongard drew two assists, Wilson, Dalton, Wickens and Martin one apiece. D. Dalton, A. Outcalt potted the Hawk goals, unassisted.

Bruins took a 6-3 decision over the Barons. H. Wishart paced the attack with a pair of goals while J. Hartman, B. McTaggart, F. Ford and S. Thorne had the others. T. McDougall, Ray and A. Bradley had assists. For the Barons G. Cameron scored twice, P. Howe had a goal and assist and S. Lee helped on one.

Canadiens defeated the Browns 7-4, with C. Rump and D. Lambert each potting a pair of goals. T. Hamilton, W. Storms and G. Cummings had the other goals. J. Murray and Cummings had two assists each, Rump and B. Musgrove one. T. Boulter sparked the Browns with three goals and one assisting on the other, scored by W. McTaggart, who drew two assists.

PEEWEE

Barons edged the Black Hawks 3-1. Tulloch potted one goal and assisted on another pair. B. Buchannan and Locke had a goal apiece. Ineson ripped the Hawks' lone marker.

Rangers outlasted Quints 8-6 with Middleton scoring two goals. Gallow, Thomson, Topping, Lattimer, Johnson and Beecher one each. Thompson, Riddell and Miller had an assist apiece. Janitch and Adams fired two goals each for Quints with Bradley getting the other. Forbert drew two helpers, Wilson and Bradley one.

Mack had the only shutout of the weekend, 5-0 over Canadiens. Paul Hopkins got the shutout while Powell, R. Mitchell and Trumble scored the goals, all unassisted.

S. Moore led the Bruins to a 4-2 victory over the Maple Leafs by scoring three goals. M. Bishop bagged the other and W. Pytle had an assist. R. McFliquham potted both Leaf goals on solo efforts.

Browns topped the Red Wings 5-2 on unassisted goals by B. Curtin, with two, Muldoon, R. March and S. Storms. B. James and Rowland had the wing goals, Bunbk getting an assist.

BETTERS SWIM MARK

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Marion Chamberlain, New Zealand's champion woman distance runner, cut nearly four seconds Saturday from the fastest mile time ever recorded by a woman. Her time was four minutes, 41.4 seconds, bettering the previous top set by Diana Leather seven years ago in England by 3.6 seconds. There is no official world record for the distance.

AT THE BELLE — "Rear Window", Alfred Hitchcock's spinetingling Technicolor film for Paramount, is the heart-stopping story of James Stewart and lovely Grace Kelly, two people in deadly danger, because one night they see too much. Showing tonight and Tuesday at the Belle Theatre "Rear Window" co-stars Wendell Corey and Thelma Ritter with Raymond Burr, TV's Perry Mason.

The Tracks

NEW YORK (CP) — Nickel Boy, carrying the Elmendorf farms silks, came from last place in the 21-horse field Saturday to win the $25,000 added Jeanique Handicap by a neck at Baltimore's Pimlico track.

Nickel Boy, ridden by jockey Ronnie Ferraro, overhauled Buffy in the last three jumps. Towson Man finished third, two lengths behind Buffy. Nickel Boy, the favorite, paid $5.20, $2.80 and $2.60 after completing the 1 1-16-mile distance in 1:46. Buffy returned $11.40 and $4.80 and—Towson Man paid $2.60.

At San Mateo, Calif., Native Diver covered the same distance in 1:42 to win Jn $15,000 added San Jose Handicap at Bay Meadows. He returned $4.20, $3.60 and $3. Ted Ave, sixth stakes victory and his eighth win in 15 starts.

Rains finished second. Royal Attack crowded Native Diver for the lead into the final turn but fell off the pace.

At Miami, Fla., Hoheab farm's Big Red ran away with the $7,500 added Dade Metro Handicap at Tropical Park, finishing 3½ lengths in front of Sky Wonder. David's Folly was third.

Big End ran the six furlongs in 1:09 3-5 and paid $6.50, $3.10, and $3.30. Sky Wonder paid $13 and $7.20 and David's Folly $3.30.

Eastern Pro Hockey

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kingston Frontenacs and Hull-Ottawa Canadiens, pacesetting one-two in the Eastern Professional Hockey League, widened their leads during the weekend at the expense of third-place Sudbury Wolves.

Kingston dropped Sudbury 4-3 Saturday and Hull-Ottawa defeated Buffalo Bisons of Kingston leads the league with 37 points, five more than Hull-Ottawa and 11 more than Sudbury. The last-place Syracuse Chiefs were idle, but see action Wednesday at Kingston.

TORONTO LOSES AGAIN

NEW YORK (AP) — Barry Kramer and Neil O'Neill sparked an early burst that put New York University ahead to stay Saturday night in an easy 106-57 triumph over the Running University of Toronto basketball team. It was the fourth loss in as many tries for Toronto on the current U.S. tour.

Wallbridge

WALLBRIDGE — Wallbridge LOBA 165 held its 3rd euchre party Wednesday night with a good attendance. After the games, refreshments were served by the ladies.

Mrs. Jack Cole is a patient in Belleville General Hospital. Her many friends wish for a speedy recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris were recent dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pound.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Garrison and son Robert were weekend guests of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Garrison.

Mr. and Mrs. Coleman Townsend and his mother were tea hour guests at the same home on Sunday last.

The UCW held their monthly pot-luck dinner on Thursday with teacher and scholars and a number of adults all enjoying a hot dinner.

Preparing for Christmas is the order of the day. School children are completing their Christmas concert and those at home preparing for relatives and friends to spend Christmas Day.

FAMIY NIGHT

Wallbridge WI members held their "Family Night" in the Orange Hall on Friday night with a good attendance. Mrs. Ketcheson of Belleville, with his bi-fi, provided the music or dancing. Mrs. Frank Harris was celebrating her birthday. Refreshments were served at the close.

Gordon Sinclair Disagrees With Medicare Plan

TORONTO (CP)—Radio commentator Gordon Sinclair said Sunday night the New Democratic Party's proposal for an Ontario medical care plan similar to Saskatchewan's is part of a taxation onslaught that eventually will eliminate all millionaires.

In a radio debate with Ontario NDP Leader Donald MacDonald, Mr. Sinclair said: "This business of soaking the rich has gone too far."

Mr. MacDonald said: "I'm not as preoccupied with millionaires as you are; they can look after themselves."

He said the NDP plan would be financed by contributions of 30 cents a week by single persons and 60 cents a week by persons with families.

Kennedy Back in Capital After Seeing Atomic Bases

Kennedy brought back with him a Roman Catholic priest's public hint he should take Mrs. Kennedy on his next trip.

Rev. Maurice Z. Edwards, pastor of the church which Kennedy attended Sunday, prefaced his sermon by welcoming Kennedy and reporting that many parishioners wanted to know, "where's Jackie?"

Father Edwards did not elaborate on this rather puzzling remark until reporters questioned him after the service. Then he explained that his congregation had seen the president on a visit last March and had hoped to see Mrs. Kennedy this time.

The fact that Kennedy spent 1½ days touring military and nuclear centres in Nebraska, New Mexico and Nevada before flying to Palm Springs presumably was one reason why Mrs. Kennedy did not accompany him. She seldom goes along on business trips.

6 Non-Aligned Countries Study Border Dispute

PEKING (Reuters) — China today marked the opening of a conference in Ceylon of six non-aligned Afro-Asian countries to discuss the Sino-Indian border dispute with an unyielding restatement of its own case and rejection of what it called India's "unreasonable demands."

The Communist party newspaper People's Daily carried a long front - page editorial expressing the hope that the conference in Colombo, Ceylon could "make useful contributions toward promoting direct negotiations between India and China," on the basis of the Chinese position.

The Colombo conference overshadowed other aspects of the dispute with India and other world affairs in the news columns of Chinese newspapers today.

Opposition Said Guilty Of Obstruction

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons faces the test this week of implementing an informal arrangement among the four party leaders to process some opening items of government legislation before the Christmas-New Year's recess.

The precise list wasn't announced following last Thursday's conference among Prime Minister Diefenbaker, Liberal Leader Pearson, Social Credit Leader Thompson and New Democratic Leader Douglas.

However, three items were spelled out—the government's projected national economic development board, the Atlantic development board and a measure to boost membership in the national productivity council on manpower and employment.

The first debate make in the legislative bill of fare will be watched closely as the Commons aims for adjournment Dec. 20 for four weeks.

IMPLY OBSTRUCTION

Prime Minister Diefenbaker and a number of cabinet ministers have implied that the opposition is guilty of obstructing government legislation. And Senator G. S. Thorvaldson, president of the Progressive Conservative Association of Canada, made the charge last week in the Senate.

The accusation of opposition obstruction caused some speculation that the government might be laying the groundwork for a sudden dissolution of Parliament and a federal election.

It was recalled that in 1957 the government, with a minority of Commons supporters as it has today, made the same accusation just before Prime Minister Diefenbaker sought dissolution of Parliament for the 1958 general election.

There has been speculation that Mr. Diefenbaker might repeat the performance while the House is on holiday.

The amount of progress the Commons makes in this week and next, and government reaction to it, may give an indication of whether exponents of an early dissolution are right.

Today the House was to begin where it left off Friday, on clause-by-clause study of the Atlantic development board bill. If this is completed, debate will begin on the proposed national economic development board.

EDITOR DIES

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Dr. Charles William Hoffman, 80, editor and educator in the field of agriculture, died Saturday. Burkett, co-founder of Alpha Zeta fraternity for agriculture students, was author of Agriculture for Beginners and Soil. He was editor of the American Agriculturist, a farm weekly, and was president of the Orange Judd Publishing Company.

All had as their main story a message from Premier Chou En-lai wishing the conference success in promoting Sino-Indian negotiations.

Diplomatic observers here said the aim of the message and today's editorial was to show the conference participants the seriousness of the Chinese view that mediation does not mean getting directly involved in the dispute but merely persuading India to accept the Chinese proposals for negotiations.

SECURE FLYING STATIONS — It's a time of fast paced activity on board the aircraft carrier HMCS Bonaventure when flying operations are underway. Air crews are briefed and man their planes, while aircraft handlers complete last minute procedures to prepare for the fly-off. And, as aircraft engines warm up on the flight deck, operations crews, communications personnel and others take up their "flying stations." The bustle of activity continues even as the planes are away on their mission. The day's activity ends, as shown above, as the last anti-submarine Tracker aircraft lands and is ushered into its parking space on the flight deck ready to be firmly secured for the night. Marxist-Leaning Defence Minister Losing Place

By ANDREW BOROWIEC

A month ago, as commander of Algeria's 45,000-man regular army, Boumediene looked to foreign diplomats like the domineering "grey eminence" behind Premier Ahmed Ben Bella's government, the man who might step in with a military dictatorship.

But Algerian and French military sources say Boumediene has been steadily losing his grip on his army, and with it his chance for a successful coup.

The well trained army, equipped with Communist weapons and staffed with Communist-style political commissars, has declined to provide a base for power between former premier Youssef Ben Khedda and Ben Bella indomitedly after independence.

The army entered Algeria from its Tunisian and Moroccan bases, spread out through the countryside and formed the backbone of the new government.

But the dispersion of the army and its gradual involvement in local politics has loosened its hold on the army's chain of command, the military informants say.

A number of diplomats who believed Boumedienne was a possible replacement for Ben Bella no longer think so.

"Boumediene's strength is weakening from day to day," said one diplomat. "The longer he waits, the less chance he has of taking over."

1/4 AWAKE NIGHTS 1/4 ASLEEP DAYS

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They toss and turn in bed—and then are dull and listless throughout the day. All of which may be due to a temporary toxic condition which calls for the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Dodd's Pills

Healthy kidneys filter poisons and excess acids from the blood. If they slow down and impurities stay in the system, dizzyhead rust, tired feeling and backache often follow. If you don't rest well at night—if you haven't that sprightly step of health in the daytime—then try Dodd's Kidney Pills. You can depend on Dodd's!

Even Cuba's Best Cigars Can Be Explosive Topic

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Remarks a cigar smoker gets tired of hearing:

"I can smell it all over the house."

"What are you smoking—a rope?"

"He says if they were good enough for his grandfather they're good enough for him —but that cigar smells like one his grandfather left him in his will."

"I know I didn't used to object to it, Elmer, but that was before we were married."

"No, that's him ever there —the one causing the blue fog."

"There is no use of your looking around for your humidor, Elmer. I buried it today while you were at work."

"Please don't put it out in the house. Why not take it out in the back yard and beat it to death with a stick?"

"What is that I smell? Is the place burning down? Oh, hello there, Elmer."

"The thing I simply can't stand is how they look in the ashtrays after they finish with them."

CALL FOR DOCTOR

"Doctor, are you absolutely sure there is no major disease I can tell him is caused by cigars?"

"I heard somewhere that psychiatrists say cigar smoking is a sign or oral infantilism. They're just big overgrown babies—trying to return to the cradle."

"I am telling you for the last time: I simply will not tolerate having our house smell like a pool parlor."

"I don't know why they should taste funny. All I did was dip the ends of them in perfume—so they'd have a pleasanter aroma."

"Yes, you can play with daddy's cigars, children. Mommy'll give you a cent for each one you break."

"What's that one made of, Elmer—Chinese punk?"

"I'd give anything if you switched to a pipe—even if it was an opium pipe."

"No, don't call the fire department. It's only Elmer, lighting up another one."

ONTARIO

HUMAN RIGHTS DAY

TODAY, on the 14th Anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights —we can note with some satisfaction, that in the past year our Province has taken another substantial step toward implementing its principles by the enactment of the Ontario Human Rights Code.

By bringing together into a single statute all of the various human rights legislation passed since 1944, by enlarging the scope of the Ontario Human Rights Commission and by appointing a full-time Director with additional staff, we are now in a much better position to proceed with a greatly expanded educational program designed to make the aims of the Code better known and understood by our people.

It is a matter for gratification too, that in the development of its program of education and enlightenment the Commission is receiving the active and wholehearted co-operation of our churches, schools, industry, trade unions, and a wide variety of community organizations. This is surely the best proof that our citizens, individually and collectively, look upon our Human Rights Code as a reflection of the community conscience; that they are prepared to play their full part in applying its principles in their daily relationships, not just because the law requires it, but because truly enlightened social behaviour demands it.

While we deplore and condemn violations of human rights elsewhere in the world and stand aghast before such ugly manifestations as the Berlin Wall, we must never cease to concern ourselves with those walls of prejudice which still exist in our own community—and sometimes in our own minds — and which deny to our fellow citizens that justice and equality of opportunity which is their inalienable right. Justice, like charity, should begin at home.

Let Human Rights Day be, among other things, a time for self examination in order to make certain that we are faithfully adhering to those lofty principles of the Universal Declaration on which the Parliament of Canada and the Legislature of Ontario have placed their seal.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Much joy indicated as loved one expresses feeling. You gain happiness by helping, advising, sympathizing. Sense of fulfillment indicated. Stress loyalty, devotion. Come out of "emotional rut."

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): Feeling of wanting to be needed is highlighted. Break through emotional barriers. Express yourself. Avoid excesses. Simplicity is key. Strive for sincerity.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23): Uranus "sits" on your sign; means today you are active, bright, able to sell ideas. Be progressive, original. Maintain self-confidence. Do not merely reflect. Instead, act!

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Good day for social and business gatherings. Full Moon in good aspect to your sign. Means today you rise to any occasion. You can create "profitable situation." Do so!

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Inner strength must be maintained. Associates may try to project self-doubt. Realize you are on right track. Answer dus perisxing question. But first clear matters.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Nothing happens "halfway" today! Almost every hour filled with change, romance, opportunity. Your job is to perceive, be selective. Maintain common sense attitude.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Utilize powers of discrimination. Realize that only sustained effort pays dividends. Be moderate, calm. Get needed rest. Don't throw caution to winds. Remember future.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Intense feelings come to love. Restlessness indicates basic need for enlarging horizons. Move toward intellectual activity. Investigate community activities, night classes.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Dealing with those in authority highlighted. Be on guard against waste, repetition. Assume responsibility. Recent changes have occurred around you. These now affect you.

If today is your birthday . . . you are able to make important decisions. You have talent for communicating thoughts; very good for teaching helping officers to better understand complicated Space Age.

Canadians Said on Way To the Greatest Christmas Buying Spree in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadians are on the greatest Christmas buying spree in history.

By the time the last footsore clerk has soaked the last callous and father has exchanged the last necktie, the cash registers can be expected, to have rung up about $87,000,000 more retail business than the record-breaking holiday season of 1961.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press indicates that wallets will be opened in wider right across the country, though the amount of increase may be somewhat under the national average in the Atlantic provinces and a little higher on the Prairies.

The forecast by the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, the all-Canada boost should be about five per cent over the $1,725,341,000 top for December of last year. That's a bit higher than the average jump of the last five years.

"There's been a terrific boopy spicy apparent in business in recent weeks' and this is reflected in Christmas buying," says David A. Gilbert, general manager of the association in Toronto.

ACCENT ON QUALITY

A major trend, he says, is that this year more shoppers tend to be concentrating on quality rather than price. Brand names and nationally advertised products are favored.

Early observations from some major centres:

Vancouver: Department store sales are running ahead of last year. Best-selling items are in the $5 class. Christmas card buying was earlier than usual.

Edmonton: Early buying was slow but a whirlwind finish is expected. Favorites include talking dolls, home workshop tools and high-priced toiletries.

Regina: Sales are off to a late start because there hasn't been any snow but major department stores say that since Dec. 1 they have been running as much as 25 per cent ahead of last Christmas when the effects of the Prairie drought were felt. Big toys such as trucks, plastic planes and large dolls are popular.

Winnipeg: A better crop year has brought more money out. No particular trend in gift selection visible.

Toronto: Tariff "austerity" and Ontario's "Buy Canadian" drive have stimulated sale of home products. Favorites include winter sports gear, Canadian books, science kits. Electric trains are down, and not many gift-wrapped automobiles will be delivered Christmas morning.

Montreal: One department store says sales are not as good as last year, with clothing away down because of the weather. But another says they are much better.

Saint John, N.B.: Business is "exceptionally good," despite lack of Christmas-type weather. A trend to earlier shopping has developed.

Halifax: Sales were reported about people wearing warmth, but winter footwear sales were down.

Charlottetown: Yule business was slow because of low potato prices and summer like weather. Farmers were still plowing and harvesting late crops in early December.

St. John's, Nfld.: Trade was brisk, with most stores offering the greatest variety of merchandise ever. But merchants approach the record season of predicted business would not be.

Conservatives Hold P.E.I. In Election

Premier Walter Shaw Returned With 19 Seats

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Jubilant Premier Walter Shaw looked like a man half his 74 years Monday night after becoming the first Conservative premier to win re-election in Prince Edward Island since 1915.

The election of the 66-year-premier, overjoyed with the outcome of the election that gave his Conservatives 19 of the 30 seats in the legislature, was a cheery as Santa Claus after the pre-Christmas vote...."I'm truly, truly happy ... and proud," he said.

Final standings:

	1962	1959
Pcs	19	22
Lib	11	8

Although the Liberals gained three seats—including that of provincial Treasurer Melvin J. McQuaid—the ablest in island politics for many years"—the premier said the outcome "vindicates my government's policy." He was "very disappointed" at the defeat of Mr. McQuaid, his only cabinet loss.

The premier took Mel's defeat hard, said a source close to Mr. Shaw.

NOT PLANNING TO RETIRE

The premier's appearance after his re-election seemed in itself almost a denial of rumors that he plans to retire shortly. In hospital with a glandular ailment this summer, Mr. Shaw has been mentioned as the next P.E.I. lieutenant-governor. To these suggestions, he recently said: "Why should a young fellow like myself, in the middle of zip and good health, want to retire?"

He will be 75 in 10 days and is Canada's oldest premier. After a civil service career he became premier in 1959 when the Conservatives ended 24 years of Liberal rule.

The government's re-election was reported by two hours after the polls closed. With all ballots counted there were only minute changes in the parties' share of the popular vote compared with the 1959 election, also a straight two-party fight.

NOT TOO DISAPPOINTED

Liberal Leader Alex W. Matheson, 39-year-old former island premier, showed only slight signs of disappointment.

"I expected we might win but at least we gained some seats," he said. As to his own future he

TWO CONVICTED KILLERS HANGED BACK-TO-BACK

Police Push Back Pickets About Jail

TORONTO (CP) — Two convicted killers were hanged back to back at the Don Jail early today while police pushed back protesting pickets outside the jail in freezing temperatures.

Arthur Lucas, 54, and Ronald Turpin, 29, were the first two persons to be hanged together in Canada in 10 years.

Lucas, a Detroit Negro, died for slashing the throats of a man and woman in Toronto last year.

The last previous double hanging in Canada was Dec. 16, 1952, when Leonard Jackson and Steve Suchza went to the Don Jail gallows for the slaying of a policeman.

More than 200 persons gathered at the jail gates Monday night. About 50 of them carried placards protesting capital punishment. They paraded until midnight, scheduled time for the hangings, then tossed the placards and bowed their heads in silence.

WATCH THE JAIL

More than 100 curious onlookers watched the dimly lit jail from across a street. Most were youths. Others sat in cars and watched the jail from a nearby service station lot.

Notices declaring the deaths of the two men were posted outside the jail door at about 12:30 a.m. and violence nearly erupted as onlookers crossed police barricades and pushed their way towards the jail.

A death - watch service was held at Don Heights United Church in suburban Scarborough. Rev. J. Franklin Chidley

CIVIL SERVANTS GET PAY HIKE FROM MINISTER

Wages Retroactive To Oct. 1, 1961

OTTAWA (CP)—After waiting for up to 14 months, 65,000 federal civil servants finally got the word from the top man Monday that their pay increases have gone through.

Finance Minister Nowlan announced the move in the Commons, thus ending the pay "freeze" which was introduced in mid-July as part of the government's austerity drive to meet the June foreign exchange crisis.

About 50,000 clerical and administrative employees will get increases retroactive to Oct. 1, 1961. Another 10,000 in hospital and penitentiary work will draw boosts with nine or 12 months back time involved. A further group of from 3,000 to 6,000 hourly-rated workers, whose increases were delayed several months, also get retroactive increases.

About 25,000 of those involved live in the Ottawa-Hull area. Total bill for the pay hike, to Dec. 31 is $30,000,000.

STUDY OTHER RAISES

Mr. Nowlan also reported that pay changes are being studied for postal, customs and immigration department staff. Any increases in this group would date back to last Oct. 1.

The armed forces and the RCMP are not involved in the increases announced Monday.

The pay changes vary because rates are set largely on a com-

British Troops Surround Rebel-Held Jail at Seria

SERIA, Brunei (Reuters) — British forces today virtually regained control of the rebel-held oil town of Seria.

The town, with the exception of the police station which remained in rebel hands, was taken by a combined force of Queen's Own Highlanders and Gurkha troops.

Sources close to the fighting said the rebels, believed to be about 50 strong, were still holding nine Europeans at hostages in the station.

The British troops hoped a show of force would persuade the rebels to give up their fat-string, four-day-old revolt in this British oil-rich protectorate on the island of Borneo.

About 200 soldiers, of the Queen's Own Highlanders advanced toward Seria's rebel-held shopping centre area from two sides. They had established contact with most of the 400 European working at various Shell Oil Company installations in Seria.

The British pressed on with their police action by local and imported forces to oust, down the revolt, officially believed to be the work of Brunei-born Malays who have close affinities with Indonesia and oppose the proposed Federation of Malaysia, which might include this sultanate.

Lt.-Col. W. G. McHardy, commander of the force of Highlanders, reported six rebels killed and 10 wounded in clashes with his outfit, which suffered no casualties. He said his men "have captured a good few rebels" and said the revolt in Seria "will soon be finished."

McHardy said he had no information of European hostages having been harmed by the rebels.

Reports indicated British troops were pressing against pockets of rebels holding out near the capital, Brunei Town.

A British push against rebels at Kuala Belait was expected to develop later in the day.

Among the areas relieved by the highlanders after their arrival by air Monday was Panaga police station. It was said to have been in a desperate situation under rebel seige.

Meanwhile, the Sultan of Brunei, as head-of-state, has signed a warrant for the arrest of rebel leader Inche Azahari, now in Manila. Azahari's Rayaat (People's) party has been banned.

British warships brought more troops to Labuan, a tiny island staging post in north Borneo waters, during the night as the British troop buildup continued.

Three Royal Navy vessels were on their way to Brunei from Singapore with more British troops.

PEI Result Gives Federal Tories Chilly Comfort

OTTAWA (CP) — Re-election Monday of the Prince Edward Island Conservative government in the third of four provincial contests within a month was comfort, but of a chilly sort, for the Conservative federal government.

The reduced majority accorded Premier Walter Shaw in the island province was cause, on the other hand, for some modest jubilation in the Liberal party.

Today's Cuckoo

When a man becomes a success his wife takes most of the credit and the government takes most of the cash.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Cold Arctic air covers most of Canada east of the Rockies. Temperatures dropped to well below zero overnight in Northern Ontario. Thick fog in north of Lake Superior, reported 19 below zero. Frequent snow squalls are occurring southeast of Lake Huron and Georgian Bay. More snow and considerable drifting is forecast for this area today and Wednesday. Scattered snowflurries and continuing cold weather is forecast for the remainder of Ontario.

Mr. Shaw went into the election campaign with 22 of the 30 seats in the legislature. He emerged from the struggle with a party contest with 19.

For one thing, it was a straight, two-party contest in a province in which Social Credit and New Democratic Parties if they exist at all—are historically counted as political forces. They ran no candidates.

For another, the election issues were almost entirely provincial and parochial with little reference to federal issues or federal party politics.

In the circumstances, Monday's voting could hardly be regarded as an index of national political thinking in advance of what might be the result in a national election at this time.

The island contest followed elections last month in Quebec and Newfoundland, in which Liberal governments were returned to power handily. A fourth provincial vote takes place Friday in Manitoba.

The Conservatives, finding little if anything to cheer about in Quebec and Newfoundland, are looking hard for straws in the wind that might portend a reflection for them among the electorate.

Rusk Takes No Issue With Acheson

U.S. Bent on Down-Grading Britain

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States appears to be deliberately attempting to downgrade Britain in the eyes of the world, perhaps in the hope of forcing Britain to step up her entry into the European Common Market.

While describing Britain as still a big power, State Secretary Dean Rusk took no issue Monday with the remark by former state secretary Dean Acheson that Britain's present role in world affairs is "about played out."

The gentle manner in which Rusk referred to the Acheson speech made before the West Point Academy last week seemed to indicate some form of tacit approval of what Acheson said.

It is remark that stung the British government, Acheson, who is an adviser to President Kennedy, perhaps is now past an empire and hasn't found a new role in world affairs.

It was Acheson's view that Britain now "wisely" is "attempting to re-enter Europe from which it was banished at the time of the Plantagenets and the battle seems as hard-fought as were those of an earlier day."

Rusk, at a press conference before departing for NATO talks in Paris, said that if he had made that speech, he would have left out several sentences. He didn't say which. But he suggested the main aim of Acheson's remarks was the need to strengthen the North Atlantic alliance, military, economically and politically.

Just what was behind Acheson's sudden attack on Britain hasn't been made clear by the Kennedy administration. However, Kennedy's new trade policy is planned on Britain becoming a member of the European trade bloc. Some element of impatience has been expressed here about further deadlocks in Britain's negotiations.

Undoubtedly, President Kennedy will be asked to make his views clear when he meets with Prime Minister Macmillan at Nassau later this month.

Among other points, Rusk suggested that Soviet-American talks on other issues may make it even likelier that a tidy settlement of the Cuban problem. Several thousands of well-armed Soviet troops are still in Cuba and the Communists haven't agreed to American demands for on-site inspection to make sure offensive weapons have been completely eliminated from the Caribbean island.

As for NATO's future, the U.S. would be prepared to participate in some form of multilateral NATO nuclear force, though Rusk gave no indication the U.S. would be willing to share custody and control over American nuclear warheads.

U.S. Sees Hope In Reds' Robot Policing Offer

'Black Box' Inadequate But Could Open Road

CP from Reuters-AP

GENEVA—The Soviet Union said today the United States apparently considers itself free to continue nuclear weapons tests after Jan. 1.

"If so, such action will cause corresponding action by other nuclear powers," declared Soviet delegate Semyon Tsarapkin before the three-power nuclear test ban subcommittee of the 17-nation disarmament conference. "The responsibility will be entirely on the United States."

Tsarapkin spoke after the United States said it would not accept an uncontrolled moratorium on underground nuclear tests "no matter what the Soviet Union may do in future weeks with respect to its own test series."

The reference to a moratorium, Tsarapkin said, was "laughable." He said no one was asking for a moratorium.

There has been considerable speculation here the Soviets planned to announce soon that they will stop all nuclear tests after Jan. 1, and will use the time to refine the weapons they

Speaking against any uncontrolled moratorium, U.S. delegate Charles Stelle also criticized Russia's flayed-it-back box suggestion for policing a nuclear test ban as inadequate. But he also welcomed it "as, hopefully, a forerunner of things to come."

Stelle noted that the Soviet Union said it would allow international inspectors to place and retrieve the black boxes — unmanned seismic stations guarding against sneak underground tests—in Russia.

Stelle argued such a proposal "would well be inconsistent in principle by the Soviet Union of what the West has been asking it to accept with regard to on-site inspections."

CLC Warns Postwar Jobless Peak May Be Reached

OTTAWA (CP) — A post-war unemployment peak may be reached this winter, the Canadian Labor Congress said today in sharply criticizing the federal government's economic policies.

"We are fearful of the future in view of unemployment compounded by the fact that there is a real lack of adequate measures to offset this economic decline," said the 1,050,000-member labor group referring to forecasts of some recession early next year.

It said the economy program initiated by the government last June to meet the foreign exchange crisis has a restrictive effect that aggravates an already serious unemployment situation.

The CLC, headed by President Claude Jodoin, was making its annual submission to the cabinet.

The submission was made available to the press before presentation.

The 7,500-word brief said that the CLC feels the right to strike continues to be essential in a free society, contrary to some claims that strike action is obsolete and unjustified.

It urged strengthening of the CDC's position and said differ-

NEW UN DRIVE TO END KATANGA SECESSION SEEN

Bitter Attack Made On Moise Tshombe

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — A new drive to end the secession of Katanga province from the Congo was in the works today after one of the most bitter diplomatic attacks yet made against President Moise Tshombe by the United Nations.

Secretary-General U Thant's deputy in The Congo Monday addressed to the Katanga chief what amounted to a threat and a challenge, indirectly involving such countries as Britain, Belgium and France as well as The Congo.

Ghana's Robert K. A. Gardiner, commander of the UN Congo force, told Tshombe in a letter that he was responsible for civil war and that the UN proposed going forward immediately with Thant's plan for "reconciliation" between the central Congolese government and the dissident Katanganese regime.

WILL USE ARMS

Informants stressed Gardiner's words could not be interpreted as a threat of military action by the UN force and the letter assured Tshombe nothing of the kind was contemplated, but the letter added:

"It is a strong force, however, and is well armed. Its arms are for defensive purposes only. But it will use those arms vigorously wherever and wherever it may be attacked, and in such situations it will henceforth take the procedural measures deemed necessary to avoid a recurrence of the attack."

The UN report says that as of Nov. 30 The Congo force had 19,936 men from 20 countries, including 935 from Canada, mostly army signalmen.

Diplomats said Thant could be expected to make a state-

5 Communist Countries Want To Buy Wheat

EDMONTON (CP)—Negotiations are under way for long-term deals with five Communist-bloc countries which could mean the annual sale of 50,000,000 bushels of wheat, Agriculture Minister Alvin Hamilton said Monday.

The five countries are Poland, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Hungary.

"What we are saying to them is this: You use your grain for feed to build up your livestock industry. We'll supply you with grain for food. That's agriculture ministers like the idea."

Mr. Hamilton said in an interview such deals would allow for long-range planning, and diversification of supply by Red countries would be to their advantage.

He had no comment concerning reports of a new major wheat deal with Communist China, but said he will make an announcement in Parliament "when the opportunity arises."

Appeal Court Reserves Judgment on Picket Duty

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Court of Appeal reserved judgment Monday in a case involving the right of Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America (CLC) of Windsor to communicate information peacefully by displaying placards at a clothing store.

Hersee of Woodstock Limited appealed from an earlier judgment by Chief Justice J.C. McRuer, who said that the members of the ACWA in Windsor were exercising a common law right by causing a man to walk in front of the store with a placard carrying a statement of fact.

The chief justice said the placard implied an invitation to those in sympathy with organized labor to buy only goods bearing a union label. He dismissed an application by Hersee's for an injunction against Peter Goldstein, Stanley Clair and Charles E. Carson and dissolved an interim injunction granted by Justice W. Cross of Woodstock Aug. 30.

The Windsor picketing was organized in connection with a labor dispute between ACWA and Deacon Brothers Sportswear Limited of Belleville.

ASKED FOR PROTEST

Chief Justice McRuer was told that the defendants visited the owners of Hersee's and asked him to protest to Deacon Brothers, one of Hersee's suppliers, that Deacon goods were not union - made. The owner refused and a couple of Clair and Goldstein carried the placards in question saying the outlet sold Deacon goods made by non-union labor and that shoppers should look for a union label in buying men's and boys' clothing.

Horace Krever, counsel for Hersee's, said the picketing in question amounted to interference with the plaintiff's trade, that secondary picketing is illegal.

Mr. Justice J. R. Aylesworth said the union told Hersee it was conducting an educational campaign. Mr. Krever said the union did not need to visit Hersee's store to communicate information to the public.

The mere appearance of a picket would injure the plaintiff's business, said Mr. Krever, because to trade unionists and their friends it is almost treasonous to cross a picket line.

Both Mr. Krever and John Osler, counsel for ACWA, said they knew of no case which held that secondary picketing in itself is illegal in Ontario Mr. Osler said the ACWA had used no illegal means in its efforts to advance its interests.

Judge Presides Over First Court Sessions

Ontario's most recently-appointed Supreme Court justice this week is presiding over his court sessions in Belleville.

Mr. Justice E. L. Haines was sworn in Saturday as the latest appointment by the province's senior judiciary.

Monday afternoon he took his place on the bench to preside over the current Hastings County non-jury sessions of civil legal actions.

The new Justice, a resident of Windsor, is no stranger, however, to the Quinte district, as he publicly noted minutes after taking to the bench in his county courthouse.

"It is indeed a pleasure to have my first court in Belleville," he said, as he looked to the assembled barristers, representing the County Bar Association.

"The Quinte Islands and bays have long been a favorite spot of mine," he added, recalling he had spent vacations for many years in the Picton area.

"I am very partial to this area with its traditions . . ." he said. "There has been a minimum of litigation, fortunately, as far as its people are concerned," added the Judge, amid laughter from the barristers.

"I thing the people of this county are exceedingly fortunate in having a bar (association) which represents its cases so well," concluded Justice Haines, complimenting the lawyers.

He was welcomed to the initial session of his bench appointment by the Association president Don Templeman.

A.N.A.F. Weekly News

Last Saturday evening, a very successful turkey roll was held in the ANAF clubrooms. Lots of turkeys and other prizes were won. Comrade Bill Keller was master of the rolls and also entertained with his witty remarks and the odd song. Also a spot of dancing was held to give the folks a chance to stretch between rolls. An unexpected but honored guest was Mr. Joe Gauthier, an old comrade-in-arms of Comrade Harold Drecup. He was on the eve of flying to Egypt to serve with the U.N. Forces stationed there. Harold and he both served with the Black Watch during the Korean crisis.

Another big turkey roll will be held next Saturday evening so come on down and get a cut at the good variety of prizes.

All arrangements are complete for the Children's big Christmas Tree Party next Saturday morning. Again we ask for a good number of the members to volunteer their much needed help to set things up in readiness for the children. Please be at the clubroom at 9 a.m. We can use all the help we can get.

The ANAF Pipe Band journeyed to Madoc to march in the Santa Claus Parade held there last Saturday and were enthusiastically welcomed with deep appreciation for their help in making Madoc's most successful event. Don't forget the next regular meeting on Thursday evening at 8 p.m. when candidates for the 1963 executive will be nominated. Let's have a good turn out and nominate the members of your choice. See you there, Dec. 13th at meeting.

Night Nomination.

Remember to reserve New Year's Eve for the Big Party. Prizes, surprises, novelties and lunch. Tickets will be available at the steward's. Harry and Wood, charged with attempted robbery Saturday morning of the CNR ticket office.

Wood was arrested Saturday after ticket agent William Enright told police a man disguised with a nylon stocking ordered him to hand over the office cash — then fled, when the agent raised the alarm.

At his initial appearance this morning, Wood also requested legal aid be provided for his defence.

"I can assure you this does not come with the ratians," the magistrate warned him. "You have got to show that you have no means and have never had means."

He remanded Wood one week after setting bail.

Week's Remand Given Accused, Bail Is Set

Bail of $2,500 cash, or $5,000 property, is the minimum set for Belleville man, Harry A. Wood, charged with attempted robbery Saturday morning of the CNR ticket office.

Wood was arrested Saturday after ticket agent William Enright told police a man disguised with a nylon stocking ordered him to hand over the office cash — then fled, when the agent raised the alarm.

At his initial appearance this morning, Wood also requested legal aid be provided for his defence.

"I can assure you this does not come with the ratians," the magistrate warned him. "You have got to show that you have no means and have never had means."

He remanded Wood one week after setting bail.

Kenneth Lantz Tells Rotarians About 4-H Work

The local Rotary Club received the work of the 4-H Clubs in Hastings County during its weekly dinner meeting in the Quinte Hotel yesterday afternoon with 18 members of the 4-H Clubs at RCIVS and Moira Secondary School as the club's guests and Kenneth Lantz, director of extension for the Ontario Department of Agriculture, as guest speaker.

Mr. Lantz traced the history of the 4-H Clubs since their establishment as boys' and girls' clubs in 1915, when there were 400 members during the first year. It was in 1923 that the clubs' name was changed to 4-H and during 1962 there have been 30,000 members, he said.

The original purpose of the movement—to build up the positive qualities of citizenship in the members by the philosophy of learning to do by doing, has never changed, said the speaker, although the program has changed with the times to reflect the changes in agriculture. He credited the advance to the same objective as being the major factor in the success of the project and the fact that it has never experienced a setback since it was started in 1915.

He noted that there had been several important changes in the structure of agriculture since 1915, especially in the rapid increase in size of the farm and the decrease in farm labor at the rate of 3,000 per year since World War II.

Some things haven't changed, however, he advised, and suggested that there were still tremendous opportunities for those who possess the qualities, courage and intelligent use of information were the first requirements in making a career.

Any person who could exercise these qualities had an excellent chance to do well in agriculture, concluded Mr. Lantz.

It was announced that the Rotary Club will be sponsoring a course for leadership training which will commence shortly after the start of the new year. This course is designed to help train people who would be interested in taking an active part in providing leadership in the many youth activities for the community. It was decided to undertake such a project when a survey of the city's young groups revealed that lack of leaders was the most pressing need expressed by all concerned.

Peter Cleary, editor of the Nicholson Catholic College school paper, was the student guest of the club for the meeting. President Dr. Burns conducted the meeting.

STRATFORD (CP) — City council Monday night approved the issuing of courtesy parking tickets to convention delegates and other recognized visitors to the city who break traffic rules. Police Chief James Torrance approves council's decision.

Year's Permits Now Close to $4,500,000

Although there were no major projects such as the shopping centre to boost the total, construction in the city of Belleville this year will pass the four-and-a-half million dollar mark.

Total was stated today by city building inspector Grant Stalkie who reported that total building for the year now stood at close to $4,500,000 with still three weeks to go.

During November the building total was topped by $193,700 was residential. Permits for 13 single family dwellings and one duplex were taken out at city hall during the month.

Biggest single item during the month was a permit for the construction of an addition at St. Thomas' Church Parish House on Bridge Street. The addition which is now well upwerwy will cost $30,000.

One other big item on the month's list was a permit for the construction of a new shell service station at the corner of Cannifton Road and College Street, at a cost of $20,000.

Antique Toys, Games Shown At Museum

These include a Noah's Ark complete with hand carved animals, an early soldier shooting game, marbles, and other toys and games. They have been loaned by Thomas S. Ransom of Belleville.

Also featured is a model steam engine designed and built by Ken Bush, a pupil at Moira Secondary School. Dolls' clothes and other toys are also displayed.

The toy display is in addition to the special paper display now entering its last week.

The museum is open Tuesday through Friday evening from 7 to 9 and there is a special puppet demonstration at 7.30 each evening.

This special display arranged by Rodger Greig is entertaining most for the whole family.

Connie Stickle doesn't seem to be too perturbed about being one of the first to use the new Fine-O-Meter boxes which went into operation today. Actually, Connie didn't get a ticket—she's just demonstrating how easy parking tickets may now be paid.

Parking Meter Violators Can Now Use Fine Boxes

Bargain days commenced today for parking meter violators in Belleville!

This morning Fine-O-Meter boxes in the downtown Belleville area went into operation. Through their use the usual $1 parking ticket for overtime parking at street meters can be settled "by cents — without the trouble of paying the fine at city hall.

From today parking tickets given out are in the form of an envelope which can be used to drop the cents into the Fine-O-Meter boxes, positioned about mid-block on streets in the downtown area.

Inspector J. Clair Hayes said motorists receiving a parking ticket will be permitted to drop their 50 cents into the Fine-O-Meter boxes within 48 hours of the time marked on the ticket—Sundays and holidays excluded.

CAN'T STAY ALL DAY

But receipt of a parking ticket doesn't enable the offending motorist to enjoy all-day parking for the amount of his fifty cent fine.

To discourage this Inspector Hayes noted that parking tickets will be handed out for every hour a car remains at a meter under violation.

Also, only parking meter violation fines may be paid through the Fine-O-Meter boxes. Fines for parking on rush hour streets or in prohibited areas must be paid in the conventional manner.

Persons whose parking fines are not paid within the 48-hour period, they will be processed through the courts in the usual manner with court costs added.

COURTESY MEASURE

Fine-O-Meter boxes were adopted by the city as a courtesy measure to motorists who in many instances might be seriously inconvenienced by having to go to the city hall to pay a parking ticket.

A similar system of paying parking fines in operation at the town of Lindsay was investigated by Alderman Jack Ireland on account of the already light committee chairman.

Ask Approval For Debentures Of $43,000

TWEED — Representation to the Ontario Municipal Board for approval to issue debentures to cover an amount of $43,000 for the proposed community arena and recreation centre here is expected to be made within the next two weeks Harold Cantelon, chairman of the citizens' committee organizing this project, said this morning.

Municipal board approval is required to cover the raising of the $18,000 approved by Hungerford council and the $23,000 approved by Tweed council to support this project, which got underway earlier this year.

Already $15,000 have been obtained through the generosity of various individuals and firms and further efforts of the committee via such devices as a semi-weekly, bingo, which has been raking about $400 to $900 a month.

With the approval of the Municipal Board for the debentures it is expected that construction could be started early this coming spring.

The building is to be constructed on the fair grounds, so that the community will get the maximum possible use of it. Original estimates for the proposed plan have centred around the $80,000 mark which took into consideration the fact that it was originally thought construction would take place during the winter months.

Another look is to be taken at construction costs in view of the present spring building schedule stated Mr. Cantelon. The committee is expected to make this matter in the near future.

Three Windsor Youths Are Sent for Trial

Three Windsor youths today were committed for trial for possession of stolen goods, after magistrate C. Ivy Wills gave his ruling on a legal poser.

Last Tuesday crown attorney John Deverell valued the value of the goods charged in the youths' possession below $50. For an offence to be heard in a higher court, the charge must be over a minimum of $50, and the prosecution action was argued by defence counsel, Robert Temple.

This morning magistrate Wills said he could reach no other conclusion than were the amendment to the charge allowed it would prejudice the defendants.

He therefore took the evidence submitted last week as a presentation for a preliminary hearing and ordered the three youths to stand trial.

They were arrested November 22 after being stopped by city police on Highland Ave. Later, Molsworth Avenue station at Herchimer Avenue and Dundas Street East was found ransacked by thieves.

Bail demanded by crown attorney Pringle for each of the accused was $1,000 cash, $2,000 property.

Await China's Reaction to Nehru's Stand

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—India awaited today China's reaction to Prime Minister Nehru's rejection of Peking's terms for a cease-fire in their Himalayan border conflict. Observers here thought renewal of fighting was a strong possibility.

In a broadcast today, the Chinese said they suspected India of "deliberately sabotaging" Peking's one-sided cease-fire "and creating a tense situation on the border." The broadcast charged that Indian military planes flew reconnaissance missions Monday night the war might be long and hard but India would emerge victorious by freeing its territory of Chinese invaders.

He said India had welcomed the Chinese proclamation of a cease-fire Nov. 22 after 33 days of warfare.

But the Chinese should withdraw completely from India, Nehru said, instead of making proposals that would leave them in the Ladakh area of northwestern India.

Retiring Trustee Opposes Teaching Christianity Only

TRENTON — Mrs. Gabrielle Griffiths, retiring from the Trenton school board this year, refused to the thinking on religious education in public schools at the year-end meeting of the board last night.

Mrs. Griffiths charged that it was "dogma" to teach religion from a Christian viewpoint only. She said that there were many students of other religions in the school and that to the students as a whole would never learn tolerance if the Christian doctrine were taught exclusively.

"This tends to break people up," said Mrs. Griffiths.

The retiring chairman of education offered the suggestion that a course in comparative religions be taught in the province's elementary schools and that the children be told that there are other religions besides Christianity in the world and that each religion has its merits.

Mrs. Griffiths, who has previously come out strongly in favor of French language instruction for elementary schools, told the board members that it was becoming increasingly apparent that such instruction was needed in Canadian schools. She said that the shifting around of armed services personnel made the teaching of French almost a "must."

Mrs. Griffiths presented her resignation to board chairman L. G. Phinney a few weeks ago, naming the pressure of home duties as her reason for leaving the board a year before her term expired.

Present at last night's meeting were the chairman, L. G. Phinney, who is also retiring this year; George Greer, another retiring member; T. S. Ketcheson, E. D. Topping and Mrs. Griffiths.

Sitting in on the meeting were E. M. Parker Jr., Donald Sutherland, public relations director Steevie and James Bowman, members of the 1963 board by acclamation.

'STALE SMELL' IN GYMS

Board secretary Eva Baker read a letter from Trenton health board chairman, H. S. Pans (in which Mr. Pans complained about a stale smell in school gyms. Mr. Pans suggested that the air be changed in the gyms more frequently.

Miss Marjoria Gothard, a health board member was present at the school board meeting, said that when the school principals will be asked to look into the matter. Each gym is fitted with a large fan, which, in theory, removes the stale smell after each gym class.

Mr. Phinney reported that the president of the Trenton Rotary Club, C. A. Baker, had attended an assembly in the high school yesterday and presented the school with an extension to the auditorium stage. Board members voted to extend the thanks of the board to the Rotary club. The stage extension will be used when the school glee club makes an appearance and also for musical revues and concerts.

High school principal John Garrett was asked to inform the parents of a high school student that the out-of-town pupil must be removed from the school. The parents have failed to their daughter's tuition fee for December, which was due the first of the month. According to reports, the fee has been slow in coming in all fall, because of an argument between the parents and the owner of the sub-division in which their home is located. The sub-divider is reported to have promised to pay the student's tuition until such time as the sub-division be annexed by the town, but has failed to do so. Out-of-town students are required to pay $30 a month.

E. M. Parker, Jr. and Donald Sutherland asked if there were not some other method of coping with the situation than having the principal tell the girl she would have to go home from school.

Mr. Garrett assured the 1963 board members that he had no intention of taking the student out of a class and sending her home. He said that he would get in touch with the parents by telephone and inform them of the board's decision to bar the student from school since the tuition fee had not been paid.

Public school principal V. P. Carswell read out the reports of school principals for the month of November.

MUSEUM PROBLEM

P. N. Belcness, principal at Dufferin school, asked that something be done about the museum at his school. Many of the stuffed animals and birds in the ancient exhibit are dirty and dusty, he said, and were of very little educational value at present. Mr. Carswell suggested that the Hastings Historical Society might like part of the collection (which also includes old documents) for the museum in Belleville. Some board members felt that the items in the school museum might be cleaned up.

Mr. Belcness also complained about drivers running bicycars around the schoolyard and up onto the sidewalk. He said that a park, such as the yard one day, had been removed that night by an unknown driver.

Since there was an element of danger to school children when cars being allowed in the schoolyard, the board members promised some action to keep them away from the part of the yard in question.

E. E. Bedford, principal at Queen Elizabeth school, said that he wished greater speed could be achieved in removing tree trunks from the school yard. He said that these created a hazard.

J. F. Delong, principal at the North Trenton school, again pointed out the need of a school auditorium and J. C. Amm, principal Mr Prince Charles, suggested that a pay telephone be installed at the school. Mr. Amm said that parents and visitors to the school used the phone in his office and suggested that the office was not a public waiting room. Mr. Carswell suggested that a longer cord be put on the office phone and the instrument taken out into the hall should a parent, etc., wish to use it.

The inaugural meeting of the 1963 board will be held in the board room at North Trenton school on January 2nd at 7.00 p.m.

Country Club Shows Profit Of $2,131.22

TRENTON — Retiring president Jim Duncan told the Trenton Country Club annual general meeting last night that the club had had a "very successful" year, particularly where finances were concerned. The club ended the year with a $2,131.32 profit — $1,000.50 more than last year.

Mr. Duncan said it was gratifying that the golf course had at last become club property and that money could now be spent on improvements to the course without fear of losses.

The outgoing president reminded members they now had a new set of bylaws, to replace those in effect since the club was formed in 1921, and these were duly approved. One bylaw that needed no revision, though, was the one allowing for a curling section. This bylaw had been included in the original bylaws but it wasn't until 1959 that the curling rink was finally built. Today, the curling section is a thriving part of the club's activities.

Elected president to replace Mr. Duncan last night was Herman Chambers, formerly curling chairman. The place as head of curling will be taken by Don Hastie, who was also due for retirement last night, but was elected to another term on the executive. Others re-elected last night were Doug Adams, treasurer; Dr. Glynn Jones, house director and Mrs. William Steenburg, social convener. J. Valchar was elected golf chairman while Ralph Weaver, his predecessor, becomes membership chairman.

Mr. Hastie, the outgoing membership chairman told the meeting that club membership, as of yesterday, stood at 415, with six applications pending. Seventy-two persons left the club last year but 99 joined for a net gain of 27 new members.

Mrs. Steenburg also reported a highly successful year, with the ladies' golf section also showing a bank balance surplus. She reminded members that a New Year's party will be held again this year.

Incidentally, the Trenton Country Club received its charter in 1924. The first president was H. F. Whitier and the oldest living president is W. J. Nolan, whose term of office was in 1931.

Y Girls Hold Parents' Night

Almost 200 people visited the YMCA last Saturday evening to attend a Dad and Daughter activities, as they held their annual Parents' Night.

Following an introduction of the various staff members and the girls who take a leading part in the club's activities there was a display of gym activities ranging from the junior group exercises for the youngest members up to the individual skills in gym work which are taught the older and more experienced members.

There was also the performance of the opening ceremony for the Gre-Y Girls Club to demonstrate the different qualities which this group stresses amongst its grade school members. Gre-Y members also put on a playlet which was very much enjoyed.

Another demonstration was that of ornamental swimming, a sport which was just recently started as a girls' activity.

All of the various age groups were represented in the closing point or other throughout the program.

70 Fatalities During Safe Driving Week

OTTAWA (CP) — Governor-General Vanier has issued special citations to 32 Canadian municipalities with populations of 40,000 or more which reported no traffic fatalities during Safe Driving Week, it was announced today.

The Canadian highway safety council sponsored the annual campaign Dec. 1 to 7 in an effort to reduce the number of traffic accidents and deaths in the usually-hazardous month of December.

The Canadian Press reported 70 road fatalities during Safe Driving Week, a new high. Last year the total was 49 and two years ago, 57.

The safety council said Monday the record of 32 safe Safe Driving Week fatalities occurred in small cities and rural areas. There are 32 Canadian cities of 40,000 population or more.

PRODUCE MORE STEEL

Canadian production of steel ingots in the week ended Dec. 8 was 2 per cent to 135,270 tons from the preceding week's total of 134,875 tons. Output in the corresponding week in 1961 was 119,520 tons. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

PROCESS MORE OIL

Refineries in Canada processed 26,369,255 barrels of crude oil in October, an increase of 8.9 per cent over last year's October total of 24,222,077 barrels. Refinery consumption in the first 10 months of 1962 rose 5.2 per cent to 254,735,013 barrels from 242,246,773 a year ago.

MARGARINE OUTPUT UP

Output of margarine, including spreads, increased in October to 17,256,000 pounds from 15,852,000 a year ago. Production of refined oils—coconut, salad and cooking—rose to 7,450,000 pounds from 6,297,000, while output of shortening decreased to 18,232,000 pounds from 16,257,000 pounds.

ESTIMATES CROPS

Crops of apples, pears, apricots, sweet cherries, grapes and blueberries were larger in 1962 than last year. However, the bureau's fourth estimate of commercial fruit crops reported smaller crops of plums, prunes, peaches, sour cherries, strawberries, raspberries and loganberries.

CAPITAL INFLOW HIGHER

Canada had a capital inflow of $23,000,000 during October compared with a trade in outstanding stock and bond issues. It was the largest inflow from this source since May, 1961, and was the third consecutive monthly inflow following six months of unusually large capital outflows.

Rebels Against Argentine Govt.

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters)—Commodore Soracio Aniel has rebelled against the Argentine government and appointed himself air force commander-in-chief, the Argentine news agency reports.

He has established headquarters at a submarine officers' school in Cordoba City, the report said.

Coldest Spell of Season Due in Quinte District

The weather serves up a cold cut for the Quinte district tonight with the coldest night since last winter forecast.

Predictions are that temperatures will drop to a low of eight above in the Belleville-Trenton area, becoming progressively colder further north through the district.

Earlier today, the polar-bear weather blast was preceded by a contrasting pattern in the district.

From Belleville north through the Quinte area it was sunny and cloudy. In the Picton area, however, provincial police this morning reported light to heavy snow. Just before noon OPP officers were sent to the scene of one accident. An automobile was reported rolled over on the Demorestville road—although no one was believed injured.

The predicted weather pattern for tonight holds the same winter design for the rest of the province.

COLD PREDICTED

Metropolitan Toronto residents were warned today to brace for the coldest night of the year—with predictions that the temperature would go down to 10 degrees above zero.

Snowflurries were expected to accompany the cold night.

The Georgian Bay area was hit by about two feet of snow Monday, blocking many secondary roads and some sections of the highways.

Walkerton, 50 miles north of Stratford, reported 15 inches of snow and Wingham, about 20 miles south of Walkerton, reported 18 to 22 inches. Owen Sound had seven inches of snow and more was reported on the way.

Northern Ontario was caught in the grip of a mass of Arctic air and most points registered temperatures well below zero.

It was 20 below in Timmins today with 14 inches of snow clogging traffic after wind blew it into drifts as deep as five feet.

HEAVY SNOW AT BUFFALO

In addition to continuing blinding snowstorm that drove hundreds of persons to abandon autos, motorists and trucks along the New York State Thruway during the night swirled on today. Snow plow crews worked around the clock as the storm pounded areas southwest of Buffalo on Lake Erie, and the Watertown vicinity, east of Lake Ontario. The squalls lashed a 100-mile area and continued through the night in temperatures ranging generally through the teens.

More than 150 persons, including about 20 children, piled into the Thruway's Angola service area near here Monday night. A few hours later, approximately 40 adults were directed, three at a time, in a jeep to nearby motels.

Another group of perhaps 150 formed a motor convoy that was escorted by snow plows and state police to Buffalo, where the weather was clear. The 15-mile trip took 2½ hours.

Early today, troopers lined up another convoy of marooned motorists, headed west, and led it to the Angola service area.

In northern New York, all roads near Watertown were reported blocked. Up to 20 inches of snow had fallen on top of a 10-inch blanket.

Areas such as 30 inches of snow had whipped the Lake Erie area Friday and Saturday, and about 18 more accumulated Monday and Monday night.

Most of the people who found refuge in the Angola service area were jovial, even though their cars were stuck in deep snow.

There Is A Difference

Interviewed by the Toronto Globe and Mail about their sentiments regarding capital punishment, with special reference to the Ronald Turpin case, several prominent Canadians have said they see no reason why the law should discriminate between the killing of a policeman and the killing of a private citizen.

According to a recent amendment to the criminal code, there are now two classes of murder in Canada, capital and non-capital. Basically when a private citizen is killed, whether the murder is capital or non-capital depends upon whether the killing was premeditated. But the killing of a police officer who is performing his duty is automatically capital murder, regardless of whether the killing was or was not premeditated. Turpin had not planned the killing of Constable Nash and, had Nash been a private citizen and not a police officer, Turpin would not be liable to the death penalty.

The difference between killing a policeman and the killing of a private citizen is an important one. The objective view is that the police officer accepts the danger as part of his job, and there is some justification for that view. But, maintaining the objective viewpoint, there are good reasons for considering the killing of a police officer more serious than the killing of a private citizen.

The first is that the man who kills a police officer usually does so in a gunfight in a public place. Even those who consider constables an expendable commodity must concede gunfights are a pretty general hazard, and should be avoided. The criminals who kill police "in the line" are given special attention by the police and by the courts will do his best to avoid gunfights.

But the most important reason is that every man who kills a police officer makes other police officers more cautious. If the practice were to become popular, police officers might even become trigger happy. The honest citizen who accidentally runs a red light, or forgets his key and has to break in to his own home at night runs less risk of facing a curious policeman with a drawn and cocked gun, if the officer knows criminals dread being branded as "cop-killers" and the risk of a suspect firing first is relatively small.

Acheson Rebuked

He has drawn a rebuke from Prime Minister Macmillan of Britain for observations he made at a student conference at West Point Military Academy.

Essentially, what Acheson said was Britain is no longer a first-class power. That has been self-evident for years to any reasonably intelligent observer.

It would have been bad enough if Acheson had contented himself with the unpleasant, but obviously true. Instead he added to the commonplace truth a wordy observation, which may be commonplace in many countries but which Acheson should recognize as false.

He shrugged off the Commonwealth as having "no political structure, or unity or strength" and enjoying only "a fragile and precarious economic relationship." Now, as Prime Minister Macmillan observed, this is precisely the same mistake made many times over the past 400 years by such people as Philip of Spain, Napoleon, the Kaiser and Hitler. The Commonwealth was just as far from unity in political structure and in economics in the days when it rallied to support Britain in two world wars—and saved the world long enough for the U.S. to jump, or get pushed, into the fray.

What makes the difference today is that, in a nuclear-armed world, there would be no time for a disunited, weak Commonwealth to gird itself and help Britain save Uncle Sam's bacon.

That, though, is not what keeps Britain from being a first-class power. It is not the Commonwealth's failure, but the facts of nuclear warfare. Britain's possession of an independent nuclear striking force does not raise her to the level of the two giants of today's power politics, the U.S. and Russia, for three reasons. These are the limited size of her striking force, the terribly cramped base from which it must operate and, more powerful than either of these two factors, the temper of the people which makes it extremely unlikely any government dare use this force except as a dying gesture of defiance.

Britain, therefore, will not lead the nations of the world into mass suicide—but if the nations decide to live together, rather than to die together, what makes her a second-class power today will automatically make her a first-class power—and who knows but what the Commonwealth will again rally behind her and once again save the U.S., and the world.

Caught With Pants Down Navy Issue Woollies Passe

By RICHARD JAMESON
(From The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — So the Navy, says Royal Commissioner J. Grant Glassco, has woollies enough to last through the year 1963.

Fascinating figure that, underwear for the RCN stockpiled for 1,000 years.

What a feast for the moths!

But what Commissioner Glassco, a sort of Big Businessworld Private Eye, hired by the Federal Government from Bay Street to track down Waste and Extravagance, failed to relate was how on earth did the Navy manage to do it.

Easy.

Little matter of style.

Not the drop-panel, trap-door fashion that was Naval issue for so long.

Used to be that Canadian seamen routinely were given an annual issue of two suits of the old-fashioned woollies.

And at the time of the Korean War, when all ranks at a loss were stock-piling — the Army and Air Force, too, have been caught with their underwearing hoards of certain items enough to last them a couple of generations — the axing-proof Navy thought it would be only good economy to order a 12-year supply of underwear, a special cut-rate, bargain-basement price.

NOT SO CHIC

Result was that, by 1951, the RCN had 94,000 pairs on hand before a For-Goodness-Sake Stop-Order was issued.

Seven years later, by 1958 the stock had been cut to 61,000 pairs, with consumption - - I wouldn't like to be an admiral - - running a couple of hundred over 8,000 a year.

By this year, another 16,000 pairs should have been used-with the Navy down to 45,000.

Another 4 years, at that rate, and the Navy would have been free and clear, down to the last couple of dozen "long" assuming that the moths would have been lending a helping hand. That would have made it '68, just about five years away.

But it won't it be.

For back in early '58, the sailors suddenly decided that the trap-leaf style was hardly high fashion, declared an unofficial but fleet-wide boycott and left Naval supply officers stuck with something over 60,000 pairs.

This came as a great shock to the Naval Brass, since sturdy undies were considered an integral part of Canadian culture and national heritage.

As a matter of cold statistical fact, Royal Commissioner Glassco let the Navy off rather lightly.

For if the Salts simply will not wear the trap-door fashion, the Navy is not stuck with enough woollies to last a mere 1,000 years, but until the end of time.

LITTLE MATTER OF MONEY

What a difference $100,000 can make.

That is the tidy little financial consideration that persuaded Federal Works Minister Davie Fulton to go for broke as leader of the British Columbia Provincial Progressive Conservative Party — a rather remarkable political organization, it would appear, that has but one single lonely Member in the Legislature, but apparently a goodly bankroll in the bank.

It was no secret — and he especially, made it none—that during the last few years and the West Coast Provincial Conservatives in a minute, except that he need not afford it.

As Federal Works Minister he gets an annual $27,000, comprising the $10,000 Parliamentary Indemnity, $18,000 as a member of the Cabinet, and $2,000 car allowance.

As Leader of the Memberless Provincial Conservatives, he would get not so much as a West Coast woolen vest.

And that was the way it was to be could not live on the tonic's famed scenery or Vancouver Island's bracing ocean air.

The Fultons had to eat.

So somebody — the party's West Coast organization and a host of well-wishers — passed the political hat, and presto, $100,000. Enough to keep the Fultons in groceries with maybe something left over for party re-organization and campaign underwriting until the next B.C. election.

Even so, Davie Fulton, it is a go-for-broke deal. He make it, or he is dead.

Psychopaths In High Places Poison Public

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Some day, far in the future — if we are permitted a future — all persons who influence the public in a significant and substantial way will first be given a rigid and thorough psychiatric examination.

All judges, teachers, administrators, newspaper columnists; all policemen, Army officers, political candidates, physicians; all social workers, magazine editors, advertising executives, labor leaders.

In that day, such an examination will be as routine as our present tests for physical health and professional aptitude. Today, we will not allow someone with cancer or smallpox to contaminate those to whom he comes in contact; in the future, we will not allow the emotionally infected to handle (and mishandle) the public.

I am not referring to the ordinary neurotics, which modern society produces by the millions; I am referring to the psychopathic characters with a deep and desperate need to publish, to blame, to justify their tortured ways by condemning those who follow different ways. Such people are sick as surely as if typhus were bubbling in their blood stream.

There is a man in my own profession, for instance, who fondly imagines himself to be a good Christian, a devoted family man, a bastion of respectability and decency and honesty. And yet when he writes, it is evident even to the clinically untrained eye that he is a cauldron of hates and hostilities, of bitter prejudices and overpowering pride.

Multiply such a personality by the tens of thousands in positions of influence, and we can see how the climate of society is polluted and poisoned daily, in a quite unconscious way. And nothing can be done, since the human race is not yet sophisticated enough, in technique or insight, to recognize and correct such cases of psychopathology.

Yet the surgery from an Army officer of this nature, a school principal, a Criminal Court judge, a Congressman, even a uniformed policeman, is immense — for evil tends to radiate in a widening circle, goodness tends to concentrate upon the private, the intimate, the immediate. It is not by acts like that of Hitler — which is set in motion by unconscious forces in an infected climate, spreading faster than poisoned water.

We have yet to recognize the demonic power of these irrational forces in man, which must be tamed before they conquer us utterly. What happened to the German people was not a political or economic twist, but a pandemic sickness of the psyche, or soul — and it can happen anywhere, any time, until we learn how to give the antitoxin to the fevered mind.

Dec. 11, 1962 . . .

King Edward VIII abdicated 26 years ago today — in 1936 — after only 11 months of a reign that had aroused high expectations. Edward, since then the Duke of Windsor, gave up his throne to marry "the woman I love," the American divorcee Wallis Warfield Simpson.

1941 — The United States declared war on Germany and Italy.

1921 — The Statute of Westminster — recognizing the independent status of the Dominions under the crown—was passed by the British Parliament.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

CLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

December 11, 1942

Tips on What to Do About Prostate Trouble

By JOSEPH S. MOLNER, M.D.

(Note to Miller: This is the second of a series of two articles.)

The danger of postponing treatment for prostate trouble can't be emphasized too much.

Neither can we over-emphasize the comfort that comes from getting proper treatment. With it men begin to get a full night's sleep again. Many are happily astonished at the restoration of energy which was being subtly sapped by prostate infection.

But while simple enlargement of the prostate gland occurs mostly in men past 45 or 50, acute prostatitis can occur at any age. Remember that the painless symptoms are reason enough to start treatment. If you wait for the condition to become painful, you've probably wasted some valuable time, not to mention letting yourself in for unnecessary annoyance.

Is surgery always necessary? Not by any means. Infections can be subdued. Partial closing of the urethra can be reopened. Massage often helps reduce swelling.

In acute cases, hot sitz baths may make the patient more comfortable and can help restore urinary flow. Local antiseptic and excellent treatment is available for those who prefer not to undertake any of these procedures.

Will the person who borrowed two stepladders from the Burrows' insurance office, please return same.

The W. W. Chown Company, hardware dealers and plumbers, have sold their business to the Smith Hardware Company of which Mr. Fred B. Smith will be the manager. The original Smith Hardware Co. was established about 50 years ago by late C. F. Smith, and the business was conducted in the store in which the business is now located. Later the business was sold to the Chown Company, and now the son of the original founder of the business is taking it over. Mr. Fred Smith has been residing in Wainjeg for some years.

Why Protect Loan Sharks?

Toronto Financial Post

Every lender should provide the borrower with at least an approximation of the cost of the money whenever a loan is arranged.

The sensible (and not always simple) request was made before the Royal Commission on Banking and Finance by Toronto lawyer, Arthur Maloney, chairman of the consumer credit committee of the Consumer's Association of Canada.

Mrs. Wilson recognized the difficulty of exact calculations in some forms of instalment loan. "The consumer is not interested in the final declared point," she told the commission.

Many unsuspecting borrowers discover too late that hidden costs make their loans too onerous to repay, particularly when they are dealing with fringe operators in the lending business. Unless they can prove fraud — and this is seldom possible — they have no recourse to the courts.

In Ontario, it has been possible until recently to have the courts reopen loan agreements in instances where charges were considered to be out of proportion to the risks involved. However, the 50-year-old provincial act under which this action was possible has been relaced unconstitutional because interest comes under federal jurisdiction under the British North America Act. (This decision is being appealed by the Ontario Government.)

Requiring lenders to spell out the real cost before a loan is made would prevent much of the distress that some borrowers get themselves into. If this isn't possible federal legislation along the lines of the Ontario law now being tested in the courts should be introduced promptly.

Such laws would not bother legitimate lenders. Britain and many states of the United States protect borrowers by allowing courts to review and reopen loan agreements. Only the predatory would suffer.

Eve Did Not Eat an Apple

Ottawa Journal

Dr. Tatham Whitehead, a lecturer in biology at the Bangor (Wales) University, has caused a stir by writing that the fruit they persuaded Adam to eat could not have been an apple. Dr. Whitehead explained:

"There was an apple in Mesopotamia then. The only edible fruit were apricots and quinces."

The reply of Dr. Austin Farrer, of Oxford, church historian, was:

"It is the apple which has come the symbol. The apricot is unacceptable."

And Dr. Robert Stopford, Bishop of London, said:

"It is possible. But if scholars accept it, it will won't shake the foundations of our faith. I bet people go on saying apple for 2000 years at least."

Dr. Whitehead said he wasn't attempting to refute the Bible.

Hadn't any of them noticed that the Bible doesn't say it was an apple? The Book of Genesis speaks of "the tree of the knowledge of good and evil," of the tree which is in the midst of the garden," and of "the tree whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldest not eat."

But never does it give tree or fruit a name. The apple has been slandered unjustly.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

It is strange the thoughts that weave, like mist, through one's head during funeral services. After you pass a certain age, funerals become so familiar that despite your best intentions, your mind is inclined to wander during the well-known passages of the service that are being read by the clergyman.

At a recent ceremony, the Bible from which the passages were being read was the new version fairly widely accepted in most denominations. And there are just enough changes in the noble old phrases and sentences to irritate elders like me. So my thoughts began to wander. In some indignation, I tried to visualize the sort of self-important scholars who would tamper with the lovely word-music of King James's time, and Shakespeare's. And suddenly, right there in the funeral parlor, I had to suppress some snickers. What, I thought, would the revising scholars do with Shakespeare? For instance:

"Some say that ever 'gainst that season comes
Wherein our Savior's birth is celebrated
The bird of dawning singeth all night long."

How would they improve on that? Would they say:

"Some say that at Christmas, the rooster crows all night?"

Toronto Stocks

All sections but base metals dropped on index, with industrials declining most.

In the main list, Interprovincial Pipe Line fell ¾, Abitibi ¼ and Distillers Seagrams ¾. Bell Telephone, CPR, Bank of Montreal and Dominion Foundries and Steel all dipped in a ¼ to ½ range.

Stedman Brothers, which Monday received an increased takeover offer from Gamble-Skogmo Inc., gained ¼ to 20¼—its best mark this year — on brisk turnover. Gamble-Skogmo boosted its first bid from $17.50 to $20 a share.

On the exchange index, industrials dropped 1.68 to 563.78, golds .25 to 85.73 and western oils .13 to 115.89. Base metals rose .11 to 135.97. The 11 a.m. volume was 512,000 shares compared with 564,000 at the same time Monday.

Among base metals, Consolidated Mining and Smelting, Rio Algom and Hudson Bay Mining all slipped ¼. Gunnar Mining advanced 30 cents to $9.80.

In the western oils list, Canada Southern Petroleums climbed 20 cents to $5.45. Dome dropped ¼ and Home A ¼, while Great Plains Development gained ¼.

Monday Stedman Brothers stole the market spotlight on news that a take-over bid, first announced anonymously last week, has been increased.

Four Britons, Two Americans Receive Prizes

CP from Reuters-AP

STOCKHOLM, Sweden—Four Britons and two Americans received 1962 Nobel Prizes in a glittering ceremony Monday in Stockholm's Concert Hall.

A seventh award - winner, Professor Lev Landa, received his physics prize in a Moscow hospital where he is recovering from injuries suffered in a car crash earlier this year.

American novelist John Steinbeck, author of The Grapes of Wrath and East of Eden, became the sixth American to receive the literature prize.

Cambridge (England) University scientists Dr. Max Perutz and Dr. John Kendrew shared the chemistry prize for work on proteins.

Dr. Francis Crick of Cavendish Laboratory, Cambridge; Dr. Maurice Wilkins of King's College, London; Dr. James Watson of the United States shared the medicine award for work on heredity.

PRESENTED BY KING

More than 2,000 persons in full evening dress saw 80-year-old King Gustaf Adolf present each man with his nobel gold medal and diploma and a cheque for 157,210 Swedish crowns (about $49,672).

Steinbeck, after accepting his prize, appealed to writers around the world to help bring mankind's understanding abreast of the advances of science.

Professor Arne Tiselius, chairman of the Nobel Foundation, announced during the Ceremonies that the 1961 Nobel Peace Prize of $48,840 awarded posthumously to Dag Hammarskjold, had been donated to the Nobel Foundation by Sten Hammarskjold, brother and heir of the late United Nations secretary-general.

There was no Peace Prize for 1962. The prizes are awarded by a foundation set up by Swedish industrialist Alfred Nobel, inventor of dynamite.

Canada to Give More to Help Needy Children

TORONTO — UNICEF, the United Nations Children's Fund, celebrated its 16th birthday today by announcing that Canadians had purchased close to a record $300,000 worth of UNICEF greetings cards so far this year.

David M. Ferguson, UNICEF National Card Chairman, said the increase in sales represented a jump of nearly $125,000 over last year's record-breaking card campaign.

Mr. Ferguson, serving his third year as UNICEF's card chairman, said Canada's contribution to the world-wide cause of the organization would be about 70 per cent higher than ever before.

He said Canada's increased donation would allow UNICEF to help more countries protect their young children and provide greater assistance to the millions of children in the world who need attention immediately.

"In a world where 20 cents can save a child from the blindness of trachoma, UNICEF cards have proved an excellent way for Canadians to provide funds to reduce this dreaded disease in the developing countries of the world."

Of the estimated one billion children in the world, about 250 million live in economically developed countries. Without UNICEF many would not survive.

Juvenile Told Judge He Had Nothing to Say

HAMILTON (CP)—An eight-year-old boy charged with juvenile delinquency after a 23-month-old baby was tortured last month, was led sobbing from juvenile court Monday after he told Judge Hugh Arrell he had nothing to say.

The boy and an eight-year-old companion had previously signed statements in which they told detectives that "all boy babies must be killed."

The pair admitted abducting Kees Hamrath from his parents' back yard where he had been playing. They told police they were unable to keep the child, but that they stabbed him with an ice pick, broke sticks over his head, covered him with dirt, and left him under an empty oil drum in near-freezing temperatures where he was found four hours later.

The second boy has already been made a ward of the Children's Aid Society and will spend 12 months at a home for emotionally disturbed children.

While the boy sobbed in front of the bench Monday, the court was told that the Roman Catholic Children's Aid Society is seeking to have him made a ward and that there will be room for him in several days at a home for emotionally disturbed children.

The society worker said the boy will require a lengthy period of treatment—"a minimum of two years."

The application to have the boy made a ward of the society is continuing, and the case for wardship will be heard Wednesday.

The victim of the attack, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Hamrath, was released from hospital after treatment.

23 Babies Born With Degrees Of Deformity

TORONTO (CP)—An Ontario health department survey has revealed that 23 babies were born with degrees of deformity due to their mothers' use of the drug thalidomide during pregnancy, Health Minister Matthew Dymond said Monday.

Dr. Dymond said during the routine speech debate in the legislature that the survey showed thalidomide had been taken by the mother in 9 cases where the baby was severely deformed, eight cases of "moderate or less severe deformity" and six cases of "minor or slight deformity."

He said that, although the minor deformities were "slight abnormalities, nevertheless the drug association exists, and we are including these cases in our total record" for the 11-month period ending Dec. 1.

The provincial government is communicating with the doctors in charge of each deformity case, he said, "to assure that every case will have full opportunity to receive necessary surgical or rehabilitation care."

SHARE COSTS

He said the costs of surgical and rehabilitation services not covered by Ontario hospital insurance would be covered by joint federal - provincial subsidy.

Dr. Dymond told the House: "While none will seek to set aside the seriousness of this experience (the cases of thalidomide - deformed babies), we need scarcely to revise that danger is inherent in the taking of almost all drugs."

As an example, he said, "poisoning of children by the common and lowly 'aspirin' is a most frequent happening".

"For us as individuals, I believe the lesson in this tragedy is to avoid self-medication," he said.

Refueling Plane Catches Fire, Crew Bails Out

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) A huge U.S. Air Force refueling plane caught fire in the sky over central New York Monday night, its crew of 5 baled out, and the abandoned craft disappeared, apparently headed north on automatic pilot. One crew member was killed.

Four of the nine survivors suffered minor injuries.

The plane apparently crashed, its 11-hour fuel supply would have been exhausted by approximately 1 a.m. EST today, if the flames had not destroyed the craft before then.

Pilots at Plattsburgh air force base waited for daylight before launching a search for the plane, a four-engine KC - 97 tanker.

The flight of the eveless plane caused some consternation. Vermont state police said Monday night a report on the national civil defence network said the plane might have gone into Canada.

Officials at Plattsburgh said they assumed the plane came down about 30 miles north of Rome, which would place the wreck in the Adirondack foot hills.

Killed in the mishap was S. Sgt. Hinton Childress, 31, whose wife and four-year-old daughter live in Plattsburgh.

More off-Street Parking Made Available by New Lot

Increased off-street parking facilities and easier access to the riverside parking area north of the footbridge gangway has resulted from demolition of the old Don Har property on Upper Front Street opposite the McCarthy Theatre.

The new parking lot went into unofficial use a week ago and store owners and shoppers in the Upper Front Street area have been quick to appreciate of its convenience.

And, as a further boon to Christmas shopping in the area, Glencoe E. Thompson, city parking authority chairman, said today there will be free parking on the lot at least until the new year.

The new parking lot will accommodate from 60 to 70 cars and at the same time provides an easy access to the riverside parking area where another 250 cars can be parked.

The local parking authority expropriated the Don Har property and levelled and rolled the area following demolition of the building. Next spring the lot will be paved and other parking meters installed or an attendant hired.

Mr. Thompson said it had not been decided which of the above two systems would be adopted for the new parking lot.

Remanded On Week-to-Week Basis by Judge

TORONTO (CP)—A 41-year-old mother of four daughters was remanded to Toronto Psychiatric Hospital Monday on a week-to-week basis by Judge F. H. Shaw of juvenile court.

Mrs. Jean Callahan is charged with neglecting seven children left in her care in July.

Judge Shaw said his decision was made after hearing evidence given by a psychiatrist who had seen Mrs. Callahan in November. The doctor told him the woman suffered reactive anxiety depression and suggested she be placed in hospital.

Judge Shaw said Mrs. Callahan would be placed in a forensic clinic and kept there until doctors made a full report to the court, recommending whether she is fit to stand trial, and whether further treatment is required.

Mrs. Callahan earlier was fined a total of $108 and costs for running a downtown boarding house without a licence and for obstructing a sanitary inspector.

River Valley W.I. Enjoys Fine Christmas Program

STIRLING — On December 6th, Mrs. Albert Wilhelm was hostess at Rainbow Fishing Lodge, near Glen Ross, for the Christmas meeting of River Valley Women's Institute.

There were 23 members, two visitors and six pre-school children in attendance.

The home was beautifully decorated with Christmas decorations interspersed with greenery. The long table was centred with a large glass bowl of evergreens and flanked with candleholders and red tapers.

The president, Mrs. Kenneth Myers, opened the meeting in the usual manner, and Mrs. George Heasman read her report and presented the financial statement. The correspondence included thank-you notes from several children who have been confined to their homes with the mumps. Mrs. Ross Bush presented a full report of the five card parties in November and gave the treasurer over $72. Seven of the quilts and the expenser of delegates to the Trent Valley Area Convention were authorized to be paid. Two elderly members, Mrs. Jennie Donohue and Mrs. Ina Free, sent in their "pennies for friendship," and these were greatly appreciated.

Mrs. Jack Bush outlined the plans to date for the National Farm Forum radio broadcast around the world on Monday, February 4th. A special address will be given on the theme, "Canada's World Obligations as Women See Them." It was decided to write two sister institutes that evening. The event is open to both Institute members and their husbands and River Valley folk. A special collection will be taken for A.C.W.W.

Mrs. John Kane will be hostess for the January meeting and the delegates, Mrs. George Heasman and Mrs. F. C. Hayzlitt will present their reports of the Area Convention. The entertainment group will sponsor one card party and one social evening and there will be a sale at Hoard's.

Mrs. C. Hay-Ellis read an historical item and Mrs. Roy Irven announced re the puppet show at the Hastings County Museum in Belleville. Mrs. Roy Tucker reported $1.42 in the penny jug for November and she read a few items from the Countrywoman magazine. The items were gathered by Miss Rhonda Myers.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen spoke briefly re the Friendship Link with Abbots Leigh W.I. in England. Their Christmas gift of individual Somerset Federation calendars were distributed. She also read excerpts from two letters sent by Mrs. N. Coombe and Mrs. L. Lee. The potholders were shipped to England in November. The Home and Country Magazines for fall, 1962, were distributed and a leaflet on farm electrical safety was passed out to the group.

Mrs. Claude Tucker was appointed to arrange some special needlework for the winter months. The ladies were once more reminded of the Valentine competition.

FINE YULE PROGRAM

Mrs. Ross Bush presided over an interesting Christmas program. Mrs. Ernest Carr read the motto which had been prepared by Mrs. Ross Holland on the theme, "God bless the finger marks upon the door, that will not always be", and closed with a poem entitled "Time to Call Your Own." Mrs. Sheldon McIntosh read a Christmas story, "Sure It's Christmas" and a poem "What Can a Mother Give Her Children?"

Mrs. Russell Stapley of Stirling, was a guest for the afternoon and provided several items of music on her electric organette. Mrs. Glen Bush read the topic which had been prepared by Mrs. Gerald Brooks on the theme "Christmas In Other Lands." This was most informative and gave a vivid description of how various countries have woven their festivities around certain customs.

Mrs. Roy Tucker read a delightful story to the children, entitled "The Twins Get Ready for Christmas" and the children received a treat.

Mrs. Ross Bush read a story on the theme "No Mail," which ended on a happy note.

Mrs. Sheldon McIntosh spoke briefly and presented Mrs. Stapley with an appreciative gift. Mrs. Jack Bush voiced thanks for the program, hospitality and refreshments and Mrs. Vernon Harry conducted the gift exchange by numbers.

The home economics and health group served sandwiches, cookies, relishes and grapes and all enjoyed a social half hour.

Food Gifts

(First Instalment of two — Second Thursday, Dec. 13th) — Holiday Herralds

We were sent off on a tangent, because so many readers group asking for recipes for cakes, cookies and candies that would stand the stresses of travel.

There was some urgency about these requests and we were able to send recent releases on hand, at once. But this made me re-examine all we had made and given to you recently in the way of food gift items. I decided a few more would be welcome.

These Hermits are very pretty for Eleanor decorated them with quarters of green and red cherries, pecans and silvers. If you are planning food gifts bake these and the colored candied orange peel (easy) and wonderful Cantonese Fudge I am giving you on Thursday. Arrange some of all three attractively in shallow boxes, carefully covered with saran wrap and tied with shiny red bows.

Dinner Menu

Baked Stuffed Calves' Hearts; Tomato Sauce; Sliced Onion and Eggplant Casserole; Glazed Carrots; Fine Cole Slaw; Grapefruit Moulded in Green Jelly (see Monday—make half amount for 5 or 6); Crackers and Cheese; Tea.

This morning Margy had an appointment to take her driver's test, so at 8:15 a.m. she and Pete brought Jennifer (four months) and I had to give her her pablum. She would not eat it. I said "Jennie dear, your little cousin Danny opens his mouth and laps this up". This was an insult for she opened her mouth and yowled. At that moment Eleanor walked in and Jen smiled at her. I at once handed her and the pablum over and, taking advantage of the calm, ran out to buy the supplies we needed for the three experiments I had planned. By the time I got back Eleanor was holding her hand out for the nuts I had bought — the last thing she needed to add to the Holiday Hermits (below) — and the baby was sound asleep.

½ cup shortening, 1 cup dark brown sugar, 1 egg, 2 tablespoons water, 1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour, ½ teaspoon soda, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon nutmeg, ¼ teaspoon cloves, ½ cup chopped mixed red and green candied cherries, ¼ cup citrol peel, ½ cup light Sultana raisins, ½ cup walnuts, chopped, ¼ cup almonds, chopped.

Cream together shortening and brown sugar until light — electric beater makes this easy. Add egg and water; beat well. Sift together dry ingredients and stir into creamed mixture. Stir in fruits and nuts. (Use all walnuts or all almonds if desired.) Drop from teaspoon 2" apart on lightly buttered cookie sheet shaping each into 1" to 1¼" mounds. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. for 8 minutes — watching carefully. We had 4 cookie sheets full and baked 2 at a time — transferring the top pan to the bottom and turning them around after 4 minutes' baking. We had 6 dozen and not one was burned.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS — BY PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: In a few weeks, a number of men who represent my husband's firm in other cities are coming to town for a three-day meeting. He has invited the group to our home for dinner one night during that period. Since there will be no other women present, I wonder if I should be there, either. Naturally they'll come to discuss business, so I'd feel rather out-of-place, and would much prefer to hire a waiter to mix drinks and serve a buffet, which I'd prepare in advance. Would this be appropriate, or does such a gathering still require a hostess? — Mrs. H.S., New York City.

Answer: Not necessarily. The presence of a hostess, as a matter of fact, might cramp the style of the party, especially if the men want to take off their jackets and have a game of cards before the evening is over. Many wives in this situation stay around long enough to greet their husbands' guests and get them settled, but others prefer to leave earlier and return as the party is breaking up. As long as there is good, wholesome refreshment available in the room at time, her hospitality is evident even if the hostess isn't.

Question: I'm planning to give my best beau a portrait of myself for Christmas, and would like to know if it would be correct for me to sign it, along with a suitable inscription. He plans to keep the picture on his desk at the office. — E.M., New York City.

Answer: The picture may be signed if you want to and if your beau has requested it, but any message necessarily should be impersonal, especially since it's to be displayed so publicly. "Merry Christmas from Mary," with the year noted below, would be appropriate, considering the relationship and where the photo will be placed.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mrs. L.I. — They'd stop quarreling if they moved to a brighter home.

Saul I. — If Peg is a baby, she'd be a baby no matter where we live.

Mrs. L.I. — My son has been married a year and it's been the longest year of my life. One the week he's happy, the next week he talks of ending the marriage.

It seems to me that their differences are the usual ones — all over money, late meals and a messy house. But I think they're each extra edgy because of the gloomy, dark apartment they have. It's on the ground floor in rear. Its windows face a dirty brick wall and there's never a ray of sunlight. They must burn lights during the day.

How can anyone avoid the blues in such a place? I learned that they can get the same layout on the ninth floor of the same building for only $5 more a month. I'm sure that would save the marriage. But Saul won't even try it out.

Saul I. — Nothing can make this woman grow up. Just moving up a few flights won't change things because it won't change Peg. That job was up to her parents and herself. They've left her still a head strong baby. Only they were clever enough to hide the fact until they'd hooked a sucker to marry her. Now I must figure how to bow out and hand the job back to them.

For instance, every single day she must put in a call to her father. She still calls him Daddykins! She's home all day with nothing to do, but unless her mother stops in to tidy up, she waits for me to help her with the dishes and dusting. As for marketing, she still blows the whole week's food budget on nonsense like shad roe and cheese cake. What's all that got to do with a ground floor apartment?

The Council: The only time a change in housing can solve a problem is when the problem is completely one of bad housing. When a basically compatible couple is unhappy because they must double up in someone else's home, naturally moving to a home of their own ends the distress. But we agree with Saul here. Lifting the scene of operations a few flights storeys won't make the bugbears vanish. After the novelty of the new vista wears off, the quarters will look like the same old battlefield.

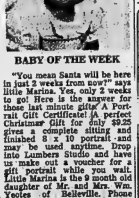
However, Mrs. I's suggestion is a good one for another reason. Surroundings do affect mood. No matter how glum these young folks feel, a bright sunshiny apartment might force them to be sufficiently in try to resolve their incompatibilities. It might do what marriage counsellors are supposed to do — make them calmer, more relaxed, more amenable to marriage counselling. At present they face each other in sombre shadows which don't help, with no rays of cheer to penetrate the deep blue funk enveloping them.

Miraculously one small change leads to another. Merely planning to move will get Peg and Saul back to talking on a reasonable level. Part of this talk may be about a few sessions with a counsellor, first for Peg who must learn what being a married woman involves, then for Saul who must develop enough patience and faith to tackle one problem at a time in his marriage, rather than chuck it over because of the quick pile-up.

We assume this marriage started off with love, of a sort. And by now these two realize that's not enough. The lovers must also have enough maturity to know they must work at their marriage. Peg definitely hasn't. Maybe a "change of venue," as they say in the courts, will imbue her with new determination to establish a real marriage, defined by Ambrose Bierce as "a community consisting of master, mistress, two slaves, making — in all — two."

Female Doctor Has Numerous Male Patients

MONTREAL (CP)—The male doctor treating the female patient is as old as the medical profession itself.



But how about the female doctor treating the male patient. Embarrassing?

Maybe, says Dr. Edith Newell, of Sudbury, Ont. general practitioner. But once a patient, the men will remain patients "for as long as they're sure that we are not going to embarrass them in any way."

A woman doctor, says Dr. Milly Halberstadt of Malone, N.Y., has to maintain "a stricter professional relationship with male patients." But this was not unusual because "many women set the same way with their female patients."

The two were among four women doctors attending a convention here of 90 general practitioners. The others were Dr. Dorothy McManus of Northfield, Vt., and Dr. Sarah Saunders of Toronto. Of the four, only Dr. Halberstadt is married.

Dr. Newell spoke about the experience the four had in common: "At the beginning of our practices, we had predominantly women and children as patients. But eventually, through the wife or the mother, we got the male members of the family."

U.C.W. Hear Yule Customs Of Poland

SHANNONVILLE — The December meeting of Shannonville UCW was held Thursday evening in the church hall. The program convener had the hall tastefully decorated for the Christmas meeting.

Mrs. Cook welcomed all and opened the meeting with prayer.

Mrs. D. Thompson was in charge of the worship service with Mrs. K. Juby assisting.

Mrs. Thompson followed with the Christmas meditation, "Am I Ready For Christmas? Is my mind free to think of the Prince of Peace? Is my heart open to share His love? Is my home off the beaten track of Christ meaningful for me and is pleasing to God?"

Henry van Dyke says, "that there is a better thing than the observance of Christmas, and that is keeping Christmas. Are you willing to stoop down and consider the needs and desires of little children; to remember the weakness and loneliness of people who are grieving; and to stop asking how much your friends love you, and to ask yourself whether you love them enough to bear in mind the things which people have to bear in their hearts; to trim your lamp so that it will give more light and less smoke, and to carry it in front so that your shadow will fall behind you; to make a grave for your ugly thoughts, and a garden for your kindly feelings, with the gate open—are you willing to do these things, even for a day? Then you can keep Christmas."

Mrs. Thompson read an interesting letter describing "Christmas In Poland." One of the most beautiful celebrations of the religious traditions of Christmas is offered to the world by Poland.

When the first star appears in the evening sky on December 24, Fast Day is ended and the Christmas supper begins. There are a variety of food prepared for this meal, but meat is not served at the meal. Straw is placed under the table, dishes and tablecloth, and one chair is left vacant, this is a standing custom. Any unexpected friend is welcome to drop in and share this meal with the family.

Symbolizing peace on earth is the Peace Wafer; the family stands, father and mother with the boys on one side of the table and the girls on the other; the wafer is taken by the father to be broken and shared with the family and guests. The Christmas tree is lighted and the gifts are given out.

The Polish Christmas centres around the singing of Christmas carols. These carols are never sung or heard on the radio until Christmas Eve.

Many of these beautiful traditions have been lost and forgotten since the communists have taken possession.

Mrs. D. Steven read "The Story of Jesus' Birth," from the New English Bible.

Mrs. Cook took charge of the business period, with the secretary reading the correspondence.

At the close of the meeting a social hail hour over a cup of tea was enjoyed.

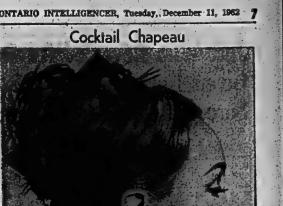
Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Whitfield are shown following their recent marriage in Emmanuel United Church, Ferris, Ontario. The bride is the former Miss Janice Rowell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Will Rowell, of Ferris, North Bay, Ontario. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Whitfield, Sr., of Belleville. The couple will reside at Sudbury, Ontario.

Bride-to-Be Honored at Trousseau Tea

THURLOW—Mrs. Lewis Cummins of Cherryville entertained about 150 ladies of the community, also others from Oshawa, Picton, Belleville, Redcliffeville, Carrying Place, Shannonville and Plainfield at a trousseau tea in honor of her daughter, Gordenia, bride-to-be of this month.

Receiving the guests were the bride-to-be and her mother.

Mrs. Lewis Cummins Jr. displayed the trousseau; Miss Barbara Caverly, the contents of the hope chest, and Mrs. Marie Dugay the shower and wedding gifts.



Mrs. Freeman Holgate invited the ladies to the tea room where the tea table was most attractive with its white linen cloth and silver services centred by a lovely arrangement of pink roses.

Presiding at the tea table were Mrs. Gordon Cummins of Oshawa and Mrs. Herbert Atherton of Picton and Mrs. Willis Wilson of Shannonville and Mrs. Bruce Hamilton, Plainfield.

Friends of the bride who were served were Miss Karen Cummins, Miss Beverly Kilpatrick, Miss Shirley Hamilton and Miss Mary Wilson.

The ladies who worked so diligently in the kitchen for this delightful event were: Mrs. Borden Forsythe making the tea and Mrs. Gordon Marshall, Mrs. Russell Ritz, Mrs. Ross Pound and Mrs. Reginald Cooper, who replenished the trays.

Just Who Revealed Advice Given Kennedy on Crisis Sore Issue at Washington

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — Still unsettled, like a lingering sore, is the question: Who revealed what went on when President Kennedy decided on a showdown with the Soviet Union over its missiles in Cuba?

He acted after getting the views of his National Security Council in a highly secret session. The council members are among the most important men in government.

This week, the Columbia Broadcasting System and Life, Time and Newsweek magazines said Kennedy himself threw open government files to two writers, one of them a close, personal friend, to prepare a chronology of what happened. It was quite a chronology.

Last week the Post came out with a story on what happened and who said what. It was too well documented, too full of direct and indirect quotes, to have been dreamed up.

The most super-secret outfit in the government is the Central Intelligence Agency. The Post even quoted CIA men, directly and indirectly, including a telephone conversation with McGeorge Bundy, Kennedy's special assistant. And Monday night a CBS correspondent said Bundy supplied much of the material for The Post article.

Pierre Salinger, White House press secretary, said the Life story "pulling the finger at the president is "absolutely and completely without foundation."

But there has been no indication from the White House that Kennedy has ordered an investigation of the leak or intends to do anything about it. And meanwhile the Washington Evening Star backs up the Life story. It said Monday.

"Competent sources told The Star that Mr. Kennedy did tell his advisers to co-operate (with The Post reporters) and that some of them refused to do so."

The Star said Defence Secretary Robert McNamara was one who refused.

The president will be asked about all this at his press conference Wednesday. Unless he discloses more than the White House has been willing to so far the whole subject will remain a sore.

This basic issue—who talked to reporters about what happened at the secret council meeting—got lost sight of for a while in the uproar caused by what The Post said was Adlai Stevenson's role in the council session.

The Post quoted a "non-admiring official" as saying Stevenson, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, "wanted a Munich" by making concessions to the Russians instead of insisting on a showdown.

If left unanswered, this statement would seem to undercut Stevenson's position in the Kennedy administration and at the United Nations. Stevenson promptly and repeatedly denied The Post account. He said his view was the opposite.

Kennedy finally, but after some days, let it be known that Stevenson had backed his decision to have a showdown. But at no time has Kennedy either criticized The Post story or denied its accuracy.

Kennedy did not say that Stevenson did not first proposed concessions to Russia. That Stevenson supported Kennedy's decision, once it was made, can be taken for granted. His usefulness would be ended if he didn't.

Kennedy called on his council to get the members advice. It has to be assumed that each would give his most honest advice, even if it disagreed with that of everyone else in the room.

It is out of the different opinions, and the conflict of opinions, that the president could reach a decision.

Even if Stevenson at first had advised concessions, this should hardly justify the public belittling inflicted upon him by the "non-admiring official" in The Post article.

But, just because there was a leak on what happened and because Stevenson was belittled two serious questions are left:

1. The next time there is a crisis and Kennedy calls his council into secret session, will council members keep it out to the public later? If so, then what meaning does secrecy have?

2. After The Post disclosures particularly those what happened to Stevenson—will council members in the future be willing to give a frank opinion since they can now fear, if the opinion is unpopular, it will be leaked?

Two Convicted

told the 17 persons at the service that hangings are public murders and should be abolished.

Justice Minister Fleming announced in Ottawa Monday the cabinet would not consider changing the death sentences to life imprisonment because in neither case did the juries recommend mercy.

Since the Progressive Conservative government took office in 1957, 43 sentences have been commuted and 14 persons have been hanged.

Lucas was convicted May 10 of the slaying of Theriand Carter, 43, whose body was found beside that of Carol Newman, 23, with whom Crater lived. Crater and Miss Newman, both Negroes, had been shot and their throats had been slashed.

During the 10-day trial held after Lucas was extradited to Canada, 195 exhibits were entered and 37 witnesses gave testimony.

The Crown alleged that Lucas killed Crater to prevent him from testifying against a fellow Detroit narcotics trafficker. Crater was described by police as an informer for the bureau of narcotics in Detroit.

Miss Newman was believed to have witnessed the slaying and to have been killed to prevent her from identifying Lucas.

Turpin was convicted of the capital murder of Constable Frederick Nash, 35, who died of three bullet wounds. The shooting took place when Nash, alone in his cruiser, stopped a truck in which Turpin was riding shortly after a small robbery.

The two men spent their last hours with Brig. Cyril Everitt of the Salvation Army.

"They look it like real men—without a whimper," he said.

Mr. Clidsey said of the hangings:

"This ugly thing must be fought. We refuse to be silent. I refuse to accept the principle that there is anything such as a legal killing."

As police moved to control the crowd there were shouts from the gathering of "murderers!" and "killers!"

Among the group protesting capital punishment was Douglas Campbell, 32, a pacifist and banner bomb demonstrator. Officers escorted him to a police station after he stood on the circular drive in front of the jail. Police said he was trespassing and will be issued with a summons.

Rev. Dismas Clark of St. Louis, a Roman Catholic Jesuit priest whose Dismas House has helped rehabilitate more than 1,000 convicted men, says capital punishment is insane and legal lynching.

"It make it stranger than legal lynching," Father Clark said in an interview last night. "It's murder.

"I'm talking about the U.S. Who dies in the gas chamber there? The indigent. No. Capital punishment is practically done away with for white men."

Father Clark, subject of the movie The Hoodlum Priest, said of the double hanging: "The only reason they can give for hanging is that it is a deterrent. So why don't they—if they are right — do it in downtown Toronto?"

the voting! Only about 50 of the 90 Liberals were in the House for the informal counts. And the Social Credit vote, besides being light, was split on one vote.

Malcolm MacInnis (NDP—Cape Breton South) proposed the biggest board. Mr. Fleming said five members are enough for a start. The motion went down 121 to 13 with the NDP members opposed to the rest of the House.

Then Mr. MacInnis sought to cut basic terms on the board to three years from five. Without debate, his motion was voted down 74 to 56. The 43 Liberals in the House at the time supported the New Democrats but it wasn't enough to overcome the combination of seven Social Crediters and 67 Conservatives. Some Social Credit MPs abstained.

The Liberal motion was defeated 71 to 61, drawing help from the New Democrats and one Social Crediter. Two other Social Crediters and the Conservatives—59 of them this time—voted against it.

Mr. Flemming said the chairman's fee, would depend on several factors including "the type of man" chosen for the job, the amount of time he puts into it, and the results achieved.

Opposition Leader Pearson said he was astonished. Surely the government knew what it expects the chairman to do. How could it decide on the basis of results how much to pay the chairman—before he is appointed?

Judy La Marsh (L—Niagara Falls) wondered whether the chairman would have it open to the cabinet to give the chairman's job to whatever defeated Conservative election candidate is willing to accept the smallest amount.

FILE SUIT

BOSTON (AP) — A $2,400,000 suit has been filed in federal court in behalf of eight men among the 28 who lost their lives when a Texas tower 65 miles east of Barnegat, N.J., collapsed in a storm Jan. 15, 1961. The suit charging negligence was brought Friday against the federal government and Anderson-Nichols and Company, Boston architectural engineers. At the time of its collapse, the tower had been undergoing repairs to correct a weakening caused by hurricanes.

Report Claims Constable Not Fit for Position

PETROLIA, Ont. (CP)—The report of an investigation of the town police force, considered Monday night by town council, recommends Cpl. Paul Dore be asked to resign because he isn't fit for his position.

The report, prepared by Inspector R. L. Taylor of the Ontario Police Commission, also says Peter J. Edmonds did not show his best judgment in his position as the town's chief constable, possibly because of limited experience.

Inspector Taylor's report on the six-month-old force was completed last month and after former mayor Elbert Landon challenged town council to call for an investigation, charging the police were using "Gestapo tactics."

Cpl. Dore's opinion should not recommend a man be fired with no reasons given," said Mayor Urvil Smith, commenting on the recommendation concerning Cpl. Dore. "It's not right."

Judge B. J. MacDonald, Ontario Police Commission chairman, noted that Cpl. Dore cannot be forced to resign unless charged with an offence under the Police Act.

ASKS MORE TRAINING

The report also recommended the force undergo more training, operate without a corporal, be outfitted with uniforms to the town proper and obtain better accomodations. It supported the forming of a town police commission which takes office Jan. 1.

Mr. Landon Monday night challenged council to bring the whole report out into the open. He said the report had been "bungled all the way by the police committee to council."

Mrs. Percival Cox, a new council member who assumes office Jan. 1, said she was "fed up to the ears with this mess—and I want the people of Petrolia to know it."

Inspector Taylor based his report on interviews with the municipal, crown attorney and 28 citizens of Petrolia and district.

2 DIE IN CRASH

MONTREAL (CP) — Camille Caron, 64, his wife Anna, 60, and brother Wilfrid, 57, all of Montreal, were killed Monday when their car was in collision with another car and light truck at St.-Hilaire, 25 miles east of Montreal.

Ajax Council Will Make Street Deadend

AJAX, Ont. (CP) — Town Council has decided to close off one end of a street although making the street a dead end would isolate the new Ajax Baptist Church from vehicular traffic.

Rev. Ronald E. Baxter, pastor of the $80,000 church, said Monday night the closing of Birch Crescent would mean church members would either have to walk a quarter of a mile to reach the building or the church would have to build a $6,000 access road.

A petition signed by about 40 residents of the cesscent complained of heavy traffic on the road since the church opened two weeks ago.

A petition signed by about 100 church members protesting the dead - end proposal also was presented.

Mayor William Parish, who cast the deciding vote in the 5-to-4 decision, said church members were warned before they started construction they would not have access from the crescent.

Nurse Testifies She Was Told 'Let Baby Die'

HULL, Que. (CP)—A nurse testified in Quebec court of Queen's bench here Monday that Dr. J. Conrad Simard, 49, of Hull told her to let a baby in their care die.

Mrs. Liliane Laframboise, 30, a nurse at a small clinic in nearby Aylmer, Que., testified in the first day of Dr. Simard's trial on a charge of criminal negligence in the death of a three-day-old boy Feb. 26.

Five witnesses were called by Crown Prosecutor Orville Frenette.

Mrs. LaFramboise said Dr. Simard used forceps for a longer period than normal in delivering the infant, Jean Bussiere, born to an unwed mother from Ottawa, Geraldo Bussiere, 27.

She said the baby was premature and generally in poor health. Two days after birth, the infant developed respiratory trouble and she said she called Dr. Simard at home at 4 a.m. to advise him.

She quoted the physician as saying:

"You should not bother me at night. I have trouble going back to sleep."

The nurse said she repeated that the infant was in danger and Dr. Simard replied: "Let him die, we will bury him."

Three physicians on the staff of the Ottawa General Hospital —Dr. Alza Arias, Dr. Andres Rios and Dr. Dominic Conway—testified that the boy was in failing health and was breathing with difficulty when he was admitted to the hospital Feb. 25.

NEEDS CARE

Miss Bussiere testified she was informed earlier that day by Mrs. Laframboise that her baby needed immediate medical attention.

She said she picked up the infant at the Aylmer Clinic and drove him to the General Hospital on the afternoon of Feb. 25. The doctors testified they immediately placed the boy in an oxygen case but that he died the next day of pneumonia.

Dr. Simard was remanded to Hull County Jail. He had been free on $5,000 bail until Monday and his counsel moved up successfully to have bail continued.

said "that's up to the party." He had been enjoying himself since returning to his law practice after the Liberals were defeated three years ago.

Mr. Matheson said majorities in several ridings were slight and recounts could put more Liberals in the House.

A storm that threatened to end Indian summer weather stayed away and the voters were favored with warm, sunny weather.

The premier called the surprise election—he had another year to go in a traditional four-year term—to seek voters' support of his plan to abolish hospital premiums, which cost families $48 a year. He plans to pay the premiums from general revenue.

This was no issue, said Mr. Matheson, because his party would do the same thing if elected. He said the real issue was the "mess" in which he claimed the government had put the province's finances. He said the election was called hastily because the government hoped to win before the financial situation was revealed.

But the boldest issue of the campaign, Mr. Matheson proposed a support price for three months. The government claimed this would ruin the potato industry, inland farmers' report said.

Under its unique voting system P.E.I. elects two types of members to the house—councillors and assemblymen. Each of the 15 constituencies elects one councillor and two assemblymen. While the membership of the House is the same, only property owners, their wives or husbands, overseas veterans and clergymen may vote for councillors.

For this reason, and because no official electoral lists are drawn up, it is impossible to say how many voters are eligible and how many actually vote because a property owner may vote in all ridings in which he holds property.

parison with similar jobs in private industry.

Salaries for the lowest grade of stenographers go up $60 a year to $3,120. Some senior administrators draw increases of about $200 a year. The bottom grade in hospital nurses goes up $180 to $4,080.

Biggest jump is for the assistant chief Dominion customs appraiser, by $1,700 to an annual $14,200.

In the penitentiary service, the lowest-rated prison guard job moves up $90 a year to $3,510.

ences between the CBC and the Board of Broadcast Governors are "disquieting and point toward future difficulties."

"The record of private broadcasting has made it amply clear that it cannot be relied upon to provide programs of good quality with any reasonable degree of consistency," said the brief.

It also attacked any practice forcing relief recipients to work as a violation of the principle of assistance and a step vulnerable to abuses.

The purpose of public assistance was to aid those unable to work or to find jobs. Relief work carried a stigma. It was labor "to pay off what has been transformed from a social benefit into an obligation."

Distinction must be drawn between forced work and public and winter works programs which most properly provided jobs for qualified personnel through the regular processes of the labor market.

On the broader economic picture, the CLC said emergency import restriction should not be regarded as a long-term solution.

These were out of step with "today's need for substantial liberalization of trade."

BURR HAS OPERATION

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Raymond Burr, 45, who plays lawyer Perry Mason on television, underwent intestinal surgery Monday at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital. A hospital spokesman said the operation was performed for removal of polyps. Burr, a native of New Westminster, B.C., is reported in excellent condition.

Has Son Been Shortchanged?

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS—I wonder if anyone could ever assess the amount of heartache caused some people, because of the stress laid on height in this country. Every story has as its hero a man no less than six feet tall, looking down on his beautiful heroine.

I will admit the heartache, because our fifteen-year-old son is only 5 feet 2 inches tall. His brother and sisters are tall for their ages. How I have suffered for him! Someone is always remarking on his shortness, either in front of him or to my husband and me. They might as well stick a knife in my heart, it hurts that much.

It is no use to tell him that Bonaparte was a runt—he doesn't care about that. Why can't people let him enjoy his life? Or better still, why couldn't he have been a tall handsome lad like some people think a typical Canadian boy is?—SUFFERING MOTHER.

DEAR SUFFERING MOTHER—You're suffering. Is he? By dwelling on shortness you make it a far more serious difficulty than it needs to be. Be sure you aren't guilty of giving your son a complex.

He can have a six-foot personality. The only thing he won't master is reaching a plate on the top shelf. You have a flesh-and-blood son, not a matinee idol. We all have some handicap; and even your taller children are doubtless learning to cope with personal imperfections.

A physically short, but spiritually tall friend of mine gave me the following four anonymous lines for you:

"Were I so tall to touch the sky
And grasp Creation in a span
A man is measured by his ways
The mind is the standard of the man."

DEAR DORIS—I would like to tell Crybaby I also had ten years of marriage turmoil. I gather she too has a no-good husband and I finally came to the end of the rope. I told him to leave me and our children.

Well, Doris, he has been gone for almost one year now, and I don't miss him; our house is now quiet and peaceful, no more yelling and fighting. I found a job. It's not easy, but it's so much better than having a madman around the house. We feel relaxed now.

So I say to Crybaby: "Don't cry over a man; he is not worth it. Life is too short to be miserable, and don't even think of ending your own life; just kick him out."—ONE WHO KNOWS.

DEAR ONE—If we were to limit wedded bliss to wives who have never cried over their husbands (or the other way round), would there be any unbroken homes? It's human nature to bring both joy and grief to those we love, but in most households grief is the rarity, joy the happy habit.

Where it is all turmoil, I agree that things may get desperate enough for a break-up.

SHARE REVENUES

Thant's reconciliation plan provides for return of Katanga province under a federal-type constitution and a 50-50 sharing of tax and other revenues from the operation of Union Minieres, European - owned mining company in the province which is rich in copper and cobalt.

Besides the moves against Tshombe, less-publicized efforts also were being made against the regime of Congolese Premier Cyrille Adoula. These were aimed at modifying the central government's constitution in favor of Katanga and also of strengthening amnesty pledges in case of reconciliation.

LIVES AFTER FALL

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Roger Ohman, 23, of Tampa, fell 92 feet to the ground from the side of the city water tank. He suffered a dislocated right knee. Ohman was helping remove scaffolding from the side of the tank, which had been cleaned and painted. His fall was broken when he hit some protruding rods part way down.

Parliament At a Glance

Finance Minister Nowlan announced pay increases for 65,000 civil servants, ending the "freeze" introduced during the austerity drive.

Supplementary spending estimates were introduced, including $30,000,000 to cover the retroactive pay increase and $2,000,000 for parks.

John B. Stewart (L—Antigonish-Guysborough) said the government's proposed Atlantic Development Board will do little for the Maritimes.

Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax) urged that the board stress tourist development in the four Atlantic provinces.

An NDP move to increase the board to 15 members from five was defeated, the three other parties voting it down 121 to 15.

Voting on two more Atlantic Development Board amendments and debate on another occupied most of the night sitting.

TUESDAY, Dec. 11

The Commons meets at 2:30 p.m. to continue debate on the Atlantic Development Board. The Senate meets at 3 p.m.

British Feel Common Market Talks at Critical Stage

By DOUG MARSHALL

LONDON (CP)—There is a growing feeling in Britain that the Brussels Common Market talks are headed for a make-or-break session.

The first of two brief ministerial meetings before Christmas began Monday and two marathon sessions are planned for January.

The mood in Britain seems to be that if no major breakthrough comes in any of these talks, Britain may abandon the negotiations altogether.

Two speeches last week were taken as evidence that the British government's desire to unite with Europe is beginning to cool as the terms of union become more difficult.

Frederick Erroll, president of the government's board of trade department, said it would not be "an irremedial disaster" if Britain did not join the Six. He hinted at "many more shots in the locker."

'ELEVATED' TO PRINCIPLES

Earlier Prime Minister Macmillan's son, Maurice, told a European assembly in Paris that "certain malpractices which have developed under the treaty of Rome (which founded the Market) are being elevated into principles of it."

Although the speeches reflect personal feeling rather than official policy, several observers have regarded them as oblique warnings to the European Six that Britain is not prepared, despite its enthusiasm, to pay any price for entry.

Roughly four main groups of problems remain to be solved —the agricultural interests both of Britain and the Commonwealth, British demands for no tariffs on certain industrial raw materials, arrangements for the European Free Trade Association and the structure of votes and positions within the enlarged Community.

The fight over agriculture can best be illustrated by a simplification. France wants Britain to buy French wheat rather than Commonwealth wheat. She is forcing the issue by demanding that Britain end deficiency payments to farmers upon after entry and also that Britain hand over import levies to the Community's central fund.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The other day a United States sports authority (circa 1920-30) wrote that in his wide present day college and secondary school athletes, are inferior to the crop of his day and age.

He believes the extra-curricular "convertible-twist" activities of modern athletes take a greater physical toll than did the horse-and-buggy, strawberry-social, hoedown calisthenics of the bygone years.

That may be the case in Strained Muscle, Arizona; Income, Texas, or wherever the writer hails from, but I do not think it applies here.

Take the Bay of Quinte district of the Central Ontario Secondary School's Association. If its athletes trained on a post-school diet of "convertible-twist," which I doubt, then it certainly didn't do them any harm.

For "Quinte" came through handsomely sports-wise. I have yet to meet the district architect, but I believe its athletics achievements in 1962 constitute something of a record. .

With the city taking the lion's share, district schools emerged with eight championship squads and two runners-up. Record or not, this is an outstanding achievement, and the city and Hastings county should be proud of its boy and girl athletes.

Not forgetting those men and women, the sports directors and coaches in all classifications, who did a magnificent job "behind the scenes" so to speak, in bringing their athletic proteges to the peak or near peak of perfection.

City schools won six of the eight championships, two of them the coveted "A" classification, and provided two runners-up. Marmora High was the only county school to win honors, taking two "B" championships. The above are newspaper records. .

The "bridesmaids" in the runners-up category were the Belleville Collegiate Institute senior basketballers who bowed in a thrilling Peterborough school team and Nicholson College defeated by Whitby for the football "B" championship.

The highlight of the season's performance was the magnificent overall achievement of Quinte Secondary School's senior "A" football squad. This powerful aggregation swept through the season undefeated and went on to take the COSSA title with a decisive 20-0 victory over Peterborough's Adam Scott Collegiate.

Also brilliant in victory was the crack track and field team of Moira Secondary School. Led by starry Bill Vermilyea the squad not only won the COSSA title at Trenton but gave an inspired performance at a Montreal meet, coming home with eight "firsts", including Vermilyea's sparkling wins in the 440 and 880.

The crack youngster from Moira added his third consecutive victory in the Ken Colling Cross Country Run to a fine string of seasonal achievements.

Moira proved the top school in the Quinte COSSA athletic field, rounding out an outstanding year with the senior and junior "A" girls' volleyball championships. The school's girl athletes, with fine coaching, came through handsomely winning both titles from a large field.

The girls of the Ontario School for the Deaf in an outstanding effort won the senior "B" basketball title with the young ladies of Marmora High taking the junior "B" volleyball crown.

BCI's junior football team brought home the COSSA "A" championship banners after scoring out a strong Cobourg squad 5-7 on a waterlogged field. Marmora High defeated Ajax for the "B" crown.

Two Clubs 'Financially Beset' . . . Salaried Senior 'A' Picture Is Grim

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—What can be done to rekindle the interest of fans in financially-beset Senior A hockey?

Teams making up the Ontario Hockey Association grouping agreed Monday night that something must be done quickly, as they considered the plight of two member clubs — Sarnia Sams and Kitchener - Waterloo Tigers.

Officials said the over-all Senior A picture painted by Chatham Maroons, Windsor Bulldogs, Woodstock Athletics and Galt Terriers looked fairly grim.

They reached this conclusion after approving the reorganization of Sarnia Rams on a share-the-wealth basis from the other Senior A teams. The Rams have been harassed by financial difficulties and 18 straight losses so far this season.

The OHA Senior teams unanimously agreed Monday night to permit the last-place organ

Issues Writ For $200,000

Liston Sues 'Uncle Sam'

NEW YORK (AP) — World heavyweight boxing champion Sonny Liston filed suit in federal court Monday for an order directing the government to "forthwith pay over" to him $287,000, part of $1,599,210 impounded by the U.S. Internal Revenue Service after Liston dethroned Floyd Patterson last September in Chicago.

The seized money represented part of the proceeds of the match. The government claimed in a suit filed in federal court last Nov. 30 that it is entitled to $1,174,000 of it in tax assessments against Championship Sports Incorporated, promoter of the fight. Technically, Liston and Patterson were named defendants.

In his suit, the government said the more than $300,000 differences between the full amount seized and the alleged taxes due could be sought by one or more of the defendants in the action if a claim could be established.

In papers filed on his behalf Monday by attorney H. Donald Busch, Liston said the government's complaint "fails to state a claim against this defendant upon which relief may be granted."

Liston's suit seeks a court order adjudging the seizure of $287,000 of the money as unlawful and certifying that amount as "the sole and exclusive property of Charles Liston."

Quakers Leave for Europe

SASKATOON (CP) — Saskatoon Quakers were to leave today for Europe and a 13-game exhibition tour of Sweden, Switzerland and Czechoslovakia, seeking to preserve a perfect overseas record by Western Canadian hockey teams.

Never has a Western club failed to return victorious from either world or Olympic championships or exhibition tours.

The Quakers, made up entirely of Saskatchewan - born players, will play two games in Sweden, nine in Czechoslovakia and one in Switzerland.

This is the fifth year that the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association has sent a team on an exhibition tour of Europe. Port Arthur Bearcats toured Czechoslovakia and Sweden last year. The Saskatoon tour this year is an exchange tour that will see a club from Czechoslovakia tour Canada next season.

Petes Defeat Juniors 9-2

Peterborough Monarchs tightened their grip on the runner-up spot in the OHA Eastern Junior Hockey League last night when they dumped the Belleville Junior "B's" 9-2 in Peterborough.

The same two clubs clash here on Friday night in a nine o'clock fixture. Last night's win was the fifth in a row for the Monsens after having dropped their opener to Kingston.

Elsewhere in the loop last night, Napanee defeated the winless Trenton squad 8-4.

Turk Barclay's Belleville boys found themselves behind the eight-ball early against Peterborough. The winners led 5-0 at the end of the first period while Belleville potted the only goal of the second heat. A 4-1 margin in the final 20 minutes wrapped up the decision.

Monsens opened the scoring at the 51 second mark with Self pulling the trigger. Morris made it 2-0 at 1.23 and Shearer added another at 3.23.

Belleville had a man in the penalty box when Self upped the count to 4-0 at 4.35. Warren bagged the final goal of the period at 9.05.

The losers came up with an improved performance in the middle heat, holding Peterborough off the scoresheet with some good stops by goalie Barry Duguid.

Don Goodfellow cut the lead to 5-1 at 17.20 of the second when Monsens were playing two men short through penalties. Stu Muirhead earned the assist on Goodfellow's marker.

Webb and Self registered Petes' goals early in the third for a 7-1 count before Belleville clicked again. Gerry Jones completed a three-way play with Muirhead and Gary Reid at the 10.18 mark for a 8-2 count. Morris and LeBarr closed the scoring in the last five minutes of play.

Penalty wise, Peterborough drew five minors plus three misconduct sentences while Belleville collected seven minors. Morris was tagged for 10 minutes, along with goalie Rexe's minor, at 15.54 of the second heat and Walsh drew two misconducts at 4.14 of the third.

Included in the Belleville lineup were four additions. Harkness, Emerson, Ethier and Woodcock.

Stu Muirhead, with two assists, was the only two-point man on the Belleville club. Goodfellow and Jones scoring and Reid helping on one.

Tiger Cat Missing Since Game

HAMILTON (CP) — Police here have been asked to assist in finding Dave Vill, an import end with Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Eastern Football Conference. Vill has not been heard from since leaving for Providence, R.I., from Hamilton a week ago.

He was called to Providence because of a family illness. Providence police said he has not appeared there and the stricken member of the family has died.

Tiger-Cat business manager Glen Buck said Vill picked up his cheque last Monday and left a Florida address. He had Hamilton last 28-27 to Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the Grey Cup final.

Pascual, Aguirre Top Hurlers

BOSTON (AP) — Southpaw Hank Aguirre of Detroit Tigers and right-handers Ralph Terry of New York Yankees and Camilo Pascual of Minnesota Twins shared honors among American League pitchers the official 1962 records released today revealed.

Aguirre, who became a full-fledged starting pitcher last season, won the earned run title with a 2.21 average while posting a 14-3 record.

Terry won the most games, 23, and was the circuit's workhorse with 299 innings pitched. He also yielded the most home runs, 40.

Pascual, who won 20 games, was the pace-setter in strikeouts, 206 and complete games, 18. He also shared the lead in shutouts with teammate Jim Kaat and Cleveland's Dick Donovan, both had five.

Rollin Roberts, the veteran righty who made a fine comeback with Baltimore Orioles, was runnerup to Aguirre with a 2.78 average.

Quinte Basketball

Wilsons, Crawfords Win

Trenton Wilson Concrete buried Belleville Lightfoots beneath a 110-55 score while the Belleville Crawfords downed RCAF Flyers 74-66 in a pair of Bay of Quinte Basketball games at Moira Secondary School last night.

The win for Wilson's was their seventh in as many games and leaves them well ahead of the second-place Crawfords.

Crawford Metals jumped into a 40-32 lead at the half way mark and increased their margin throughout the second half against the Flyers.

High scoring Teddy Batchelor sparked the Crawford attack with a strong 32-point performance. Larry "Soup" Campbell hit for 14 points and Bert Faulkner hooped 12.

Ernie Clarke paced the RCAF with 19 points followed by Wilf Borden with 11 and G. Foyle with 10.

Wilson's had little trouble with the Lightfoots and took a 56-23 margin at half time.

Four other Wilsons also reached double figures as Bob Burleigh got 18, John Nikfork 16, Warren Whitley 12 and Gil Bambers 10.

Belleville Crawfords (74)—T. Batchelor 32; D. McPherson; J. Bakker; L. Campbell 14; N. Lange 4; R. Lawlor 8; S. Forster 4; B. Faulkner 12.

RCAF Flyers (66)—W. Borden 11; G. Violette 8; M. McNicol 4 B. Nelson 8; E. Clarke 19; Wilmet 1; G. Foyle 10; A. Dodd.

Trenton Wilsons (110) — B. Moore 36; B. Burleigh 18; C. Crews 9; W. Whitley 12; G. Bambers 10; J. Nikfork 16; J. Theriault 8; F. Newsome 1; G. Whitley.

NOT RECOGNIZED

TOKYO (AP)—The International Swimming Federation announced Monday it will not recognize the swimming events at the Asian games held last summer in Jakarta, Tokyo newspapers reported. Teruiaro Abe, honorary secretary of the swimming federation, said the decision resulted from Indonesia's failure to permit athletes from Israel and Formosa to participate in the games.

Western Hockey

SPOKANE (CP)—Leo Labine scored two of three third-period goals for Los Angeles as the Blades defeated Spokane Comets 4-1 in a Western Hockey League Monday night.

The clubs entered the third period tied 1-1 on second-period goals by Blades' Willie O'Ree and Spokane's Max Mehlink.

Then Labine scored twice and teammate Bob Solinger once to move Los Angel within five points of first - place Portland Buckaroos in Southern Division standings.

KILLED BY AVALANCHE

VAL D'ISERE, France (CP) A member of the French junior ski team was killed Monday and another was believed dead under tons of snow after an avalanche swept over six skiers.

Sports Snapshots

By WALTER HAYES

HALIFAX (CP) — With the rapid rise in popularity of sports cars and sports car clubs in Canada in the last 10 years it's not uncommon to see women piloting the racy little machines.

However, when Mrs. Isabel Plaunt bought her first car, an MGA, in the fall of 1958, it was still rare to see a female behind the wheel of one in this area. Isabel says she felt a bit conspicuous at the first meeting of the Atlantic Sports Car Club of Halifax that she attended.

"There was only a handful of people there and only one other woman."

Today the acceptance of women in this field is evident by the fact that Mrs. Plaunt, an energetic 28 - year - old beauty, has been elected president of the 90-member organization.

She still remembers her first competition. It was a few months after she joined the club and it followed a heavy snowstorm. Navigating while she drove was Ben Fullerton, now past-president of the club, who had introduced her to the organization.

FINISHED THIRD

"I had learned to drive only a few months before and we were on back country roads so covered with snow that we could easily have become stuck. Ben told me to drive as hard as I could, so I did."

They finished third.

Isabel said that only two months before she had been so scared to drive on snow that if there was even a trace she would leave her car at home and walk to work.

In the spring of 1959 she turned out for another event, a driving skill contest. She wasn't planning to enter because she didn't think she could drive well enough, but after much coaxing took to the road against 13 men.

She was plagued with troubles from one end of the twisting course to the other. "I couldn't get the shift into reverse and when I did I couldn't get it out again." Despite her troubles she placed eighth.

In 1959 she became social chairman of the club. The following year she was elected vice-president and in 1961 became editor of the club's monthly publication, Chock point. Last year she helped set up some of the club's major rallies.

BRAKES FAILED

A frightening experience occurred behind the wheel of a sports car in the 1960 Nova Scotia Highlands Rally, a gruelling 1,000-mile grind through northern Nova Scotia and Cape Breton Island.

She was coming down a steep, twisting road on Old Smokey Mountain in Cape Breton when the brakes failed. She managed to slow down by using the gears but since there was no place to turn the car fixed she drove without brakes 30 miles to a stopover where the repairs were made by a club member.

Isabel is one of half a dozen members whose sports cars led them up the matrimonial aisle. She met her husband-to-be at a roadside restaurant near here.

"When I arrived there was a large group huddled around a new Alfa sports coupe that had just arrived from Ontario."

Seven months later she married the owner, Peter Plaunt, a native of Ottawa who is a petty officer in the navy here.

Several other meetings at the same spot in the last two years have led to marriages.

TEAM'S BUS OVERTURNS

SPARTA, Tenn. (AP)—Four teen members of the New Haven Black hockey team were injured—none seriously — when the team bus overturned 60 miles east of here Monday, the state highway patrol said. Walter Kulhan, 26, coach of the Eastern Hockey League team, was driving the bus. He said a rear wheel came off.

Jack Lemmon Could Win An Oscar in New Movie

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Despite its cheery title, Days of Wine and Roses is anything but merry entertainment for the holiday season.

It is the screen's strongest temperance tract since The Wet Parade (MGM-1932). Yes, even stronger than The Lost Weekend, which at least had some sober moments and a sprinkling of laughs.

Wine and Roses is an unrelenting downward slide of a modern couple ensnared in a purposeless existence. There is hope for one of them at the close, but the other seems unable to climb out of the bottle.

"We're a threesome," says Jack Lemmon to his wife, played by Lee Remick. "You, me and booze." And just about sums up the plot.

Then what makes the movie notable? Performances.

OSCAR CANDIDATE AGAIN

Wine and Roses may well supply the starring Oscar that has eluded Lemmon these last two years. He won as a supporting actor for Mister Roberts in 1955, but ran out of the money as star in Some Like It Hot and The Apartment.

He is overdue. No American actor is more of a delight to watch; none is more versatile. In this film he is again the rising young executive, at-odds with business morality, but he abandons any comedy tricks for sheer dramatics.

His descent into alcoholism is horrendous.

He has the screaming DTs in a violent ward. He writhes strapped to a table in a drying unit room. But the most memorable scene in the film—and in recent times — is when he wrecks a hotbuffet in his efforts in search of a secreted bottle.

ACCOMPLISHED ACTRESS

Not far behind Lemmon in the acting honors is Lee Remick, an accomplished, naturalistic actress who uses no tricks of personality. She is perfectly believable as the non-drinking girl who gets married and decides it is easier to drink along with her imbibing husband.

She is not given as many startling scenes and her motivations are poorly defined; but her degradation is starkly effective nonetheless.

What keeps Wine and Roses from achieving greatness is a lack of definition and over-all intent. Is it merely a tract? Then it succeeds. But if its creators were aiming at a commentary on modern morals, they accomplish this only fitfully.

NAME TOP HORSES

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Hambletonian winner A.C.'s Viking and Lehigh Hanover, winner of the Little Brown Jug, were named the top three-year-old harness horses of the 1962 season Monday. The results of a poll of Harness Racing Writers and Broadcasters were announced by the U.S. Trotting Association.

Hit Referee Fined, Suspended

SEATTLE (AP)—San Francisco Seal defenceman Larry McNabb has been fined $200 and suspended from five games for his one punch attack on referee Jerry Olinski Nov. 30, the Western Hockey League announced Monday.

In addition to the fine—the largest ever assessed a player in the league—a $500 cash bond posted by McNabb following a near riot Oct. 30 in Spokane, will be retained in case of any further disciplinary actions, league officials said.

McNabb will be ineligible to play in Spokane Wednesday, in Los Angeles Thursday and in San Francisco Saturday.

He will lose about $600 in salary, the league said.

McNabb struck Olinski after the referee gave him a penalty in a game against Spokane.

PLAN TITLE BOUT

QUEBEC (CP) — The Canadian Professional Boxing Federation cleared the way Monday for a title fight between Canadian welterweight champion Peter Schmidt and Don Ross, the No. 1 contender. Film on Digging Tunnel For Escapees Exciting

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Exciting film, showing the digging of a Berlin escape tunnel and the actual escape of refugees from the east was shown by the NBC Monday night. It was The Tunnel, the controversial documentary program that caused a flurry of alarm in West Germany and was diplomatically postponed at the height of the Cuba crisis.

According to the promoted broadcast by German officials who feared for the safety of people connected with the project and the outcome of other escapes were overcome by NBC. Only the backs of some volunteer diggers were shown. Faces of some refugees were carefully blacked out on the film.

All in all it was a program in which television showed its power, particularly when the camera focused on the refugees undergoing the ordeal when hysterical with relief, as they crawled from the tunnel. Great, too, were shots taken—obviously with great difficulty — in the cramped, damp quarters of the actual digging in the three-foot-square tunnel.

The program was splendid when dealing with these stark realities. It was weaker early in the program when the producers tried to "reconstruct" the early planning and digging stages, necessary because the tunnel was well started when NBC bought permission to take its cameras into the underground escape route.

But all together it was a gripping and horrifying story of an ordeal by real people in today's world, even if it did have a happy ending — for a few lucky, brave ones who made it under the wall.

Recommended tonight: Dick Powell Show, NBC, 9.30 p. m. to 10.30 p.m. EST — The Court Martial of Captain Wycliff, courtroom drama with Powell, Robert Webber and Dina Merrill.

TOMORROW AT THE BELLE — Cary Grant and Ingrid Bergman, head a distinguished cast in "Indiscreet" sleek romantic story in Technicolor. The major feature co-stars Leslie Caron and David Niven in "Guns of Darkness," revealing new thrills and suspense. This twosome begins tomorrow at the Belle Theatre.

TV-Radio Column

AT THE PARK — Prestr Sandra Dee Americas most glamorous girl, and Rock Hudson, Gina Lollobrigida, Bobby Darin and Walter Slezak in "Come September", showing today and Wednesday at the Park Theatre, romantic comedy in Technicolor. Astrological Forecast

For December 12

By SYDNEY OMARR

Aries Mar. (21 to Apr. 19): Could be test of "will" today. Perceive, analyze, concede only on minor points. Those who attempt to force issues want to see how far you can be pushed. Attend to real estate, community and business projects.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Many ideas are "available." You must be selective. Choose only the best. Strive for quality. Be suspicious of bargain claims. Ask questions. Insist on intelligent answers.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): There are opportunities for increasing income, stimulating present projects. Shake off lethargy. Concentrate on action. Take time to be safe while travelling.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Cycle up. You are able to attract attention, gain valuable publicity. Act on intuition. Take initiative. Make public appearances. Write, communicate, express yourself. Make others aware of your abilities.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): Fortunate for helping underdog. Show that you do care for friends, family members. Be sympathetic without being maudlin. Delve into "hidden" matters. Gain strength through knowledge.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Maintain neutral attitude—especially in disputes concerning business matters. Listen. Permit sense of humor to come to fore. Don't indulge in rash actions.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23): Courage of convictions essential to happiness. Make this a day when you state position clearly. Draw line. Others eventually come over to your side. Stand up for principles.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Enhance prestige — by outlining objectives. Take view that generosity is not wasteful. Good for dealing in money matters, and for "selling" ideas, products, personal qualities.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You return to "earth" today. Attend to details, especially in home. Pay heed to words offered by Libra and Taurus indivduals. Become especially applicable in money matters.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Opportunity great for gaining understanding of current conditions as they affect your life. Do more listening than talking. Put off definite action. Wait and see.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Hurrying merely for sake of "doing something" not advised. Choose words, actions, with care. Temptation is to scatter forces. This could prove expensive. Let others make first gesture.

Pisces (Feb 20 to Mar. 20): Good lunar aspect today encourages romance, change, travel, salesmanship on highest level. Concentrate on public relations rather than mere publicity. Show affection, sincerity. Display Pisces warmth.

If today is your birthday . . . your sense of humor a great asset. Domestic changes made this year provide strength. You are amiable, fair and generous —until others balatantly try to take advantage of you.

* * *

...General Tendencies: Security is highlighted. Applies to nations as well as individuals. Cycle up for Gemini, Cancer, Leo.

ESCAPE ATTEMPT

BERLIN (Reuters) Two East Germans who fled to West Berlin under a hail of bullets Sunday night saw their wives, a two-year-old child and a grown up friend caught by East German guards at the barbed wire fence, city officials said today. West Berlin police rushed about 200 police to the border in the United States sector when reports came in that East German guards had fired about 50 shots at refugees.

Science Now Shrinks Piles Without Pain Or Discomfort

Finds Healing Substance That Relieves Pain And Itching As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

Toronto, Ont. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain and itching. Thousands have been relieved with this inexpensive substance right in the privacy of their own home without any discomfort or inconvenience.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations.

Pain was promptly relieved. And while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of even 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—the discovery of a famous scientific institute. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body.

The new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H.® Ask for individually sealed convenient Preparation H suppositories or Preparation H ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug stores. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

DIES IN FALL

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Robert Hynes, 16, of London was killed Monday night when he fell 100 feet from an apartment building construction project where he had been working.

SCOUTMASTER, AT 84, "STILL TEMPORARY" — William N. Welkel, now 80 years old, polishes off a piece of cake in Philadelphia where he still has post of Scoutmaster, an appointment he took on a "temporary" basis back in 1945. He still has the job and is believed one of the oldest persons in that capacity in the Scouting movement. He goes camping "with the kids" in the summertime but not in the winter "because it's too cold"—(AP Wirephoto).

Russia Agrees to Keep Fishing Vessels Out of Bay

OTTAWA (CP) — Russia is understood to have given assurances that its fishing vessels will in future stay out of the Bay of Fundy.

Two Soviet vessels were sited in the bay last month and Prime Minister Diefenbaker said in the Commons Nov. 15 that they would be requested to leave if they hadn't already done so. They had.

Mr. Diefenbaker said Canada has always considered the Bay of Fundy as Canadin territorial waters.

Informants said Monday that Russia has agreed to adhere to Canadian wishes in this regard.

Meanwhile, it was learned reliably that on the RCAF's Maritime Air Command resumed during the Cuban crisis in October the close scrutiny of Russian fishing vessels of all kinds in the Western Atlantic.

RUSSIA COMPLAINED

This scrutiny, including the taking of close-up photographs, had earlier been discontinued at the request of the external affairs department after Russia had complained about "buzzing" of its fishing vessels. "Buzzing" is the armed forces' term for low-level flying.

This Soviet complaint was ignored here during the Cuban crisis and apparently the external affairs department was at the same time it asked the RCAF would not supply courtesy crews for communist planes flying over Canada en route to Cuba.

The Russians maintain that their fishing vessels are after fish, period. Canadian officials say they fish all right but conduct extracurricular activities by taking for military information as well.

Canada adheres to this NATO policy with the exception that it sometimes announces in advance small local naval exercises with the realization that

How To Hold FALSE TEETH More Firmly In Place

Do your false teeth annoy and embarrass by slipping, dropping or rocking when you eat, laugh or talk? Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH on your plates. This alkaline (non-acid) powder holds them more firmly and comfortably. Avoid embarrassment. Don't scold yourself or feeling down on account of loose, ugly denture breath! Get FASTEETH today at any drug counter.

Russian Vessels Are Scattered

Russian vessels are scattered all over the Western Atlantic and probably will be encountered anyway.

A nine-ship exercise by the Canadian Atlantic Fleet in the summer of 1961 drew about 12 interested Russian trawlers. Their crews waved exuberantly to any Canadian naval ship or plane crews who spotted them.

Self-Service Liquor Store In B.C. Will Face Biggest Test in Christmas Rush

By BRUCE LEVETT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada's only self-service liquor store, where you shop supermarket-style, will face its big test this Christmas.

Manager G. L. Venables says that so far the six-month-old store in suburban Burnaby is an unqualified success. But with people starting to purchase their Christmas supplies, it will soon be seen whether it can handle an exceptionally heavy run of business.

The new store, which resembles a tasteful modern supermarket with bottles where the groceries are usually found, is an experiment, a search for a solution to many of the problems of liquor merchandising.

"It has brought about better working conditions, it's better for the public and a better way of doing things all around," Mr. Venables says.

Whether the store's wide aisles and bright airy atmosphere are the answer to traditional year-end crowding and rush won't be known until early next year.

"If we get 5,000 persons in here on Saturday we can count on about 2,000 customers," Mr. Venales says. The rest are window-shoppers, many of them members of the purchaser's family. It makes for a relaxed atmosphere now but could turn into a Yuletide headache.

ATTRACTIVE DISPLAYS

"In the past, under the system which still holds good in other parts of the city, a man drives up, leaves his family in the car and dashes inside to pick up his bottle. Then he runs back to the car."

At his store Mr. Venables has seen a change in the method of purchasing. There's more intelligent shopping for dinner wines And where once the purchaser was limited to brands he recognized at the prices he wanted to pay, now there is more selective buying.

"There was a lot of publicity when we opened and a lot of people came out of curiosity. Things slackened off for awhile. But business is building up again now."

Purchasers of browsers, freed of the furtive hurry of the tiny downtown liquor outlets, wander past approximately 18,000 bottles of hard liquor displayed on shelves hung with flowers. Wide aisles separate them from the smaller display of domestic and imported wines and specialty shelves.

These feature a cognac selling at $36.40 for a 26-ounce bottle. The product is described as "very old—but just how old is not known."

There's a bottle of Napoleon brandy set in a cellarette shaped like a cannon. A ballerina twirls in a golden snowstorm inside a bottle of gin with a bullet-in tomic bon.

WINES BIG SELLER

"But the big seller is our wines," Mr. Venables says.

"Maybe it's the times. We're learning about wines from them and we're passing it along."

Most other areas of the country have considered a self-serve liquor store, but so far none has adopted it.

"Self-service outlets can give no better service than that now provided," said A. D. (Pete) Elliott, liquor board chairman for Alberta. Thirsty Albertans order from a price list, fill in a form, pay the cashier and collect their purchase from another clerk on the way out.

Lorna Power, head of the commercial division of the Quebec liquor board, says his organization has declined against it because of the fear that people might be tempted to steal. Mr. Venables says there has been less shoplifting in his emporium than in the average supermarket.

Quebec has settled on a modified system which keeps the customer and the liquor separated by a counter.

Allan Grossman, commissioner of the Ontario Liquor Control Board, stands by his province's method. There, the purchaser fills out an order form, signs it and presents it with his money to a cashier who stamps the form and hands it back. Next, the purchaser takes the order sheet to a clerk who gets the liquor out of the back room, wraps it and presents it to the patient purchaser. All this, says Mr. Grossman, gives superior control over minors.

COINED NAME

LIQUOR A-LA-CART — This shopper chooses his liquor supermarket-style, complete with push cart. He's in Canada's only self-service liquor store, in operation for the last six months in Burnaby, a suburb of Vancouver. (CP Photo).

PRODUCE MORE VEHICLES

Output of motor vehicles rose 22.8 per cent in November to 55,015 units from 44,795 in the corresponding month last year, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics said Monday.

Production in the January-November period advanced 30.7 per cent to 439,544 units from 351,735 a year earlier. August was the only month in which output was lower than in 1961.

MORE STEEL MADE

Canadian steel ingot production in November rose 14.1 per cent to 597,867 tons from 533,909 a year earlier. With gains in all months of the year, output in the January-November period increased 12.9 per cent to 6,485,094 tons from 5,112,684 tons last year.

GET MORE PAY

Canadian workers in September received as estimated $1,748,000,000 in wages and salaries, a gain of 1.3 per cent compared with $1,725,000,000 in August. The September total represented an increase of 5.4 per cent over last year's September total of $1,658,000,000.

Nice Control

Five-year-old Terry Wedel was chosen at random to draw the winning ticket from a box containing about 10,000.

Terry pulled one out. The winner was his mother, Mrs. Robert Widel of McPherson.

See Fast Relief For Bitter Cold Gripping Canada

Chill Arctic Air Mass Covers Most U.S. Too

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Most of North America was in the chill grip of an Arctic air mass today, but relief from the bitter cold was in sight.

The same huge air mass responsible for sub-zero temperatures in many parts of Canada has threatened the Florida vegetable crop and produced traffic-snarling blizzards in the mid-western states.

Moisture picked up by the brisk winds as they cross the Great Lakes was being dropped as snow in some parts of south-western Ontario, while other areas farther from the lakes enjoyed cloudless skies. Falls of from three to six inches were predicted for communities in the lee of Lake Huron and Georgian Bay.

Overnight temperatures ranged from slightly above zero in southern Ontario to 20 below at Graham, Ont., a weather station in Ontario's far north.

EXPECT WARMER WEATHER

A moderation in the cold was expected to be felt in most centres today and in Ontario Thursday. The weatherman said the trend to milder weather will last several days in Alberta and western Saskatchewan.

The east coast has missed the brunt of the wintry outburst but the maritimes got their share of it Tuesday. Winds of up to 90 miles an hour and 20-foot waves made the car ferry Rhenoceros unable to take on its normal six-hour run from Yarmouth, N.S. to Bar Harbor, Maine.

Snowfalls of two to four inches were expected today in the western and central Maritimes.

In place of the cold, the lower British Columbia mainland has been plagued with several days of fog. But rain and strong winds were expected to disperse the fog.

12 Below Zero At Bancroft During Night

The Quinte district muffled up against freezing temperatures today, after shivering through the coldest night since last winter.

Temperatures hovered about the zero mark in the bayshore area, but skated degrees lower in the northern parts of the district. At the southern end of Prince Edward county, the cold was moderated by an initial snow barrage that blew in from Lake Ontario late yesterday afternoon.

The lowest overnight temperature officially recorded in the area was at the Department of Lands and Forests radio station at Bancroft where the mercury registered 12 below.

At Tweed, the low was five below and Madoc six below. Up to 9:30 a.m. it was still four below at Madoc, while the mercury had made it up to four above at Tweed by 11 a.m.

In Belleville, the official overnight low was six above — recorded at 8:30 a.m. The weather was dry and bright through the day with a low of 10 above forecast for the Belleville - Trenton area tonight.

In Prince Edward county traffic was snarled earlier yesterday as snow blanketed an area south from Bure's to the Point Traverse, Consecon, at Wellington, over six inches of snow were estimated to have fallen. Provincial police at Picton said it piled up over a foot deep in parts of the county. No serious accidents were reported during the storm.

GOVT. CHARGES FILIBUSTER ON ATLANTIC BILL

Expect Final Approval Today

OTTAWA (CP)—After spending nearly four days peering at every paragraph, phrase and punctuation mark, the Commons Tuesday night finished clause-by-clause study of a government bill to create the Atlantic development board. Third reading, the Commons' final approval, was expected today.

The exhaustive examination of the bill brought charges from government benches of filibustering, time-killing and obstruction. Opposition spokesmen produced a string of amendments, none of which was adopted.

The bill, which Resources Minister Hugh John Flemming described as the most important ever taken on behalf of the Atlantic provinces in his lifetime, would establish a five-member board to inquire into and report on methods to boost the economy of the Atlantic provinces.

None of the parties opposed it, but many members said it doesn't go far enough.

PARTIES SPLIT

In introducing proposed amendments, Opposition MPs said each suggestion was designed to make the board more effective. But the government had enough voting support to reject every motion, while opposition parties split within themselves on several occasions.

Malcolm MacInnis (NDP—Cape Breton South) was one of the chief opposition speakers on the bill. He answered Mr. Flemming's plea for speedy passage by saying the minister could appeal "until he is blue in the face" but the opposition would support bills to make the board more effective.

Among amendments he proposed were one to require the board to make public its reports. Another would have allowed for the board to undertake special consultants on a permanent basis. Others sought to enable the board to undertake studies on its own without instructions from the federal cabinet, and provide for a full-time chairman instead of a part-time one.

A. M. A. McLean (L—Charlotte) moved an amendment aimed at establishing a capital projects program to spend $250,000,000 over the next five years to improve the economy of the four Atlantic provinces. The amendment, like its effect, is a money bill and was ruled out of order.

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

TUESDAY, Dec. 11, 1962

Prime Minister Diefenbaker said Canada will not introduce trade sanctions against South Africa as proposed in a UN resolution.

Gilles Gregoire (SC — Lapointe) ended a four-evening battle with Speaker Marcel Lambert over questions the speaker ruled out of order.

John R. Nicholson (Vancouver Centre) and Ernest Ryan (Toronto Spadina) split with fellow Liberals to oppose a Conservative amendment motion.

The motion, to change a paragraph in the Atlantic Development Board bill, lost on a vote of 65 to 48.

Malcolm MacInnis (NDP—Cape Breton South) proposed a string of changes in the bill but none was accepted.

Revenue Minister Flemming said the government had decided against making all reports of the board available to the public.

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 12 —

The Commons meets at 2:30 p.m. to debate third reading of the Atlantic Development Board bill. The Senate meets at 3 p.m.

Says Naked Men, Women Burned Alive

(KOBLENZ, West Germany (Reuters)—Naked Jewish men and women, chained together in pairs, were tied to a stake and burned alive in a Nazi "death ritual" near Minsk during the Second World War, a court here was told Tuesday.

Adolf Ruebe, 66, retired senior police official, described the scenes when he gave evidence at the trial of 10 former German officers accused of the wartime killing of more than 30,000 people.

"Between six and eight Jews, completely naked, were chained together and led in pairs up to a stake," he told the court.

He said one of the accused, Arthur Harder, 52, emptied a tin of gasoline over the Jews.

The witness said the execution was attended by the principal accused, 49-year-old Georg Heuser, until recently head of the Bonn Rhineland-Palatinate criminal investigation department.

Praises Kennedy But Issues Warning

If U.S. Pledges on Cuba Not Fulfilled We Will Be Forced to Act--Khrushchev

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Khrushchev declared today that if American pledges on Cuba are not fulfilled "we will be compelled to take such actions as the situation requires of us."

The statement was made to the Supreme Soviet at the end of an hour of speaking in the great Kremlin hall during which the premier said the Soviet Union had demonstrated it could prove peace.

"We will never leave revolutionary Cuba in trouble," Khrushchev said.

He also answered Mr. Flemming's plea for speedy passage by saying the minister could appeal "until he is blue in the face" but the opposition would support bills to make the board more effective.

Among amendments he proposed were one to require the board to make public its reports. Another would have allowed for the board to undertake special consultants on a permanent basis. Khrushchev defended the right of the Cuban people to pursue their bright future."

He paid credit to U.S. President Kennedy as having an interest in preserving peace in the Caribbean and said both were negotiating so that pledges must be kept.

Khrushchev, referring to what he apparently meant by Kennedy's "brinkmanship" said the United States had promised "not to attack the republic of Cuba and to restrain its allies from doing so."

But despite the implied threat the Khrushchev speech appeared to have a defensive tone. He remarked that there was no question of who was in the Cuban crisis, saying that "sanity and the cause of peace" were the winners.

Khrushchev's warning came after he had claimed the Soviet Union had prevented an attack on Cuba by "aggressive circles" of the U.S. to avert "the direst threat of a thermonuclear world war."

The Soviet leader, in a major foreign policy speech, called for "renunciation of war among states as a means of settling international disputes (and) their solution through negotiations."

Khrushchev called the solution of the Caribbean crisis "a major victory for the policy of peace," but he repeatedly attacked "the aggressive circles of imperialism."

In an obvious retort to the Chinese Communists, who criticized the Soviet backdown in Cuba, Khrushchev asserted:

"Events have confirmed that the peace forces are able to overcome the most dangerous international crisis, to curb the imperialist aggressors."

Khrushchev coupled his call again for peaceful coexistence between East and West with a charge "imperialist aggressors" were stirring up international tensions with threats and a warning that the Soviet Union had rockets to "reply to a blow by our enemies with a lightning smashing blow."

The premier reiterated that the Soviet Union knows how to build the most-modern weapons and has enough to destroy the bases and arms factories of aggressive nations.

Briefly he took up the German question before launching into detail on the Cuban affair.

He said the Soviet Union wanted a solution of the German question by a treaty, and on that basis a settlement of the Berlin question.

In this first reference to Berlin by an important Communist official in some time, he omitted any reference to the old project of converting Berlin into a free city and urged a link of British French and American troops

Troops Free 45 Hostages, Brunei Revolt Nearly Over

LABUAN, North Borneo (Reuters)—British troops today attacked the rebel-held Seria police station and freed 45 European hostages.

The attack was made by the Queen's Own Highlanders after the rebels refused to give up the prison where they have been holding out since Tuesday in Seria, a 20-mile town in neighboring Brunei.

The siege came as local forces, backed by RAF jets, mopped up remaining pockets of rebel resistance in Brunei and the neighboring British protectorate of Sarawak.

Gen. Sir Nigel Poett said the five-day revolt in the protectorates "is collapsing."

Poett, commander of British Far East land forces, with staging headquarters on this tiny island off the Borneo coast, said Tuesday earlier in the day also captured control of the oil town of Kuala Belait in Brunei and the towns of Limbang and Lawas in Sarawak.

Lawas was seized without resistance early today by 70 British marines but there was fighting at Limbang in which three rebels were killed.

A British military spokesman in Singapore said five British marines were killed in the battle for Limbang.

Poett said the general mili-

Nehru Will Not Guarantee Observance of Cease-Fire

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Nehru said today India has given no guarantee it would continue to observe the cease-fire proclaimed in the Himalayas by the Chinese Communists.

"It depends upon circumstances," Nehru told Parliament. At present India was observing it.

Nehru reiterated India's demand that the Chinese withdraw from their recent military gains before there can be any peace talks. Peking has rejected this demand.

Nehru reported 197 Indian soldiers were killed in fighting against the Chinese from the beginning of their all-out offensive Oct. 20 to last Monday. The fighting stopped Nov. 22 with the Chinese cease-fire proclamation, but two more Indian soldiers were killed later.

Nehru made a statement to the Upper House of Parliament that repeated his statement to the Lower House Monday. He then had rejected the terms for a truce that the Chinese had set in their cease-fire and withdrawal proclamation because, he said, they allowed the Chinese to retain the results of their aggression.

Nehru said today talks with the Chinese could begin if the grounds were prepared by their withdrawal of their positions before last Sept. 8, when the Chi-

U.S. May Scrap Missile Needed By V-Bombers

Required to Maintain Nuclear Deterrent

LONDON (AP) — The British government said today it had failed to reach agreement with the United States on the Skybolt missile. Tentative U.S. plans to scrap it have put the Anglo-American alliance under heavy strain.

A statement issued by the defence ministry said, however, discussions on the missile will continue.

The announcement dealt with the talks in London Tuesday between U.S. Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara and British Defence Minister Peter Thorneycroft.

The two officials discussed at length the prospects of developing the airborne strategic missile on which Britain has been counting for maintaining its nuclear deterrent, indications that Skybolt may be scrapped have roused alarm in Britain.

The ministry statement said that McNamara and Thorneycroft had "full and frank talks." It added:

"No decision was taken on the future of Skybolt, on which discussions will continue."

This was the first official disclosure that the talks had broken up without agreement, though reports leaking out told of a tough bargaining session between the two ministers.

McNamara left for Paris this morning to attend the NATO ministerial meeting. Thorneycroft will be going here tonight.

COULD CLOSE RANKS

Britain's fear made plain that junking of the projected missile could lead to a reappraisal of British defence commitments, including the use of Holy Loch in Scotland as a U.S. Polaris submarine base, British informants said.

Reports from the McNamara-Thorneycroft talks said tough, blunt argument took place. The Daily Express described the meeting as one of the stormiest between ministers of the two governments.

"Mr. McNamara is under no illusions as to the British attitude to the cancellation of Skybolt," a defence ministry spokesman said.

The Daily Herald says Thorneycroft warned that abandoning the nuclear deterrent in the Anglo-American alliance as well as Britain's entire defence policy.

There was no indication that McNamara and Thorneycroft reached any agreement before adjourning their conference to attend the NATO ministerial meeting in Paris opening today.

President Kennedy and Prime Minister Macmillan presumably will have to make the final de-

UNEMPLOYMENT RISES IN LINE WITH SEASON

Increase of 59,000 Occurs in November

OTTAWA (CP). — A further rise in Canadian unemployment, up 59,000 from mid-October to 742,000 at mid-November, was reported today in a joint statement by bureau of statistics and the labor department.

The statement said the rise was "about in line with the usual seasonal pattern." The jobless total was 7,000 less than the 349,000 unemployed in November, 1961.

The unemployment rate advanced to 5.2 per cent of the labor force compared with 4.3 per cent a month earlier. The rate was 5.4 per cent a year earlier and 6.8 per cent two years earlier.

Total employment declined by 58,000 from mid-October to 6,270,000, a movement which the report said was "considerably less than the usual drop in employment at this time of year." Almost all of the decline was in farm employment.

There were 115,000 more people with less than a year earlier, but in the 12 months the labor force had risen by 108,000.

The picture in brief, with estimates in thousands:

	Nov. Oct. Nov.
	1962	1962	1961
Labor force	6,612	6,626	6,504
Employed	6,870	6,568	6,155
Unemployed	342	283	349

The report is based on a survey of 35,000 households across Canada during the week ended Nov. 17.

CONSTRUCTION STEADY

One of the main factors in the job situation was a drop of 52,000 in construction between mid-October and mid-November. Employment in non-farm occupations dipped by only 4,000 due to continuing mild weather. Activity in the construction trades is still well maintained.

Compared with a year earlier, agricultural employment was down 32,000. But there was a 12-

U.S. Proposes Direct Telephone Connecting Kennedy and Mr. K

GENEVA (AP)—The United States proposed today the installation of a direct telephone connecting President Kennedy and Premier Khrushchev as part of a detailed system for preventing war by miscalculation or accident.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur H. Dean urged the 17-nation disarmament conference to give careful consideration to ways of keeping the world from blundering into war.

He introduced a six-point program to reduce the risk of confidence among nations and ensuring them against surprise attack or blows delivered by accident.

This whole field, Dean said, "offers opportunities for early agreement which should not be passed by."

The American document contained these major points:

1. "The nations would give advance notice of major military maneuvers to allay any

Political Success Is Difficult For Woman, But Sex Wins Votes

EDMONTON (CP)—Women can often be counted on to vote for another woman just because they think one of their sex should be given a chance at public office, Postmaster - General Fairclough said here today.

In a talk to the annual convention of the Women's Union, Mrs. Fairclough said there are dozens of women in Canadian politics who have their success primarily to the backing of women's organizations.

Some women campaigned quite openly on a Woman's platform, disregarding the male vote. Others appealed to men on the basis of their individual ability and experience and to women on the basis of their feminity.

The Spadina mother of one grown son told the convention that married women — particularly those with children—face serious complications if they want to enter the world of commerce, industry or politics.

Those wanting to "try their wings" should first ask themselves about their training, ability, strength, determination and toughness.

Mrs. Fairclough said it is far more difficult for a woman to make a success of a politician than it is for a man. The greatest single obstacle was the public's hesitation to believe that any woman is capable of withstanding the knocks and scrapes that are an integral part of political life.

Christmas Rush Started, Post Office Has Hired 110

With the big day now less than two weeks away, the annual Christmas rush at the Belleville Post Office is gradually building up to its peak.

Post office officials stated today that the office was already becoming loaded and the staff was girding itself for the big rush which is expected to get underway on Saturday or Monday next.

Already 110 additional postal workers have been taken on for the Yuletide rush of mail, while another 25 or 30 will be taken on during the peak rush. Normally a staff of 32 persons including letter carriers, is employed at the post office.

Additional letter carriers will go out on the various walks commencing on Friday. This will result in delivery time changes in possibly eight sections of the city.

In some cases afternoon deliveries will be stepped up to the morning while in one or two instances morning deliveries will have to be delayed until the afternoon.

"It will not be serious, but it is just something we cannot avoid," stated the postmaster.

He did have a word of advice for Belleville residents, however.

That advice was "Mail Early."

Youth Held For Robbery At Lindsay

The arrest of a Belleville youth by Lindsay police for assault and robbery has brought a further charge of truck theft from Belleville police.

In custody at Lindsay is 17-year-old William Laverne Smith of 9 Starling Street, Belleville.

City police today took out a charge against Smith of stealing a half-ton truck November 22 from Bridge Delivery Service in Belleville. The truck was later found abandoned in Pickering township.

6 Civil Suits Are Still To Be Heard

The two - week Ontario Supreme Court non-jury sitting passed the mid-way mark in its first week this morning — with its first action still in progress.

The claim, a dispute over claims arising from a car accident, began Monday afternoon when the sittings opened before Mr. Justice R. L. Haines.

Some six other civil suits, besides nine divorce cases are now expected to be heard before the sittings finally adjourn at the end of next week.

Kiwanis Club Hears History Of Aluminum

Local Kiwanians were given an interesting account of the history of aluminum by Mr. Gordon Clement of the Aluminum Company of Canada from Kingston. The speaker, who is the superintendent of the extrusion department at the Kingston plant, also dwelt on the various uses of this metal, the business complex which is engaged and its manufacture and the market situation regarding the raw product.

He described the aluminum industry as a very young one when compared with other basic metals. It was at the Paris Exposition in 1855 that the first ingot of aluminum, valued at $514 a pound, was put up for display.

Since that time the production of aluminum has risen to five million tonnes in the free world and an estimated thousand tons behind the iron curtain. This is the more impressive, the speaker suggested, when even as late as 1902 the production was only two tons. The metal was not considered feasible.

Mr. Clement described the industry as a "test-tube baby" since much scientific control was exercised to make a good product and since there were so many chemical by-products from the process.

Aluminum's major use is found in the building and construction field (about 40 per cent of the production), the packaging industry (18 percent) the automotive and transport industries (15 per cent) and the electrical field (14 per cent), he advised.

There is still a market price instability for aluminum and the field is highly competitive, even although 60 per cent of the free world's production comes from three firms, Kaiser, Reynolds and the Aluminum Company of America in the United States and the Aluminum Company of Canada.

Canada produces about two million tons of aluminum a year and about 85 per cent of this is exported, said Mr. Clement.

The speaker also spoke on the development of the industry from three firms, one each in France, Switzerland and the United States, who were the original producers of aluminum, to the present broad complex of many firms whose expansion has been brought about by improved and cheaper production requirements since World War II.

Mr. Clement stated that the combination of youth, science and competition should equal progress and he felt the aluminum industry had this very attribute.

The speaker was introduced by Kiwanian Don Hickson and thanked by Don Davenport. The meeting was conducted by president George Hume.

Charge Manager With Theft of Office Funds

The office manager of one of Belleville's light industries has been charged with theft of company funds.

City police last night said they arrested and charged 32-year-old Donald G. Dilling, Victoria Avenue, office manager and bookkeeper of Avon Jewellery Limited.

Police said they were still checking the sums of money allegedly involved in the charge. They named no total.

Mr. Dillon was taken into custody last night after city detectives had been called to the East Dundas street offices of his company earlier in the day. He was bailed before a justice of the peace and ordered to appear in city magistrate's court December 18.

Detectives said Mr. Dillon had been employed by Avon manufacturers of costume jewellery since March 1961.

He is survived by his wife, the former Margaret Edith Taylor, one daughter, Mrs. James (Betty) Sherman of Trenton and one sister, Miss Hilda Burley of this city. Also surviving are two brothers-in-law.

Mr. Burley was one of the most prominent masons in the Quinte district. He was a member of Hastings Lodge A.F. and A.M. No. 633, St. Mark's Chapter No. 28, R.A.M. and Hastings Baldwin Preceptory No. 6 of this city, the Ramses Shrine of Toronto and Trenton Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star No. 198.

He was a past First Principal of the Chapter and a past Grand Master of the Grand Chapter. He was also a past Preceptor of King Baldwin Preceptory, Grand First Grand Standard bearer of the Sovereign Grand Priory of Canada.

Resting at the Thompson Funeral Chapel, 38 Everett Street. The funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this edition.

Clark and Miles Buy Prize Baby Beef

Clark and Miles, butchers in this city, were last at the Christmas show and sale of prize cattle held at the auction barns on the Foreward Road on Tuesday afternoon. A first prize pen of three fat heifers was bought this first time by the Stafford Farms near Picton at a price of $28.50 per hundredweight. The Hereford cattle averaged out at 805 pounds per animal and this baby beef will be on sale in the downtown shop in the near future.

Nothing could be nicer than a steak off these animals to round out the Christmas festivities. Mr. Clark, the senior member of the firm, is always on the lookout for good local beef cattle.

No Damage To the Car

A Belleville man yesterday drove over the speed limit at parking speed — figuratively, at least.

Police say Douglas Carter turned off Highway 2 at the western limits of Belleville onto a drug store parking lot.

His vehicle nicked a highway sign warning of a 40-mile speed zone and bowled it over.

There was no damage to the car.

HALT STAMP ERRORS

WASHINGTON (AP)—A plan to use electronics to prevent misprints on postage stamps was disclosed Tuesday by the U.S. post office department. The move to install an electric eye on the printing press feeding mechanism results from the recent misprinting of the four-cent Dag Hammarskjold commemorative stamp.

Driver Kills Cow on Road

There's one head less among Prince Edward county's cattle herds.

Provincial police say a cow owned by Seymour Hamilton died instantly after being struck by a car on Highway 14, north of Mountain View. Damage to the car, driven by Douglas Linn of Campbellford, was slight.

Native of City Praised After London Concert

LONDON (CP) — Canadian pianist Neil van Allen gets an accolade from both the Times and the Daily Telegraph for his recital of Liszt, Brahms and Schubert at the Wigmore Hall Monday night.

"Sincere musicianship and first-rate technique," is the verdict of the Telegraph's critic.

"I have heard few young pianists who could summon such a reserve of power or appear so relaxed while doing so . . . perhaps his most notable contribution was Schubert's sonata in B flat, in which he revealed rich by step one of the composer's most profound utterances.

"As a Liszt player, too, he gave much pleasure."

The Times calls the recital "An accomplished, performance" and says while the Liszt pieces showed van Allen's "consummate technique" the rest of the program "testified to his keen musical intelligence and thoughtful interpretation."

Van Allen, a native of Belleville, moved to London in 1951 on scholarships from the Toronto Rotary Club and the Nova Scotia Talent Trust.

cision about the Skybolt at their meeting in the Bahamas Dec. 19-20.

The Skybolt, an air-to-ground missile that has cost $650,000,000, had an unbroken string of failures in its first five test firings. It is designed for firing by a bomber standing off 1,000 miles from its target.

It is the missile on which British counted to deliver British nuclear warheads — her independent nuclear deterrent — from the mid-1960s on. Its abandonment would leave her subsonic bombers without a nuclear weapon to deliver from a distance safe from supersonic enemy fighters.

Britain abandoned her own development of a Blue Streak missile because of the cost and agreed nearly three years ago to buy the Skybolt if the United States developed it. The agreement included location of the Polaris base at Holy Loch.

U.S. Defence planners tentatively have decided to drop the Skybolt from next year's budget because it is a question whether it will come into operation in time to be of much use. But to leave Britain without a nuclear weapon of its own would give a great assist to Labor party criticism that the Macmillan government has made Britain too dependent on the United States.

Believe Tanker Plane Crashed Near Goose Bay

PLATTSBURG, N.Y. (AP)— The U.S. Air Force believes a KC-97 tanker plane that was lost into the darkness over central New York State Monday night after its crew bailed out probably crashed somewhere northwest of Goose Bay, Labrador.

Officials at Plattsburg air force base said Tuesday they were still trying to determine where the plane crashed.

Earlier, the RCAF at Montreal said it had spotted the four-engine craft, flying north on automatic pilot, about 100 miles north of Sagoville, Que., before it faded from radar screens.

A good time was had by all 70 some members who attended the Trenton Senior Citizens annual Christmas party in the Orange Hall last night. Club president Mrs. E. Panter leads the happy crowd in a rousing singsong that followed banquet and presentation of gifts.

Firefighters' Annual Banquet Held Tuesday

Members of the Belleville Fire Department, Local 497 of the Fire Fighters Association, held their annual banquet at No. 2 Fire Hall last evening, when about 100 guests and firemen were present.

The city was well represented by council members and Mayor M. M. Haig extended the good wishes to the Belleville Fire Department on behalf of the city.

Officials from the City's police department, Police Chief Probert, Inspectors C. Hayes and John McLauchlan, were also in attendance.

Harry Rollins, guest speaker for the evening stole the floor as usual, keeping his audience in stitches.

Guests were introduced by Fire Chief Gerald Vance, and were present from Brooklin, Woodstock, Kingston, Amelia burgh, Bowmanville, Toronto, Batawa, Peterborough, Shannonville, Tweed, Lakefield and Thurlow.

The sum of $104 was collected amongst those present and was handed to Fire Chief Vance, to be used toward the local Underprivileged Children's Fund. The chief said last year over 1,000 needy children were provided for.

Cubans Need Ration Books To Get Goodies

HAVANA (AP)—Cubans were told Tuesday they will have to use ration books to get the goodies that traditionally decorate the Christmas table—pork, poultry, nuts and candy.

"There will not be the great quantity we wish but there will be enough to eat," Interior Commerce Minister Manuel Luzardo said in an interview with the newspaper Revolucion.

The shoppers' rush was most evident, however, at shoe stores.

Word that a pair could be obtained brought out long lines before stores but the shelves were empty. The government nationalized the shoe industry last week but so far has not put into effect the expected ration scheme.

One of the best Christmas presents for the Cuban was the prediction that more than 16, 000,000 pairs of shoes, boots and sneakers would be manufactured next year with everyone promised at least two pairs a year. An unspecified amount will be set aside for export to Bulgaria.

Doctors Doubts Football Star Hears Anything

TORONTO (CP) — Every night for more than two years one of John Ellwood's parents has come to see him, pray beside him and tell him the news from home.

But doctors doubt the former high school football star hears anything.

John, 21, has been in a coma since Oct. 25, 1960, when he collapsed in a football game with severe brain injuries. The son of Salvation Army Brig. Thomas Ellwood, he is in a semi-private room at Queen Elizabeth Hospital.

About $16,000 of the cost of John's confinement has been borne by friends, schools and persons who have read of the family's plight.

But the funds will likely be exhausted by mid-February unless new sources are found. One activity being planned is a Salvation Army brass band concert tentatively set for Jan. 14 in North Toronto Collegiate Institute.

Brig. Ellwood, 55, said Tuesday night there are times when his son seems to hear his parents' voices.

'EXPRESSION CHANGES'

"It's hard to explain, but you can sense it when you've been watching him as long as we have. His expression changes and his eyelids wrinkle, as if he is concentrating on listening."

About three months ago, Brig. Ellwood and his wife began to notice that when they prayed beside him their son seemed to move as if in response.

Hospital officials say John's eyes have never opened but sometimes his body jerks and occasionally he moves a leg or foot, movements which apparently are only body spasms and do not indicate he is recovering.

Several times a day he is fed a liquid through a tube in the nose. Twice a day orderlies lift him to a chair for an hour. The change in position aids his blood circulation and prevents bedsore.

Said Brig. Ellwood: "We still have not given up hope, but we have little chance of recovery must be very remote."

VICHY OFFICIAL DEAD

PARIS (AP)—Admiral Henri Biehaut, 73, secretary of state for the navy and colonies in the wartime Vichy government, died last Saturday at his home. The announcement Tuesday did not give the cause of death. Biehaut was brought to trial after the war on charges of collaboration with the Nazis but was acquitted.

Four Youths Plead Guilty To Break-ins

TRENTON—In magistrate's court at Trenton yesterday, Dennis Michael O'Neill and Robert Bruce Allan of Dundas, Gary Ralph Enman of Trenton and Arthur Anthony Bruno of Mount Hope, pleaded guilty to two charges of breaking, entering and theft and one of attempted breaking and entry.

The youths were remanded for one week by Magistrate T. Y. Wills, who asked probation officer Dennis Atkins to prepare a pre-sentence report on each.

The court heard testimony from Trenton, Murray township and Sidney township police. It was alleged that three youths had entered the Bata Shoe Company warehouse in the early morning hours of Dec. 5, by breaking a window and had stolen a quantity of money and six pairs of socks. Allan told police later that he stayed at the wheel of his car while the others entered the warehouse.

Police also alleged that the youths had attempted to break into Timm's Service Station in Murray Township and had broken in to May's Service Station in Sidney Township by forcing a door, on the same day. Fifteen dollars were taken from May's service station. Total damages done and cash taken were said to amount to $60.

Allan was said to have told police that he stayed in the car while his three companions attempted to break into the Murray township premises. At May's service station, both Allan and Enman were said to have remained in the car.

After the youths had been brought to Trenton, police station for questioning in connection with the break-in at Bata, the arrest of three of the two incidents in their territories and questioned them.

HUNTER SAFETY CLASS

TRENTON—The last Hunter Safety classes for 1962 will be held in the town hall over the police station on Friday, Dec. 14 and Tuesday, Dec. 18, starting at 7 p.m. Exams will be written at the end of the course.

Demonstrations of safe gun handling will be given by safety instructors and students will view a film, "Gun Safety".

Predicts West, Red Systems Will Merge

TRENTON—The theory that Russia and the West would remain on peaceful terms in 1963 foreseeable future, was advanced by Dr. John Gellner, speaking to more than 100 residents of Batawa, at a meeting in the new Bata plant recreation hall last Sunday. Dr. Gellner, a former wing commander, lived in Trenton with his family while stationed at RCAF Station Trenton a few years ago.

Dr. Gellner said that while a policy of preparedness entered into the picture, the main factor in his reasoning was that Russia was gradually becoming a capitalist country while the West was drifting towards a socialistic form of government. The two nations would eventually merge ideologically, the speaker said.

Dog Running at Large Costs Woman $2 Fine

TRENTON — Mrs. Wilfred Ellis of Bay Street in Trenton was found guilty in police court yesterday of permitting a dog to run at large. Magistrate T. Y. Wills fined her $2 and ordered her to pay court costs of $11.50.

The dog catcher Tom Weedle told the court that he had warned Mrs. Ellis about the dog a number of times, and that after he had seen the dog crossing the road on Nov. 28, he had reported it to the police.

Mrs. Ellis told the magistrate that the dog was fighting with a cat at the time.

"I don't care if your dog was fighting with six cats," said the magistrate, "you're guilty of letting it run at large."

Mrs. Ellis insisted that her dog was always in the company of her two children, aged five and three.

"If you think that a five-year-old child can be considered to be in charge of a dog in the streets, you've got another think coming," the magistrate retorted.

WAR WAS THE SPUR

The Korean War proved a major incentive to testing and developing of helicopters. In that campaign they airlifted 60,000 men.

Fined as Impaired

TRENTON —George Thomas Gunter of Trenton was fined $125 and ordered to pay $7.50 court costs when he was found guilty on a charge of driving while impaired in magistrate's court at Trenton yesterday.

Constable S. Vickers told the court that Mr. Gunter's car had been involved in a three-car accident on Nov. 9. The police officer said that Mr. Gunter had sustained a cut chin in the accident, and that he had been sent to Trenton hospital in a police cruiser. Constable Vickers said that the accused smelled of alcohol and staggered.

Dr. W. W. Weaver testified that he had treated Mr. Gunter for a chin laceration and also for a bump on the forehead. He said that the accused smelled of alcohol, but that the two injuries could have accounted for the staggering. A subsequent blood test, established that the alcohol content of the accused's blood was 2.1.

Day-Long Air Force Revolt Now Resolved

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters)— Argentine leaders say the day-long air force revolt had been resolved and the situation in the country is "entirely normal."

Their statement Tuesday night followed a day of confusion in which at one time three men were reported claiming to be commander-in-chief of the air force.

Air Secretary Juan Carlos Pereyra said he intended to fly to Cordoba "out of revolutions"—where Brig. Cayo Alsina set up a rebel air command after being dismissed from his post as air force chief.

"I believe the crisis has been overcome," Pereyra told reporters after a cabinet meeting.

Informed sources said that, in addition to Alsina's dismissal, Brig. Gilberto Hidalgo Oliva, air force combat commander, had been relieved of his post and placed under arrest at Cordoba.

An air force communique said only the air schools at Cordoba sided with Alsina.

However, air force units in Cordoba for a time occupied radio, television and other communications centres.

DAVE FOSTER KEITH BRINKLOW

Kentucky Fried Chicken Outlet to Open in City

Dave Foster of Foster's Restaurant Ltd., Peterborough, Ontario, opens his third outlet in Belleville. Originally he hails from Edmonton, Alberta. In early 1939 he joined the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and after completion of his police training in Regina, Sask., went overseas as reinforcement for the No. 1 Provost Corps which was made up entirely of members of the RCMP. He saw action in Sicily, Italy, Belgium and Holland. After discharge he established Foster's Grill which sat 33 people. Twelve years ago he opened his present restaurant on George St. in Peterborough which has a seating capacity of 130. Two years ago he opened a drive-in restaurant on Highway 28, Peterborough, which has proven most successful. Mr. Foster stated he would have to give credit to his wife for their success. Mrs. Foster, a graduate of the University of Saskatchewan in Dietetics and has done post graduate work at the University of Toronto. She has been a tower of strength and most helpful in menu planning, recipes and etc. He also felt a tremendous amount of credit had to go to his employees, as many of his present day staff have been with him from the very start and are particularly faithful. His only child, a little girl of five years, is his biggest booster of Kentucky Fred Chicken.

Mr. Keith Brinklow, manager of Foster's "Take Home" Kentucky Fried Chicken outlet was born in Peterborough and raised in Bancroft. He was educated there and at the age of 16 went to work for Foster's Restaurant Ltd. Mr. Foster stated he has been a faithful employee for 10 years and even as a young lad, was always keen to learn. He was aggressive and a most conscientious employee. He was particularly popular with fellow employees and although keen to take on this new and added responsibility, he regrets leaving his many friends in Peterborough. Mr. Foster stated he is proud to have Mr. Brinklaw associated with him and pleased to have him as his Belleville manager.

Nehru Rejects Past Preaching

Prime Minister Nehru of India has rejected China's terms for the settlement of the border war between the two countries.

On the face of it, this rejection would appear to carry with it the possibility that hostilities will soon be resumed. In the light of past events, such a resumption would involve grave risks for India.

Despite the now obvious and apparently steadily widening split between Peking and Moscow, any large participation by Britain or the United States in the defence of India would carry with it the possibility that Russia might in her turn aid the Chinese. If this occurred, there would be no guarantee that the war could be contained in the Himalayan area, after the fashion of the Korean conflict. It might easily touch off a nuclear holocaust.

All these things must be well known to Nehru. In the past, in largely similar circumstances, he has consistently and vigorously urged on the western democracies the policy of compromise, so much so that in many circles he has come to be regarded as virtually a fellow-traveller of the Reds.

Yet, at the same problem occurs in his own backyard, he is not prepared to give an inch.

There are some who will suggest that this apparently divided personality was revealed much earlier, in Nehru's stand on the Kashmir question. Here, though he had many times supported self-determination, he was not prepared to let the predominantly-Moslem inhabitants of a state ruled by a Hindu decide whether they wished their homeland to be part of Hindu India or Moslem Pakistan.

Apologists for Nehru, though, could make out quite a case in his defence. Not the least impressive of the pleas on his behalf was that in Kashmir lie the headwaters of rivers on which many millions of Indians depend for their very existence. Their diversion by Pakistan would have caused untold suffering.

Nehru now says that India, which means he himself, "has been forced to the conclusion the words of the Chinese Government cannot be relied upon." This is precisely what Western observers have been telling India for years

Yet, in the final analysis, China has much the same case on its northwestern frontier with India as India has on Kashmir. The road from Sinkiang Province to Tibet lies through the disputed territory. As with Kashmir's rivers, so with this road—its control involves the fate of those dwelling far from the actual scene of the disputed territory.

Nor Nehru appears willing to risk a major war for this largely uninhabited and uninhabitable area.

Perhaps, though, we are overlooking the importance of face. The Chinese are now in control of the vital road, and are apparently withdrawing from other territory. Nehru says he will not recognize the Chinese seizure by force of territory in the northwest. China has hinted that, if its claims are not recognized, new attacks will follow. But it could be that both are anxious to save face. If, in spite of his tough talk, Nehru makes no attempt to recapture the area in the road lies, and if, in spite of Nehru's defiance, the Chinese Reds launch no new offensive, then face will be saved and an uneasy peace preserved.

Sweep, But Save the Sweepings

With the announced decision of twelve members of Hastings County Council not to seek re-election, the county will lose men with a total of more than 150 years of municipal government experience. Four of the men retiring have been wardens of the county, and one man, Reeve William J. Davis, of Bangor, Wicklow and McClure, represents 31 years of experience all by himself.

In a totalitarian country, such experience would be retained in government indefinitely, unless of course it strayed from the officially approved line of the governing group.

But in fact, because of the flexibility of the Canadian form of government, this experience is not lost. It is retained in the spirit and wisdom of the lawbooks, and in tradition. Also, because Canadian law does not provide for the retirement of counsellors to the salt mines, or to the gallows, as do so many totalitarian systems, the men themselves are still available to give unofficial advice, if they are needed.

It is one of the great strengths of democratic government that those in authority over us are regularly changed, to make way for young blood and new ideas, without being disposed of permanently. This advantage alone is enough to justify the use of the secret ballot, rather than the machine gun, in politics.

Strictly Personal

Marxism Fails, Overlooking Real Needs.

By SYDNEY OSBAR

A student at a Western college, where I was lecturing recently, asked me if it was wrong with Marx's formula for a socialistic society: "From each according to ability, and to each according to need."

What is wrong with the Marxian formula is its economic determinism: it ignores the psychological aspects of man's life. For instance, what does it mean to say "according to need"?

"Need" is not an economic factor: it is a psychological one. Consequently the totally deprived, a "need" isn't what we lack — it is what our neighbors have. There is no end to our "needs" on the psychological ladder: anyone whose income has doubled in the last 10 years can testify that his "needs" have grown to absorb the difference.

That people should be rewarded on the basis of their utility to society is a thesis I cannot quarrel with; and one of the black marks against capitalism is its frivolous system of rewards, in which an indifferent perfume salesman can make more than a good teacher.

But allocating an income on the basis of "need" is a will-of-the-wisp. Pursue our needs though we may, we can never gratify all of them, for new ones keep arising as we satisfy the old ones.

In physical terms, man doesn't "need" much: he can live in a cave, a fire, and a dead animal to eat and skin. Beyond these, all our needs are culturally and psychologically conditioned. The American "needs" a car; in the suburbs he often "needs" two cars, although he would do much better to walk.

Nehru now says that India, which means he himself, "has been forced to the conclusion the words of the Chinese Government cannot be relied upon." This is precisely what Western observers have been telling India for years

Yet, in the final analysis, China has much the same case on its northwestern frontier with India as India has on Kashmir. The road from Sinkiang Province to Tibet lies through the disputed territory. As with Kashmir's rivers, so with this road—its control involves the fate of those dwelling far from the actual scene of the disputed territory.

Nor Nehru appears willing to risk a major war for this largely uninhabited and uninhabitable area.

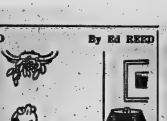
Perhaps, though, we are overlooking the importance of face. The Chinese are now in control of the vital road, and are apparently withdrawing from other territory. Nehru says he will not recognize the Chinese seizure by force of territory in the northwest. China has hinted that, if its claims are not recognized, new attacks will follow. But it could be that both are anxious to save face. If, in spite of his tough talk, Nehru makes no attempt to recapture the area in the road lies, and if, in spite of Nehru's defiance, the Chinese Reds launch no new offensive, then face will be saved and an uneasy peace preserved.

Top Officers Healthiest

Windsor Star

A British medical journal reports that the tallest and healthiest members of the British army are those holding the rank of colonel or higher. That really is why they become as it seems.

Traditionally the British army has an "officer class." It is recruited from the "upper classes" of the population. An ordinary coal miner, unless things have changed, wouldn't have much chance to become a British colonel, let alone a general.



These officers come from generations of well-fed, well-tended families. They have had a physical advantage over the majority of those in the miner and labor classes that until the national health system was put in operation over there.

There is another aspect to this. A tall, well setup man makes an imposing figure at the head of his regiment. A short fellow is much less so. It's just possible physique as well as ability has some part in the choice of top officers.

Little fellow, however, have an answer to all this. Napoleon Bonaparte was a small man, but he had some success as an officer!

'Stand-Bys' New Class

Vancouver Province

The almost "classless" society of air travellers is to have another class — the standbys.

British European Airways, like most airlines, finds the average flight is only 60 percent full on take-off. The high cancellation rate is to blame, as many customers book on more than one flight and choose their seat at the last moment.

In the empty seats (in theory, anyway) will file passengers who have waited at the airport with a cheaper ticket classifying them as stand-by customers. The scheme will be tried out next April.

The idea seems workable. A handy pool of available seatfillers is just what the airlines order, and the customers should be rewarded for offering himself as merchandise to the shipper that he is convenient. Like second-class mail.

Most air travellers are accustomed to the frustrations and inevitable waiting in airports. They would feel better about it if they knew they were saving money.

Is This Cure For Cheating?

Christian Science Monitor

A dispatch from Ossett, England, indicates that the headmaster of a grammar school there has established a "smoking room" for his 14-to-17-year-old pupils.

His reasoning: "It will cut out secret smoking in the bushes behind the bicycle and potting sheds."

Perhaps the school can now move on to more basic matters. Why not establish test rooms where open cheating is permitted, thus eliminating the need for furtiveness and ink on cuffs?

Humor Sells British Home

Cornwall Standard-Freeholder

There is a prevailing idea today that the only way to get business is by the "hard sell" method. This may be true but it is always necessary to follow traditional sales patterns? If you want to sell your product must you first proclaim its virtues and give the prospective buyer reason to prefer it to the products of some other firm?

A highly successful British realtor has achieved international fame and stimulated sales by making a break with tradition. He never knocks the other fellow's product, either —only his own.

The following exquisite example, typical of his advertising appeared in a recent issue of the London Observer.

"Chelsea is fashionable, that is why it attracts pretentious businessmen, with their awful wives and poorer envious detractors. All the water along is poisoned by the filthy effluvia of Lots Road Power Station, the Gas Works and a strong whiff from Battersea Power Station. It was only when they found that its corrosive fumes were attacking the stone fabric of London's ancient buildings that they did a partial filtration.)

"Anyway this horror of a house has eight bedrooms, two thrown into one room about 32 feet with chimney-piece, blood red painted woodwork and leprous yellow tiles. A ghastly basement bathroom, dirty kitchen with gas stove, sink and coal fuel copper. The coach seems recently to have been used as a fowl run. Terrible.

"Upstairs the decor is fairly new, clean and in passable taste. The children make a horrifying noise throughout. A small area of earth behind. Lease 40 years. Ground rent sixty pounds. Only six thousand eight hundred and fifty pounds. Might interest the many who missed twin No. 46 which we advertised and sold last week. Key at office but tread with caution on rotten basement boards."

The response to this masterpiece was so great that the desirable residence in question like "twin No. 46" could have been sold several hundred times over. Which goes to make quite a case for the proposition that honesty still is the best policy. At any rate when allied with wit it would seem to be the superlatives to shame in getting results.

Try to Make Butter Spread

Chatham News

Whatever defects margarine has, including the lack in its natural state of the artificial coloring necessary to enable it to pass for butter, it has one advantage.

It is comparatively easy to spread.

So dairy researchers, though they are doing nothing to facilitate the latter process, are working hard in several countries to help housewives by developing a more spreadable butter.

Ever since refrigeration became a boon to housewives have had to cope with spreading brickline butter. And for that period, scientists have made attempts to improve butter's spreading ability.

Now the department of agriculture in the Australian state of Victoria at its school of dairy technology in Werribee, has joined several research counter parts in a new attack on the subject.

To Your Good Health

Dieting Is Not a Cure For High Blood Pressure

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What food should be avoided by a person with high blood pressure? — Mrs. M. F.

Dieting doesn't cause high blood pressure. Changing your diet won't prevent or correct it.

There may be special instances in which some change is indicated. For example, one type that you cut down on salt, because it encourages the undesirable accumulation of fluid in the body.

Or if the action of the kidneys is impaired, as sometimes occurs with the condition, it may be wise to reduce the amount of protein. The damaged kidneys have trouble removing nitrogen wastes.

If overweight, then a low calorie diet, simply for the purpose of reducing, is advisable.

None of these — except a reducing diet if necessary — will affect high blood pressure.

I say this because so many people are likely to jump to the erroneous conclusion that treatment to correct or control an ailment will, if used early, also prevent it.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it possible to have babies, or even to conceive, if the navel has been removed? Does the mother's navel in any way help nourish a developing fetus? — L.H.

Yes, you can have babies and no, the mother's navel has nothing whatever to do with nourishing the baby. The navel is the stump where the umbilical cord was attached before birth. Hence it is a scar of the unborn baby is important, not the mother's.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is the effect of aspirin when taken over a period of years? A woman in her early 40's? If she doesn't take it, she aches in the arms and shoulders. — Mrs. H.M.

This is a pain-relieving combination of aspirin, caffein and an antihistamine. It is effective in relieving many symptoms of colds and in other aches and pains. I am not aware of any ill effects from prolonged use over many months. Only six thousand eight hundred and fifty pounds. Might interest the many who missed twin No. 46 which we advertised and sold last week. Key at office but tread with caution on rotten basement boards."

The response to this masterpiece was so great that the desirable residence in question like "twin No. 46" could have been sold several hundred times over. Which goes to make quite a case for the proposition that honesty still is the best policy. At any rate when allied with wit it would seem to be the superlatives to shame in getting results.

Dear Dr. Molner: Thirty years ago I was treated for syphilis and supposedly cured. Recently other tests have been made and the V.D.R.L. test was weakly reactive. Blood pressure reactive, Kolmer reactive plus 3.

My doctor said not to worry but I wonder if I shouldn't have treatment? Should I have a spinal tap? — E.C.

These newer tests are increasingly sensitive. There is another, the TPI (treponema pallidum immobilization test) which is said to be the most accepted as the ultimate, but it is not performed routinely.

A spinal tap also is important; if it comes out negative, then you can put your mind at ease.

Without reflecting on the extreme usefulness of the older tests, the newer ones can reveal very faint traces indeed. It is not unusual with syphilis for enough to linger to teste detect it, yet the traces can be so small that the patient is not ill and does not actually have the disease, nor is he infectious.

Dear Dr. Molner: How can I get rid of the water in my body? It causes me to swell and feel bloated. I am nursing a baby. The doctor doesn't want to give me pills because they could affect my milk — Mrs. E.M.

He could put the baby on a bottle and give you drugs for ridding the body of water. However, I'd accept his decision.

Fat! My leaflet, "The Lost Secret of Reducing," tells how to get rid of it the easy way. For your copy, write Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P.O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill., enclosing a long, self-addressed, unstamped envelope and 10c in coin to cover cost of handling.

Quarrelsome To Be Pitied

Windsor Star

Recently we were chatting with an old friend from out of town. We asked him about his wife and the rest of our old friend. He hadn't seen much of her in recent years. "She is a quarrelsome woman," he explained.

And so she was. She had been the cause of considerable for her husband and family just by her unfortunate temperament and disposition. When her husband died, many who had been friends of the family just faded away. There was no pleasure in continuing any association with her.

There are many such people in the world (though, happily for humanity, they are in the minority). They seem incapable of giving humor or kindly or gentle attitudes.

They usually feel sorry for themselves, failing to recognize they themselves are at fault. They also, usually, are lacking in the quality of humor which would brighten their own lives and those of others. They go through their years creating unhappiness, rather than happiness for others.

It is a sad thing. Such people live out their years without enjoying them (unless they take pleasure in making our misery and that of others.)

They are more to be pitied than condemned.

THE PACKSACK

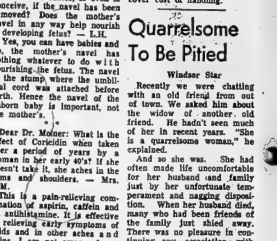
By GREGORY CLARK

At a friend's house last night the conversation was interrupted by the appearance of the sixteen-year-old son of the family coming into his father's den looking very exhausted and dejected. He was supposed to be studying for a pre-Christmas examination at his high school.

"I can't take this stuff in!" he said bitterly to his dad. "It's the use of trying to know everything! How can anybody know everything, the way the world is now?"

His dad is an M.A. as well as a B.A. who has proven by his success in business that education pays off.

"Look, son," he said, "the purpose of education is not to equip you for everything. It is to equip you to know only one thing. And that is to know where and how to find anything you wish to know."



The boy stared in astonishment at his father.

"Say that again, Dad."

The father, smiling, repeated it. The boy, looking revived, retreated to his studies.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — The stock market continued to drift through morning trading today, giving no clear indication of which direction it is headed.

Among industrials, attention concentrated on Interprovincial Steel and Pipe, which raced through more than 27,000 shares in the first hour, climbing 45 cents to a year's peak of $2.35.

Abitibi, Consolidated Paper, Shell of Canada, Walker - Goodeham and Toronto - Dominion Bank all gained in a ¼ to ¾ range.

Calgary Power dropped ¾, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce ½, Distillers Seagrams and Cdn. Steel Corp. and Imperial Oil, Royal Bank and Shawinigan all ¼.

On the exchange index, industrials dipped .14 to 564.44. Golds rose .23 to 88.80, base metals 40 to 187.10 and western oils .27 to 115.90. The 11 a.m. volume was 650,000 shares compared with 512,000 at the same time Tuesday.

Among base metals, Falconbridge gained ¾, International Nickel ⅝ and Hudson Bay Mining and Consolidated Mining and Smelting both ¼, Noranda dipped ⅛.

Trinity continued to weaken in the speculative list, dropping 12 cents to 83 cents.

In western oils, Great Plains Development advanced ¼ and Bailey Selburn A 25 cents to $9.70. Canada Southern Petroleums fell 30 cents to $505.

The market rallied in the final hour Tuesday.

The pickup still left industrials on the downside on index, however. Golds and western oils both showed fractional declines.

In the main list, Abitibi dropped 1⅛, Consolidated Paper ¼, Aluminium ⅜ and Royal Bank ⅛.

Dominion Foundries and Steel opened with a fractional decline, climbed ahead two points, then eased to show a gain of ⅛. Interprovincial Pipe Line, Shawinigan, Walker - Goodeham, Massey - Ferguson and Consumer's Gas all gained in a ⅛ to ⅜ range.

Among base metals, International Nickel and Noranda both gained ⅛, while Rio Algom and Falconbridge each slipped ⅛. Gunnar Mining, on unusually heavy volume, gained 20 cents to $9.55.

District Provincial Parks Staff Now Busy Planning For Coming Years' Influx

Nowadays most people are thinking of Christmas and wondering if they are going to have to get out first thing in the morning to shovel a fresh, deep layer of snow from the walks and driveway. It is improbable that many are thinking, seriously a least, of balmy beaches and camping during these wintry days.

Such a subject is very much a concern in the office of the parks superintendent at the district—headquarters of the Department of Lands and Forests at Tweed, no matter how cold the wind blows. The local provincial parks which have shown a remarkable facility to develop in line with the public's needs and wants, experienced a tremendous flow of campers and recreation-seekers during this past summer — a much greater flow than was anticipated.

At Outlet Park on the west side of Prince Edward County, for instance, the attendance jumped from 318,000 visitors in 1961 to 480,000 this year — a rise of about 40 per cent, or quadruple the anticipated annual increment. There was very heavy use of the camping facilities and it was a rare day in July and August that the park authorities did not have to turn away a large overflow of people seeking camping sites.

At Bon Echo Park on Lake Mazinaw, where 400 fresh new campsites are located, several overflow weekends were experienced and the majority of the campsites were in use throughout the summer. An almost continual overflow state could occur next year, however, if this, the largest park in the district, should experience the sudden increase in popularity which Outlet received this year.

PLAN FOR FUTURE

How to accommodate all these campers is the worry of Harold Cantelon, district parks supervisor, and his staff, and it is during the winter months that planning for the next few summers must take place.

Ideas have to be conceived and considered, conditions and facilities examined and taken into account, proposals drawn up, feasibility and cost examination before a formal presentation of a plan is made for the consideration, and possible approval, of the powers that be.

Short range projects, such as new or additional washroom facilities, are usually implemented between seasons. Next summer, for instance will find a new washroom building at Outlet Park, its fifth, and at Bon Echo Park, its first.

Immediate requirements, such as a underplanting and sodding operation to prevent soil erosion and damage at Outlet Beach, will be undertaken to protect what facilities have already been installed. An experiment will be conducted with different types of grasses to see which will do the most effective job.

Expansion of camping facilities, however, is a major project and usually entails the acquisition of additional lands or the change of basic land use layout of present park property as well as being a fairly expensive undertaking. Whether or to acquire additional property or to convert current property from one use to another requires careful examination and usually takes a season.

MAY ABANDON TRAILS

At Outlet Park, for instance, where there is a desperate need for more camp sites — there are 263 now — it has been decided that the most economical method is to convert a section of the park which was originally designated for nature trails. Over the past few seasons it has been realized that very few park visitors use this particular section and that it could be put to better use as a camp site area capable of accommodating about 100 sites.

A plan for this project is being submitted to head office and if approved is given and funds allocated, there should be 100 more camp sites at Outlet Park by 1964.

By the same year it is also hoped that additional property will be acquired on both sides of Lake Mazinaw to allow expansion of Bon Echo Park, with more campsites being provided if next year's use warrants them.

A great increase in the number of boats being used by campers and park visitors over the past summer has brought about the investigation for provision of additional boat launching and docking facilities.

Bon Echo may also expect additional washroom facilities in the next few years and a natural amphitheatre is to be developed so that park patrons may enjoy outdoor movies three weekly and open air church services within the next couple of years.

The snow may cover the sands and lands of the district provincial parks but it doesn't prevent them from undergoing close scrutiny during the winter months as Mr. Cantelon and the Lands and Forests people at Tweed strive to meet the demands which Ontario residents and visitors will be placing on them during the next few years.

Sea Cow Has Just Single Objective in Life, Eating

By JOE McGOWAN JR.

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)—The sea cow, probably known as a manatee, is a homely, dark gray, docile one-ton bulk of mammal with single objective in life—eating.

Certain marine scientists believe this enormous appetite could be channeled to useful purposes.

They suggest the sea cows could be "grazed" in the miles of Florida canals, where they could munch away to their hearts' content, on hyacinth, water lettuce and other aquatic plants whose prolific growth results in clogged waterways.

Feasibility of using these animated underwater mowing machines was demonstrated in an experiment at Georgetown, British Guiana, by Prof. W. H. O. Allsopp, a Briton now with the United Nations in Lome, Togo, West Africa.

The manatee nibbled some pools so clean, Allsopp wrote, that they had to be fed supplemental grass. He estimated each sea cow consumed 100 pounds of foliage a day.

Weird of this whalelike glutton came as music to the ears of directors of the Central and South Florida Flood Control District, which directs construction and maintenance of more than 500 miles of canals in 16 Florida counties.

PLAN ROUNDUP

This last year, the FCD spent $40,000 on chemicals alone to eradicate hyacinth, water lettuce, alligator weed and other aquatic plants growing on or below canal waters.

"At our present rate of construction we'll soon spend $500,000 a year just for materials to clear weeds from canals," estimated Robert R. (Fish) Horner of Palm Beach, vice-chairman of the FCD.

Horner is giving serious thought to a huge sea cow roundup next spring. Great numbers of the manatees congregate at least once a year in the calm inlet waters of Lake Worth, between Palm Beach and West Palm Beach.

Horner thinks 2,000 or 3,000 sea cows would be needed at the start.

He feels more sea cows would have to be netted later to keep pace with canal construction.

"All of the manatee's time is apparently occupied with eating," Horner commented. "They have a slow rate of reproduction."

The Chinese have called this "utterly unacceptable." They are insisting on holding their present positions at the northeastern end of the border where the question of the Sept. 8 line involves more than 3,000 square miles.

13,946 Pelts Sold at Auction For Good Prices

NORTH BAY (CP) — Seventeen fur buyers from three countries paid $114,971 Tuesday for 13,946 pelts at the Ontario Trappers Association's first seasonal sale.

It was the largest December sale since the trappers started their own province-wide auctions in 1959.

Highest price was $89 for a dark female fisher skin while fisher prices generally averaged $43.38.

Top price for prime beaver was $20. The 5,100 beaver pelts sold averaged $10.15.

Other top and average prices were: Otter $45, $20.94; wild mink $23.50, $13.85; fox $7.75, $4.71; marten $11, $5.85; muskrat $1.82, $1.19.

Buyers, the largest number to attend an early auction, came from London, New York, Montreal and several Ontario centres.

Cold Weather and Heavy Snow Grip Western New York State

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—Residents of snowbelts in western and north - central New York, pounded by wind-driven snow storms off Lakes Erie and Ontario, stood primed today for a new wintry assault.

The forecast was for an additional six to 18 inches of snow in those sections and a continuation of blizzard-like conditions in the Watertown area where 29 inches had piled up.

Near-zero temperatures were expected for most of the state.

The typically unpredictable storm off Lake Erie dumped more than 18 inches of blowing, drifting snow along the lake front south of Buffalo Tuesday but it skirted the city.

The State Thruway's 86-mile stretch from Lackawanna to the Pennsylvania state line was closed for an 18-hour period before opening late Tuesday. Snow plow crews battled five - foot drifts to liberate some stranded motorists.

Most highways in a 15 - mile - wide band of snow were snarled with automobiles and trucks. Poor visibility, brought on by strong winds, added to the drivers' problems.

A Thruway service area near Angola, about 17 miles south of Buffalo, became a refuge for shivering, snow - bound travelers when the area reached its peak Monday night and early Tuesday.

Watertown took the honors for the most snowfall in the state in a storm centered up over Lake Ontario. A state of fire-emergency was declared when officials became concerned about snow-covered fire hydrants and the possibility of water - line freezing.

Schools and businesses in the storm-struck areas were closed. Absenteeism was high among workers.

The storm that packed the lakeshore of Western New York turned southeast into Tuesday night and teamed over portions of eastern Chautauqua County and through Cattaraugus County.

County highway departments, although standing at the alert for a head - start against the storm, were hard - pressed to keep highways cleared.

month gain of 147,000 or 2.7 per cent on non-farm employment, mostly in service, manufacturing and construction industries.

Unemployment among men increased by 86,000 between October and November, accounting for almost the entire 89,000 rise in jobless numbers. There were 273,000 unemployed men—149,000 of them married — and 64,000 unemployed women, 22,000 of whom were married.

Three-quarters of the jobless, a total 280,000, had been unemployed for three months or less compared with 203,000 a month earlier. Another 89,000 persons had been seeking jobs for four to six months and 43,000 had been unemployed for more than six months.

Estimated unemployment by regions, with October figures bracketed: Atlantic 84,000 (42,000); Quebec 124,000 (108,000); Ontario 82,000 (68,000); Prairies 49,000 (39,000); Pacific 39,000 ($5,000).

ary situation in Brunei was under control and the main problem now was for the sultan of Brunei, Sir Omar Ali Saifuddin, to settle the political issues that were behind the revolt.

The main political issue centres on the sultan's agreement in principle to merge his territory in the proposed Independent Malaysia federation that would link Brunei with Sarawak, North Borneo, Singapore and Malaya.

The rebels are opposed to the British - sponsored federation plan, seeking instead a merger of the three northern Borneo protectorates of Brunei, Sarawak and North Borneo into an independent nation.

Business Briefs

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

STORE SALES HIGHER

Department store sales in October were estimated at $127,217,000, an increase of 3.4 per cent from October, 1961, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today. This brought sales for the January-October period to $1,186,285,000, larger by 3.3 per cent than the year-earlier figure.

Regionally, sales in October were higher in value in Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia, and lower in the remaining provinces.

CASH FEWER CHEQUES

Value of cheques cashed in clear centres in September decreased two-fifths of one per cent—the first decline this year — to $24,366,973,000. Debits in the January-September period rose to 9.3 per cent to $240,624,520,000 from $220,156,704,000 in the same nine months of 1961.

PRODUCE MORE OIL

Net receipts of crude oil, liquefied petroleum gases and petroleum products increased 7.6 per cent in August, 1962, to 31,554,089 barrels from 29,323,679 in August, 1961.

BUTTER STOCKS UP

Stocks of creamery butter were greater at Dec. 6 than a year earlier in Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina and Saskatoon, and smaller in other centres. Stocks in nine Canadian cities amounted to 943,000 pounds, a rise of 3.3 per cent from the comparable 1961 total.

FLOUR OUTPUT SAGS

Output of wheat flour in October fell four per cent from the same month last year, to 3,265,000 hundredweight, from 3,384,000. In the first three months of the current Canadian crop year — August-September-October — production totalled 9,081,000 hundredweight, eight per cent less than in the same three-month period last year.

Canadian Industry Must Not Be Complacent Says Hees

HAMILTON (CP)—With all signs indicating sharply increasing competition, Canadian industry must not become complacent about its performance in world markets, Trade Minister Hees said today.

Addressing the Ontario regional industrial expansion conference, Mr. Hees said that although businessmen have been somewhat successful in seeking new product markets, more needs to be done.

Natural resources industries—long the foundation of the Canadian economy—were not in their former, favorable position, "when the world clamored for our resources."

"Other sources of materials, competitive with our own, are being and will continue to be developed."

Mr. Hees said Canada must be prepared to protect and expand its export markets "by broadening our commodity base."

SEEK NEW LINES

"This can be done by searching for new lines of production be in all sectors of our manufacturing and processing industries."

Other changes are taking place in conditions affecting world trade, Mr. Hees said, changes which appear to signal a move toward lower world tariffs—thus stiffening competition for Canada.

He urged businessmen to take advantage of federal government policies aimed at stimulating Canadian production and encouraging businessmen to sell in new markets.

"One area . . . where increased emphasis is being placed is the promotion of licensing or manufacturing arrangements with foreign companies."

The text of Mr. Hees' address was released to the press in advance of delivery.

from West Berlin.

Now, he said, the problem is to examine the affair of Cuba which "brought the world to the brink of war" and study what lessons can be learned from it by peace-loving people.

ROCKETS FOR DEFENCE

Referring to the rockets the Soviet Union had located in Cuba, Khrushchev said it was a "malicious invention" that they were to be used for an attack on the U.S. The rockets were there, he said, only for Cuba's defence.

If the Soviet Union had wanted to attack the U.S., it could have used the long-range rockets stationed on its own soil, Khrushchev said.

He also asserted that if the Soviet Union had wanted war, it would not have dismantled the rockets. Instead, he said, the rockets would have been used.

The premier outlined in detail the progress of negotiations conducted by urgent letters with Kennedy, and declared at one point:

"If the other side had not shown restraint, an explosion would have followed."

He said the Soviet Union and other socialist peoples had an answer to the question of whether they want war.

"The answer is a decisive no," he said.

DEFENCE COSTS RISE

OSLO (AP)—Parliament approved Norway's biggest defence budget ever Tuesday. The 1963 defence budget amounts to 1,542,000,000 kroner ($220,000,000); 232,000,00 kroner more than last year's record budget.

Students

not because of discrimination. A few days after his testimony he issued a statement saying French - Canadians occupy 13 per cent of the executive positions in the publicly-owned railroad.

Mr. Gordon said he told the four students that CNR policy on bilingualism is to provide officers who speak both languages where the public needs it.

He said it was clear to him in the interview with the students that some of his testimony before the railway committee had been reported "quite inaccurately" in newspapers and on television and radio.

Delegate Pierre Marois said he was "very satisfied" with the interview.

Marois told reporters the student demonstration had become unruly because "other groups" had joined it and "we couldn't control them."

SEPARATISM EVIDENT

Quebec separatist sentiment was evident in some of the placards carried by demonstrators and in stickers plastered on walls in the CNR station.

The stickers read "Quebec: Rebellion 1837, revolution 1962" and "Quebec: A free country—why not?"

The demonstrators were dispersed at about 6 p.m. after battling police in an attempt to gain access to the CNR office building and the hotel.

One youth who swung at a policeman was rapped on the head with a night-stick.

The crowds then invaded the station, treating commuters to several choruses of O Canada in French and attaching stickers to the walls.

Returning to the street, they burned an effigy of the CNR chief and waved placards saying in French: "Down with colonialism" and "Down with Gordon."

of order. Only cabinet ministers can introduce spending legislation.

Suggestions involving a capital projects program consumed much of Tuesday's discussion time in committee stage. Opposition speakers argued that the board should have money behind it to spend.

But McLeod said that "if we can't get cash on the barrelhead . . . I think we should have a fund set up." H. J. Robichaud (L—Gloucester) said he was "amazed" that no fund is being established with the board. Mr. MacInnis said a fund would be "an important and integral" part of the bill.

The one amendment that did get through was put forward by the government. It leaves the chairman's salary up to the cabinet instead of specifying $3,000 a year.

What began as essentially a debate between members from the Atlantic provinces gradually spread throughout the Commons until it became, by all appearances, a national issue. Paul Martin (L—Essex East) was one of the chief spokesmen for the Liberal party.

John R. Matheson (L—Leeds) said the board would have limited personnel, no money, and yet an assignment that appeared to be "ridiculous and virtually impossible."

WINDS HOLD SWAY

Unseasonably cold weather and gusty, raw winds held a vise-like grip on most of the eastern two-thirds of the United States.

There appeared little prospect of an immediate, general break in the bone - chilling weather. Record low temperatures were reported in most of the ice belt for the second straight day—10 days in advance of the official start of the winter season.

In the snow-covered sections of the northeast, pounded by storms for nearly a week, more heavy snow fell. Weary highway crews struggled to keep the main arteries open. Snow depths measured eight feet in parts of hard-hit northeast Ohio.

The main core of the Arctic air centred in the north central region. Brisk winds powered the sub-zero cold southward to the gulf coast and eastward to the Appalachians. Far - below-zero marks were reported in the Dakotas, Minnesota and Wisconsin, ranging to as low as 18 below in Huron, S.D.

SOUTH SHIVERS

The southland shivered in the season's coldest weather. It was near zero in sections of North Carolina, Kentucky, Arkansas and Tennessee and in mountain areas of northern Georgia and Alabama.

Florida reeled from the abnormally low temperatures. The bitter cold—for Florida—threatened winter vegetables in the south. Damage in crops varied but some estimates are in the millions of dollars. No serious damage was reported immediately to citrus crops.

"Miserable" was the weather. The beaches in south Florida were bare and the tourists were clothed in newly bought sweaters and coats. Miami's 38 above was a record low for Dec. 11. Bureau's description of conditions in the Great Lakes and Ohio Valley regions. The weather was frigid. More heavy snow piled atop the huge covering on the grounds.

DECLARE EMERGENCY

A state of emergency was declared in Connecut. In northeast Ohio, as huge drifts from the 30 inches on the ground blocked all roads leading into the community of 16,000, National Guardsmen brought a supply of food and fuel into the snowbound area and used some tanks and heavy trucks for a shuttle service to a hospital.

There were monumental traffic jams in many parts of the snow belt. Schools remained closed in many areas.

In upstate New York, the state Thruway's 66-mile stretch from south Buffalo to the Pennsylvania state line was reopened Tuesday after being closed by the heavy snow for 18 hours. Snow tapered off in the Watertown area, where it measured nearly 30 inches. But forecasters in the New York snow belt predicted more snow.

Piping Hot Party Pizzas

by Mary Moore

We nearly quarrelled over these pizzas for our dinners because who would get the most of cause were were so hungry.

Eleanor and I stopped answering readers' letters at 4:00 p.m. and donned aprons in the kitchen. I made the dough while she prepared the fillings and then we cut and topped them assembly-line style.

INDIVIDUAL PARTY PIZZAS (12):

Dough: 1¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour, 1 tablespoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, ¾ cup cooking (salad) oil, ½ cup milk.

Sift together sifted flour, baking powder and salt. Make well in centre and add oil and milk. Mix to smooth dough with fork. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead 10 turns only. Roll out to ¾" thickness (no thicker). Cut out with 3" cutter. Make depression in centre of each by pressing down hard with bottom of floured tumbler. This raises the edges too. Brush these mounds lightly with oil and sprinkle each with shredded Mozzarella cheese — using 1 cup in all.

Spread: 1 6-oz. can tomato paste, ¼ teaspoon garlic salt,

WEDNESDAY

Dinner Menu

Beef Stew with Vegetables; Potato Pancakes; Celery; Fruit Frozen Raspberries; Holiday Hermits (see Tuesday); Coffee.

Mix together in order given and spread neatly on pizza rounds.

Have ready the Fillings: Drained canned anchovies or fancy sardines, diagonally sliced Polish sausage, sliced stuffed olives. (Additional and optional filling ingredients are: sliced weiners, sliced button mushrooms, crumbled cooked bacon.)

Put a sardine or an anchovy in centre of 8 of them; flank sides with sliced olives (and with sliced mushrooms, if desired). Arrange 3 thin diagonal slices of Polish sausages fan-wise on remaining 7 rounds. Flank these with sliced stuffed olives.

Sprinkle tops generously with grated Parmesan cheese. Arrange on buttered cookie sheet. Bake at 450 deg. Fahr. for 10 to 12 minutes. Or cover with saran and refrigerate until serving time, then bake at 450 deg. Fahr. for 12 to 15 minutes.

Tonight I am going to serve these to my Y.P.U. executive with tea with lemon and sugar in mugs.

NOTE:

Genuine Pizzas are made with yeast dough. The above is a compromise for those who are not confident yeast bakers and is surprisingly similar.

FIND HEROIN

NEW YORK (AP)—Sign of the season: Police raided a Harlem apartment Monday and said they charged eight persons with violations of the narcotics law after finding heroin valued at $150,000 on the illegal market. Detectives added that more than 10 ounces of heroin was in 50 packages—gaily wrapped in red and gold Christmas paper.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS BY PATRICIA LEWIS

CAFETERIA CODE OF ETHICS

"Me First" is one of the crudest forms of impoliteness, but I didn't realize how crude it could be until I ventured into a cafeteria one day for lunch.

Cafeteria-eating is one of the more typical aspects of the American way of life, as native as apple pie and hot dogs. It can be great fun, too, if only the rugged individualists in line would change their motto from "me first" to "first come, first served."

I waited more than five minutes for the right to order roast beef and fixin's, but every time I tried to utter the magic words someone nudged his way to the front and shouted his order to the counterman.

He finally noticed my predicament and froze the next line-crasher with a cold stare. As he fixed my order, he commented, "Miss, you can't be a ladylike here. You got to speak up."

I don't agree, of course. I think good manners are appropriate wherever you are, whether it's the subway, a crowded bus, a theatre line or eating in a cafeteria.

Possibly the boors in the food line don't realize they're stepping on other people's toes, figuratively and literally. Probably many of them help old ladies across the street, remember friends on their birthdays, and are polite as all get-out to their families and co-workers.

Perhaps it's the competitive spirit that brings out the beast in them. So to help them become more congenial luncheon companions and otherwise make them aware of the comfort and good will of others, I offer what I dub a Concise Code of Cafeteria Conduct:

1. After you've emptied your tray, don't just drop it on another part of the table or on the nearest vacant chair. Take it to the closest tray-collection area, which is usually no more than a few feet away.

2. Don't reach in front of others for rolls, butter or coffee. There's plenty to go around, and you risk getting stabbed or burned because of your eagerness.

3. Have your money ready as you approach the cashier's desk. Don't fumble in your pocket or purse at the last minute and keep the rest of the lines on pins and needles while you fish out the proper amount.

4. Be respectful to the strangers who are your companions at the table. Try not to smoke after finishing your meal; the others might be in the middle of theirs. If you must have a cigarette with your coffee, aim the smoke away from them.

5. Cafeteria-eating is exactly what it implies — the only area of the table that belongs to you is the space required for your food dishes. Don't be a table hog and spread books, handbag and miscellaneous items of shopping about as if they were table decorations.

6. Above all, keep in line. If you do in every respect others will follow your polite lead.

The Nativity Reverently Portrayed by OSD Students

"One in royal David's city
Stood a lowly cattle-shed;
Where a mother laid her Baby
In a manger for His bed."

Mary was that mother mild,
Jesus Christ her little Child."

The ageless story of the Nativity, stripped of its gaudy modern commercialism, as presented to a capacity audience Monday evening by the students of the Ontario School for the Deaf, was one of quiet simplicity and deep reverence. Even the two Christmas trees, one at the outside entrance, and one sentinelling the platform, devoid of gleaming, globes and ropes of tinsel, mutely carried one back to that Nativity in Bethlehem, over two thousand years ago where God used the simple and humble to confound the mighty.

The pageant, consisting of five scenes, was adapted from the Biblical story, and directed by Miss Helen Keeler, who also designed the costumes of the cast portraying the garb of humble citizens; the rich apparel of King Herod and his court, and the gorgeous, scintillating, eastern robes of the three wisemen, one in gold and white, one in rose and green, and one in blue and silver.

INCIDENTAL MUSIC

The incidental music which accompanied the portrayal, was sung by the teaching members of the staff with Mr. S. Alec Gordon at the piano. The Scripture selection, which preceded each scene, was narrated by John MacLachlan, gowned in clerical vestments.

The pageant opened with the ladies' chorus singing a 15th century German carol, "Behold A Branch Is Growing," and during the Annunciation scene, showing Mary wending her way to the place of prayer, the sudden arrival of the angel, and his departure, Mrs. A. Davidson sang "The Magnificat," and Schubert's "Ave Maria."

Scene two showed the travellers arriving at the Inn; but, when Joseph and Mary come, there is no room left for them, and they depart to the only place of shelter, the cattle-shed.

In scene three the shepherds were depicted tending their Judean flocks by night around a fire of coals. The night is cold and dark. Suddenly a little shepherd lad comes running, points to a great light in the sky, and as suddenly the angel, Gabriel appeared, bringing glad tidings of great joy which shall be to all people; then the host of angels with their trumpets. The music accompanying this scene was the Gregorian hymn, "This Holy Night," and "O Little Town of Bethlehem."

HEROD'S COURT

Scene four presented King Herod and his court; the High Priest with his long grey beard and sanctimonious fallen and the slaves. A messenger announces the arrival of the three Wise men from the east; their departure seeking the new-born King and Herod's disturbed attitude on learning that the new King would be born in Bethlehem. Herod's crafty character was well demonstrated as he walked back and forth, tugging at his black goatee. Piano music backgrounded this scene.

In scene five Mary and Joseph; the adoring shepherds; the angels and the little cherub, seated around the Babe sleeping in the straw-filled cradle, was reverently portrayed. The arrival of the three Wise Men bringing their gifts of gold frankincense and myrrh; the angels hosts; the soft lighting effect, the majestic notes of "Adeste Fidelis," "O Come All Ye Faithful," and the resonant voice of the narrator proclaiming: "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life," climaxed the old, old but ever new story of Jesus and His love, precluding any noisy demonstration of appreciation.

Prior to the pageant, Mr. J. G. Demeza, superintendent of the school, welcomed the fine assembly of parents and friends and briefly explained the various forms and degrees of hearing of the students, which ranged from the totally deaf, to those who had become deaf early in life, and to those who had still some residue of hearing. He mentioned that it was the policy of the school to teach the Christmas story to the students; to familiarize them with it during the school years, and to create in them a reverence for the things of God, adding there was no elaborate scenery as it was not appropriate to the theme, so the natural setting was chosen.

RHYTHM BAND

The Rhythm Band, under the direction of Mr. Kenneth Graham, favored with a number, "Christmas Fantasy" beginning with the soft tinkle of bells, and ending in a jubilant crescendo of "Jingle Bells, Jingle Bells".

Mr. Roger Rawlins, also favored with a delightful baritone solo, "Night of Nights," by Van De Water.

Christmas carols were enjoyed by the audience and included "Silent Night" and "Away In a Manger".

The cast follows (in order of appearance):

Narrator, John MacLachlan; Mary, Gail Williamson; Angel Gabriel, Gwenda Addison; Publicans, Richard Colosimone and Michael Mooney; Roman Soldiers; Inn Keeper, Henry McKinzie, Jack Clemen and Bill Greeley; Tax Payers, James Learmonth; Peter Sicoli and Paul Durand; Joseph, Richard Csabi; Shepherds, Ronald Shamboni, Eldon Clarke, Michael De La Pranel, Roland Lapointe and Aimo Martinen; Young shepherd, Jimmie Cripps; Herald Angel, Judy Ann Wilson; Heavenly Host, Lynda Baetz, Margaret Gregg, Roberta Ferguson, Elaine Carlyle, Dorothy Cook, Mary Nickoy, Nancl Aylon, Marlene Munn, Carol Palmer and Norma Wojcik; King Herod, Jacques Daoust; High Priest, Wayne Brady; Altar Boy, Billy White; Scribes, John Duggan and Fred Singleton; Slave Girls, Carol Bowman and Judy Driscoll; Wise Men, Bruce Fisher, Donald Russell and Clifton Carbin; Cherubs, Helen Wojcik, Debbie Sullivan, Danny Carter and Dennis Fitchett; Angels, Nancl Ayton, Lynda Baetz, Elaine Carlyle, Dorothy Cook, Susan Cooper, Roberta Ferguson, Shirley Fountain, Margaret Gregg, Jacqueline Hoare, Lorna Kirker, Carol McLeod, Donna Mosher, Marlene Munn, Mary Nickoy, Carol Palmer, Jane Plaska, Ann Todd and Norma Wojcik.

St. Julien Ch. Entertains Newcomers

The December meeting of the St. Julien Chapter IODE, was held at the Chapter room in Front Street, in the form of a Christmas party.

After a short business meeting, the Regent, Mrs. R. Patterson, welcomed the New Canadian guests, following which Mrs. G. Hume set the party tempo by introducing contests, and games, for which novel prizes were given. Mrs. J. Parrott and Miss D. Zalatoris contributed piano selections.

Film convener Mrs. F. Carscallen, showed the film, "Stratford Adventure," and in lighter vein, "The Magic Fiddle," both of which were greatly enjoyed.

The evening concluded with a delectable lunch served by social conveners Mrs. J. Hrschovic and Mrs. J. Gajdicar.

County Home Aux. Holds Yule Meet

On Monday afternoon the Women's Auxiliary of the Hastings County Home held their monthly meeting at the Home with a splendid attendance.

The vice-president Mrs. A. Daniels took charge of the meeting and all reports were given and several items of business discussed. A number of ladies volunteered to assist Mrs. York in the wrapping of Christmas gifts for the residents on December 19th. The new scrap book containing pictures of the birthday parties held each month was on display. Since there will be many letters entertainments for the residents during the holiday season it was decided to postpone the treat provided by the Auxiliary to a later date. This portion of the meeting closed with the reading on "Light a Christmas Candle."

Everyone gathered in the dining room for the birthday party honoring residents with birthdays in December. Christmas carols were sung and Mrs. Daniels favored with a Christmas solo her "Tell the Glad Tidings" accompanied by Mrs. Hubbs at the piano.

All joined hands around the guests and sang the birthday song. Mrs. Ann Sharpe cut the beautiful birthday cake which was attractively decorated in festive Yule colors.

Mrs. H. Garrison and Mrs. F. Harris presided at the tea table which also was especially gay in keeping with the holiday season so close at hand.

Tea and tasty goodies were enjoyed while chatting with the guests, thus bringing to a close another pleasant and successful afternoon.

ST. ANNE'S PARISH COUNCIL

POINT ANNE — St. Anne's Parish Council held its December meeting at the home of Mrs. Robert Cook on Wednesday evening.

Mrs. B. Whalen was in charge of the meeting as the president, Mrs. B. Walsh, was absent.

The financial statement was given and reported on money taken in at the bazaar. Mrs. H. Flesch reported that she had sent clothing, shoes, and reading material to Combermere. She also read a thank-you letter from the Oblate Mission in the Yukon for the parcel that was sent for the Eskimos.

Mrs. H. Cook received a Bishop Sheen Bible from the Book of the Month Club for the C.W.L. library.

The meeting was adjourned and a few rounds of euchre were played, after which the hostess served lunch, assisted by Mrs. P. Callaghan.

Legal Age in Marriage Being Debated in Peking

By ADAM KELLETT-LONG

PEKING (Reuters) — Chinese Communist authorities have rejected suggestions that the legal age of marriage—20 for men and 18 for girls—should be changed.

At the same time, they have made it clear their campaign against early marriages will continue.

The subject has been debated at length in the letter columns of the Peking newspaper Workers' Daily.

Under the over - all heading, Is It Good to Marry Early? the newspaper has published more than 400 letters for and against the Chinese government's policy.

The debate started when a Peking University professor wrote a letter to the official youth newspaper saying men should not get married until they are 30 and girls not until they are 25.

The professor also advocated family planning, saying that two or, in special cases, three children are the ideal for any couple—a statement which was controversial, to say the least, in a country where large families are a tradition.

PUBLISH ARTICLES

Soon afterward newspapers began publishing, in a way which led many foreign observers to believe that a full-scale birth - control campaign was about to be launched, frank articles by medical experts on various contraception methods.

But, although it is representing some switch from the policy of the last four years, the trend has never reached anything like the vigor of the country - wide birth control campaign which lasted throughout 1957 but then was suddenly dropped.

Now, the articles on contraception have again disappeared.

The debate was summed up in an article by Chou Hsiu-min, vice-director of the legal department of the Chinese Academy of Sciences, who wrote that early marriages had been prevalent in China for thousands of years, and he added: "An evil custom like this can hardly be altered in a short time."

What is necessary, he declared, is "a prolonged period of propaganda and education."

Hastings West W.I. Enjoys Yule Meet

The Women's Institute (Hastings West) December meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Frank Loney, 4th concession of Sidney, with a large attendance of members and visitors.

Correspondence was read, consisting of a friendly letter from the W.I.'s adopted girl, and a thank-you for a baby spoon.

The report of the area convention was given by Mrs. M. Sine, Mrs. E. Anderson, Mrs. F. Phillips. The registration for the first forenoon of the convention was 216 with the greater part staying for the turkey banquet. Mrs. Lymburner, the FWIO president, gave an interesting talk and pictures on her trip to Tokyo and Australia.

As this was the Christmas meeting there was an exchange of homemade Christmas gifts. Mrs. Alice Sine favored with harp music; Mrs. C. Sine and Mrs. R. Burkitt with piano solos.

Readings were given by Mrs. Frank Bowen, "Old Fashioned Sleigh Ride"; Mrs. George Striker, "How Else Could He Know"; Mrs. Bert Bush, "Christmas at the Rural Church"; Mrs. Harry Bleecker, "Christmas Card Magic" and Mrs. Rose Fleming, "What a Wonderful Thrill."

A telegram contest was won by Mrs. Robert Burkitt and Mrs. G. Savage. A demonstration was given of a pure linen tea towel (a gift) received by Mrs. G. Burkitt from Mrs. Lymburner, a floral pattern of Australian flowers. Mrs. R. Burkitt read a poem, "Bob's Visit To Santa Claus," which concluded a delightful Christmas program prepared by Mrs. Avery Kenyon.

The pennies for friendship container was passed and collection taken.

Refreshments were served by the December lunch committee and thanks were extended to Mrs. Frank Loney for opening her new home for the Christmas meeting and Christmas program.

Deliciously Different

For an oriental flair, team canned tuna with crisp chow mein noodles, celery, onion, and mushroom soup — then bake in a casserole. The result is a deliciously different luncheon or supper dish. Though it takes but a jiffy to assemble, this dish has superb flavor and you will enjoy the pleasing combination of textures. As an accompaniment, a tangy citrus salad is recommended.

CHOPSTICK TUNA

1 can (7 ounces) tuna, 1 can (10 ounces) condensed cream of mushroom soup, 1-3 cup water, 1 cup finely sliced celery, 1 cup finely chopped onion, 1 can (3 ounces) chow mein noodles.

Drain tuna and break into bite-sized chunks. Blend mushroom soup with water. Add celery, onion and tuna. Mix thoroughly. Place half the noodles in the bottom of a greased 2 qup casserole. Add tuna mixture. Top with remaining noodles. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 deg. F., for about 50 minutes, or until thoroughly heated. Makes 4 servings.

TV WATCHERS

More than 90 per cent of Canadian homes now are within reach of TV signals and average watching time is four hours and 45 minutes a day.

Mother's Helper

A GOOD IDEA for you and your moppet is a quiet time in the early afternoon. He may no longer be a napper, but on hot days he'll (secretly) welcome a cooling bath followed by a "play rest" on his bed. Set your kitchen timer in his room for a certain period, explain this to him and forestall any "may-I-get-down" trips or bellers to you. He may fall asleep!

Successful Living

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Parents Object to Daughter's Friend

DEAR DORIS—I feel that I'm being mistreated at home. My parents say that they don't want me to continue going with the guy I love, because they've got something on him. When I ask them to let me know, so that I'll have a good reason for "quitting" him, myself, all they say is, "We've got the proof—just take our word for it."

They told me that if I continue to see my B.F., I'll have to move out. There must be something terribly wrong, in their eyes, that I don't know about, but I feel that I have a right to know.

DORIS CLARK

I love him and he loves me, and we planned to marry in a year or two, maybe more. I'm 18 going on 19 and he is the same.—MISTREATED J. G.

DEAR MISTREATED—Mom and Dad still see you as their little girl who needs protection. What they know may seem too earthy or damning for your ears.

But for my money you are entitled to the facts. At 18 the law considers you old enough to take a marriage partner on your own, and parents who treat you like a child will only turn you away from them.

DEAR DORIS—We built a new home this summer. Now everyone asks us when we are going to have our house-warming party.

I was always under the impression that a party of this nature was put on by close friends and relatives. Any have been to were a complete surprise to the owners of the house themselves.

Please set me straight. If it's up to us to put one on, please advise me on whom and how many to invite, etc.—JUST WONDERING.

* * *

DEAR J. W.—Some do, some don't. Don't let anybody bulldoze you into putting on a party if you don't want one.

At the same time, this is a nice sociable way of entertaining friends and meeting new neighbors. Who you invite and why, is also up to you.

DEAR DORIS—This certain boy is a year younger. My problem is when I am invited out with him. It is done this way.

He gets his friend to phone my best girl friend and asks her to go out with him and to ask if I will go out with this other boy. I do not think this is right, since we have been seeing each other for a couple of weeks. Do you think I should accept his invitation this way or wait until he asks me the right way?

Also, this boy has spent some time in reform school. My mother is not on good terms with me for going with him.

I never knew this boy before he was sent there, but my friends who did said he has changed. I've told my mother this but she does not seem convinced. How do I prove this to her? The boy is very nice to me when we are out together — TRIED TO FIND THE ANSWER.

DEAR TRIED—The second paragraph may explain the first. His background makes him timid about a direct approach. If friendship grows, he will gain courage to speak for himself.

But heed your mother. If he comes again, see that she meets him, can talk to him and judge for herself. Remember, she is responsible for you.

DEAR DORIS—Last winter I went out with this fellow and I liked him a lot. In the spring he left to work elsewhere. I started going with someone else with whom I am now going steady.

About three weeks ago the first fellow came home. He came to see me and wanted me to go out with him. I refused, but I keep thinking of him more and more. So I told the fellow I'm going steady with that I was going to go out with him to see how I really feel. But he told me if I did go out with him just once, it was quits for us. What do you think I should do?—MIXED-UP.

DEAR MIXED UP—From where I sit, going steady is nothing like as binding as an engagement. Once you have begun having doubts about your choice, it is time to break off.

* * *

DEAR DORIS—My husband and I worked hard to raise our sons. They helped on the farm when they were growing up and nothing was too good for them. Trips, one new car after another, nice clothes.

Now I am alone as my husband died last year and the lads got married. Do you think they ever think about me or come to see me? No.

The daughters-in-law have turned them against me. I cry myself to sleep every night thinking about it.—VERY MUCH ALONE.

DEAR VERY—Suddenly the earth fell out from under —and you are left without your nice familiar ground. Who wouldn't weep?

Yet no one wants a gal around who cries all the time. You have had more than a quarter century of happiness. Many who read this column will envy you.

It's time now to look ahead, not back, and seek those new interests which can make you a going concern once more. Don't lean on your sons—and when they do come your way, let them feel they are giving you a happy surprise. Primp a little and show there's some new life in the Old Girl.

DEAR DORIS—During the summer months I started going out with a young man who we saw a lot of each other until he had to leave for Ottawa where he is stationed. When he left he never asked me to write him, although the thought often occurred to me.

Would it be all right if I wrote him, even if he has been gone over two months and hasn't written to me? Or should I wait for him to write me? He told me when he left he would be home either before or after Christmas.—ELLA.

DEAR ELLA—You may be sure the thought occurred to him too—and he avoided making a rash promise.

But one letter would do no harm—perhaps an invitation to drop in for coffee and to see the folks when he is home. Those first few months of army life can be mighty lonely.

Christ Church Guild Holds Yule Party

It was a festive occasion on Tuesday afternoon when the Parish Guild of Christ Church held its annual pot-luck luncheon and Christmas party. The tables were most attractive with Christmas centrepieces, choir boys and Santa Claus. Special guests were Rev. and Mrs. R. Fleming and their two little daughters, Rev. and Mrs. Merritt Smith, Rev. M. Caswell, the two church wardens and their wives, Mr. and Mrs. John Fletcher and Mr. and Mrs. Douglas McBean, Mrs. C. Fuscan, church secretary and Mr. and Mrs. D. Pykima. Honored guest, and the lady responsible for a most enjoyable program was Mrs. John M. Farwell.

On behalf of the president, Mrs. I. E. Slavin, who was unable to be present, Mrs. F. A. Beeby warmly welcomed the large gathering of members and guests and extended the brief business session. This included the voting of funds for gifts for children of members of the parish and the report of the nominating committee.

Mrs. R. E. Dawson presented this report with the following slate of officers for 1963: president, Mrs. A. Jordan; vice-president, Mrs. G. Adams; secretary, Mrs. J. Cousins and treasurer, Mrs. F. Lazier and the new officers were introduced. A letter from Mr. and Mrs. J. Cretney who were celebrating their diamond wedding anniversary was read. Mrs. Cretney is a faithful member of the Parish Guild. Mr. Fleming and Mrs. Fletcher also spoke briefly wishing the Guild well in the future undertakings on behalf of the parish.

Mrs. Earl Hickey introduced the guest of the afternoon, Mrs. Farwell who enthralled her audience with a delightful showing of colored slides taken during her recent "round-the-world" holiday. Pictures of Jerusalem, Bethlehem, Nazareth and many other parts of the Holy Land, along with a most interesting commentary, provided a fitting program for the pre-Christmas season of Advent.

Mrs. C. Bishop thanked Mrs. Parrott for her kindness in sharing her journeys with the members of the Guild. Mrs. Beeby thanked the ladies responsible for the pretty tables, Mrs. Wright, Mrs. Wallbridge, Mrs. Adams, Mrs. Burt and Mrs. Dimmet and also Mrs. T. Schofield who had purchased and wrapped the gifts for the Shut-ins. Volunteers were recruited to deliver these packages.

A large decorated hamper was piled high with goodies to be used in the Christ Church Christmas baskets.

Young Couple Honored at Presentation

2ND THURLOW — Friends, neighbors and relatives gathered at the Aid Hall on Friday in honor of Mr. and Mrs. David Brown recent newlyweds.

During the first part of the evening six tables of euchre were in play and those who won prizes were: ladies — Mrs. Brown and consolation — Mrs. F. Turpah; men — Mr. Fred Turpah and consolation — Mr. J. B. Jordan.

The gathering was called to order and the bride and bridegroom were asked to seats of honor where an appropriate address was read by Mrs. C. Leeming. Mr. D. Leeming made the presentation of an electric flour grinder, an electric coffee percolator and sandwich toaster as well as several individual gifts which included some lovely tea towels.

The honored couple both expressed sincere appreciation for the lovely gifts, after which refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed.

simply made her feel more like a Nothing. It added to her fear of just not counting for anything to anyone.

To improve matters, however, Glenda must make the first move. Her husband has given up. He knows what to expect from her — recriminations that her sisters have more complaints about his periods of unemployment, nagging about his "beers." How about an A.P. appreciation Campaign, Glenda? You seem to have lost the capacity to be grateful. Thank him for bringing home that semi-roundly pay cheque no matter how small. Thank Sim for putting up a shelf. Thank him for buying you a dress, even if it's a sleazy one. At present we bet you'd say, "Hmm, can't you do better than that piece of junk?" And to show you're not a person, take a job, Glenda. Call what you earn "ours" and spend it as you please.

Glenda U. — I'm 44 years old, married to a man I'd known only 63 days. I'm his second wife and, in the 16 years of our marriage, he's been taking out his anger against his first wife on me. He never trusted her, so he assumed he couldn't trust me either. Add to that his disgust with me when I ask for reasonable things like a coat or a trip to the movies, and you can understand why my home is a torture chamber.

His latest insult is to hide the cheque book so I can't write any more cheques, and all because I made a $2 error! He says I'm a poor manager. The incident sent him into one of his rages where he dragged up his grievances against me and my family over the years. It happens my family was very nice to him, lending him money and helping him.

Anyway, this sort of life is a disgrace. If it doesn't improve, I must get out and hope for something better.—

Alfred U. — This woman would drive a man nuts. She won't go to work because she's afraid it would spoil me. Yet she's forever throwing it up to me that she wears hand-me-down clothes from her sisters, and we sit on a second-hand sofa.

I used to knock myself out trying to please her. My income was good as a machinist, but work wasn't steady. So I preferred to buy second-hand things for the house and fix them up in my spare time. But she didn't appreciate this. Well now I have a civil service job as a guard and my salary is small. I must watch every dollar. I was nice enough to keep the cheque account in both our names. But she gummed things up and I'm out plenty of money.

Lately I've been shutting myself up in the extra bedroom for some peace. After a couple of beers, I forget about her screaming and scolding. This mess is her own fault.

The Council: This case was presented to us in the form of an interminable letter written by Glenda. She went on and on for pages, listing every little injury almost to the day, every disappointment equable to the penny. Our first reaction was: "What morbid bookkeeping! Can you forget a few things, Glenda?

But then we noted backhanded compliments in Alfred creeping in. Our space allotted for presentation didn't permit us to include these. And we began to see a pattern of two people who could have a good marriage if they could right out and admit the good things about each other. Both Glenda and Alfred are thirsting for a kind word from the one to whom they have pledged their all.

We may deal with this marriage in a future column, for Glenda raises a dozen questions. She mentions her lifelong quest for security and acceptance, and bemoans the fact that, married to Al, she still hasn't found it. She's a frightened woman, and taking away her right to pay the family bills

Party Is Often Magic World To Everyone Except Mother

By PATRICIA RUSAK

TORONTO (CP)—"Party" is often a magic world to everyone except the mother of the little boy or girl who is celebrating a birthday or any other occasion.

But for mothers a party should be as much fun to give as it is for children to attend, says wedding and entertainment consultant Claire Dreier.

One of the easiest ways to enjoy giving a party for children is to plan at least two or three weeks ahead and get every detail down on paper—time, number of guests, theme, games and refreshments.

"This will leave your mind clear to do the last thinking necessary in case of emergencies."

The role of the parent at a child's party is that of "a leader who isn't too prominent," says Miss Dreier. Mother must be patient, gracious, thoughtful, firm and most important of all, she must be enthusiastic.

KIDS WILL HELP

But she must stress to her child that it is his or her party, not mother's, and give her child the responsibility of being a good host or hostess. This includes greeting and introducing the guests and leading them from one activity to the next.

Helping children overcome their initial shyness is simple. Children love to be helpful and feel important and as soon as they do, they feel right at home.

If mother has not had time to decorate for the party, she simply has to say "I didn't have time to make the decorations so would you all help me?" and they will plunge right in enthusiastically.

Younger children like simple activities, especially things they can do with their hands such as writing, cutting out, drawing or coloring, says Miss Dreier. One of her favorite games for a children's party is one in which each child writes out the letters of the alphabet and then sees how many things he can draw using these letters. For example from a printed A he can draw a teepee, from a small letter a he can draw a bug.

TRY DANCE GAMES

Children need to express themselves physically as well as mentally and dancing games are an excellent way.

Children like to sing and if they have special talents of any kind they can even provide their own entertainment.

A party should end with refreshments. This is what children look forward to and so the eating part should be made as gracious and as easy as possible for them, says Miss Dreier. No child can be expected to juggle a cup of coca and a sandwich and not have a spill."

Food must be simple—hot dogs or sandwiches, cake, cookies and some beverage. "And of course a party wouldn't be a party without ice cream."

Parties for youngsters up to the ages of 10 or 12 should be held in the daytime and should be about two to 2½ hours long.

During this time one of mother's most important chores is to make certain that no child is ever left alone.

She must also be relaxed. "If she is tense she is certain to project her uneasiness to the children."

Miss Dreier, a child psychologist who is known in Canada as the first woman to set up a wedding bureau, says she always remains calm no matter what happens during a party she has arranged—even when ceiling fall down, as one did once before one of her important weddings.

CGIT Group Visits County Home in Picton

WELLINGTON — The Wellington C.G.I.T. visited the Prince Edward County Home in Picton one Sunday recently.

The worship service at this time was opened by Velma Vandewater with a call to worship. The Christmas story was read from the Bible.

The C.G.I.T. group sang an anthem "A Saviour Christ Is King." Carol Allison read a story entitled "The Eternity of Christmas". The girls sang, "Sing For Christmas," which opened a short period of favorite carols.

Afterwards the girls visited throughout the building wishing one and all a "Merry Christmas."

Baptist Women Mark World Day of Prayer

Ladies of the Victoria Avenue and Emmanuel Baptist Churches met Friday, December 7, to take part in the annual World Day of Prayer sponsored by the Women's Department of the Baptist World Alliance. In so doing they were a link in the continuous band of prayer circling the globe as Baptist women in all countries of the world met to remember the needs of the underprivileged and the responsibilities of the privileged.

Mrs. Douglas Rose of the host church, and Mrs. Edward Burn of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church conducted the meeting with Mrs. Eric Quirk bringing the message from the theme, "Looking Unto Jesus." Mrs. Paul Weigand was soloist.

Offering was received for the homeless and hungry in Hong Kong; refugee homes in Australia; Cuban refugees, and promotion of international teams of Baptist women to strengthen leadership in Africa, Asia, South Africa, Europe and North America.

BAR STAR

MELBOURNE (Reuters)—An Australian judge ruled today that American television star Connie Stevens, involved in a contract dispute with Warner Brothers, can make no more personal appearances in Australia. The judge was ruling on an injunction brought by the movie company, which holds Miss Stevens' contract.

U.C.W. Meeting

WELLINGTON—Unit 4 of the Wellington U.C.W. met at the Centennial Parlor, recently.

The unit leader, Mrs. S. Yeart opened the meeting with a prayer and a gracious welcome to the members and visitors.

The reports of the recording secretary and treasurer revealed that 18 home and five hospital calls were made.

Mrs. R. East, supply and social assistance convener announced that two quilts are to be quilted the first of the year.

Mrs. Barton Crook, program convener was in charge of the program. Mrs. H. Nash read two articles "Drawing a Line on" and "What To Be Thankful For." Mrs. K. Bond chose as her readings "Song of the Lazy Farmer" and "Watch."

Mrs. Crook used the theme, "Our Dependence on Jesus" in her worship service. The ideal word "Joy" was explained as "J" for Jesus, "O" for others, and "Y" for yourself. Mrs. H. Pettingell, Mrs. H. Wright, Mrs. W. Thomas and Mrs. L. Palmer, took part in an impressive Litany. Let us remember Jesus' with responses by other members.

Mrs. Crook told a story from the life of the late F. W. Lawrence and in symposium read a paragraph from an article by Dr. Norman Vincent Peale.

Lunch was served by the committee in charge of the meeting.

Bethel-Zion W.I. Hears Talk on Cancer

Bethel-Zion Women's Institute held its November meeting at the hall with 26 members and from 15 to 20 visitors present.

The president, Mrs. Roy Sills opened the meeting. Correspondence was read, consisting of resolutions which were to be voted on at the December area convention and two safety contests proposed by the Hastings County Safety Council. Mrs. Roscoe Robson was the delegate to the area convention.

The president introduced the guest speakers, Miss Hall from the Canadian Cancer Society, and Dr. Birchard, gynecologist and obstetrician of Belleville. Miss Hall presented an informative film on "Cancer of the Female Organs," showing signs of such, and preventive measures that can be taken upon early diagnosis.

Dr. Birchard explained cancer as a disease, speaking specifically on "Female Genital Cancer." He said, "if all female babies lived to be 80 years old, three per cent would develop cancer of the cervix, "However," he said, "this type of cancer is a highly curable cancer, as it is more easily detected than some." To date, successful treatment is radiation, which was explained. Dr. Birchard felt that in a few years to come cancer would be curable with the use of drugs.

A most interesting and helpful question and answer period followed.

Mrs. Percy Ray expressed appreciation to Miss Hall and Dr. Richard on behalf of the audience.

White Gift Service Held In U.C.

WHITE'S DISTRICT — White's United Church held its white gift service last Sunday morning with the Sunday School assisting in the service. The choir rendered the anthem, "Cradled in a Manger" with Mrs. W. Jeffery as pianist.

The Rev. Swain spoke especially to the children regarding missionary work and he was assisted in the service by the Sunday School superintendent, Mrs. Albert Jones. Miss Owen Sickle led in prayer and Masters Steven Jones and Bill Hunt gathered the offering which is to assist in overseas relief.

The white gifts this year are to be given to assist the Salvation Army in its work. Following the giving of these gifts the primary children sang "Away In A Manger" and the junior and intermediate classes sang a number.

Tragedy's Aftermath

Mountaineer Rescuers Stand by for Disaster

VANCOUVER (CP)—On Dec. 9, 1956, a Trans-Canada Air Lines North Star crashed on the rock spires of Mount Slesse near Hope, B.C., in the Fraser Valley. All 62 persons aboard were killed.

Remains of the crash weren't found for several days. Mountaineers finally came upon part of the wreckage and traced the rest of the plane.

Fips Broda was one of the climbers in that group of mountaineers and the "pretty disorganized" operation on Mount Slesse gave birth to the idea of a well-trained mountain rescue organization.

"A group of us—Roy Mason, Ian Kay, Jim Addie, myself and several others—started getting together after that," Mr. Broda said. "It seemed to us that a mountain group was a necessity."

A recent demonstration of rescue techniques, employing stretchers and cables, on the slippery 400-foot east face of Mount Seymour's second peak is an indication of how successful the idea was.

A group of 20 climbers formed the nucleus of the new organization and began spreading their ideas of mountain rescue among the three climbing clubs—The Alpine Club of Canada (B.C.), B.C. Mountaineering Club and the Varsity Outdoor Club.

Within a year the club could choose the best mountaineers, insist on the best equipment and first-aid certificates from all its members.

Its members have pulled four climbers off Mount Seymour, which overlooks Vancouver, one off a mountain near Hope, and have assisted in air-sea rescues on several other calls throughout the province.

The practice rescue was put on as something of a test and conditions were made as difficult as possible.

Mr. Broda said he was happy with the demonstration. "We had 25 men out and they were more polished than they have been before."

Planning Winter Carnival? July Is the Best Time

By JANET KASK

MONTREAL (CP)—A winter carnival begins in mid - July, says 21-year-old Ron Oberlander, a senior at Sir George Williams University and chairman of its winter carnival committee for 1963.

Ron, organizing the first "big" carnival Sir George has ever had, said he has been working on plans since his election last spring.

His helpers include Hank Roy and Rick Munro. The three Montrealers sat in their office in the basement of the grey stone building and discussed the problems of being a student on a limited "concrete campus" with a split personality such as Sir George has. The university is housed in a six-storey building on downtown Drummond street. It has no campus.

Known primarily as a night university, Sir George Williams has 6,500 evening students and 2,500 day students.

SMALL BUDGET

Ron, brother of Phil Oberlander, silver medallist wrestler in the British Empire Games in Australia, wistfully recalled his previous years at Cornell University where his fraternity had more money to spend on a carnival than the entire budget allotted to Sir George for the annual event.

He had to present a special report and budget at a meeting in the Laurentians last July for the event, but his determination to make the Sir George carnival "something the students will really be proud of" were fruitful. The budget was almost tripled.

Other Montreal students had large campuses and traditions. A bigger and better carnival would give the Sir George students some of this "real college" feeling.

But one of the thorniest problems was competing with carnivals of other universities—such as McGill's which now is famous.

SPACE IS PROBLEM

"University carnivals will be going on all during February in Montreal," Ron explained. "But this is good. We don't want other Canadians to think Quebec City is the only carnival city.

"Space is one of our biggest problems, but we have been given permission to build snow sculptures on the new Place Ville Marie" — the Rockefeller Centre of Montreal.

Space for variety shows and dances was at a premium, too. "McGill, for example, has its own halls for these events."

Activities for the carnival gathered momentum as the year progressed, the boys explained. Last spring about 50 people began working on the project. The number working since the beginning of the fall term now has doubled.

"People have no idea what a year-round job this is," said Ron. For example, a battery of girls wrote to 60 or 70 companies asking for donations for the carnival queen.

The events next February are to include a parade, student variety show with imported professional talent, choosing of the carnival queen, a dance, and a day of skiing in the Laurentians.

Ontario Anglican Bishops Oppose Greater Share of Taxes to Separate Schools

TORONTO (CP)—The Anglican bishops of Ontario today opposed any move to give the province's separate schools a larger share of corporation taxes or to extend the tax-supported system to secondary schools.

Both measures were requested recently by the province's Roman Catholic bishops in a brief to members of the Ontario legislature.

The Anglican bishops, in a memorandum presented to the legislature today, said granting the two requests "would cause a violent disruption of the public and secondary school system and do a definite disservice to the community as a whole."

However, the 2,300 - word memorandum supported a request by the Roman Catholic bishops for government studies of the province's educational system.

WOULD REVIEW AIMS

The studies should be undertaken, the memorandum said, "so that a realistic review may be made of the philosophy and aims of education in Ontario and the financial support of public education, and with the purpose of maintaining equality of educational opportunity, giving adequate recognition in the teachers' salary and general welfare scales to the concerns of all religious traditions, and maintaining peace, concord and goodwill among the several religious loyalties of our province."

The memorandum was signed by Most Rev. W. L. Wright, Archbishop of Aylsons and Metropolitan of the ecclesiastical province of Ontario, and the other 12 Anglican bishops of the province.

The submission said the Anglican Church in the province "shares warmly the concern of the Roman Catholic Church in the development of an educational system in which the values and teachings of the Christian faith and the whole Judaeo-Christian heritage are an integral part of the entire school program."

SCHOOLS NOT SECULAR

But since its inception Ontario's public school system has "recognized and maintained a Christian philosophy of education" the memorandum said, in taking issue with the Catholic bishops' description of the public schools as "secular."

"Our public schools, though not sectarian or denominational, are certainly not secular in original intention or historical development," the Anglican bishops said.

"There are, indeed, certain influences in education at the present time which are definitely secularist in purpose and program. Such developments are not in the interests of true educational values."

The memorandum said the Anglican Church accepts the present separate school system "as an historic and socially necessity," although ideally "there should be one school system, maintained by the province and open to all children . . ."

The memorandum saw no objection to the plea for a greater voice by the Roman Catholic church in planning certain aspects of the separate school system and the critical review and right of selection in the case of some texts.

PRAISES COMMITTEE

"It should be noted, though, that the Roman Catholic Church at present benefits from the terms of a highly competent curriculum committee, appointed and maintained under the auspices of the Roman Catholic Church in Ontario, which is available to deal with the Department of Education on all matters relating to the Roman Catholic view of the curriculum. . . ."

On the question of tax support for separate schools, the memorandum said equality of opportunity is already safeguarded "in that every type of elementary and secondary education is available to every student in this province on the same basis."

"At the present time the provincial government, concerned about the inequalities of financial resources of the school boards on the elementary level, makes generous provision in grants to redress this situation. . . .

"Ways and means might be found for a further extension of grants to all, commensurate with government responsibility in its support and extension of an efficient public school system.

"This question of increased financial assistance to boards at the elementary level is a matter which merits sympathetic study by the government and action in harmony with public interest as a whole."

However, creation of separate teachers' colleges would do violence to the unity of purpose in education "and would be an occasion of discord rather than the harmony to which the Roman Catholic brief pleads."

Text of the memorandum was released to the press in advance of its submission.

P. M. Rejects Proposal to Call Sanctions

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker rejected Tuesday a proposal by a United Nations resolution calling for trade sanctions against South Africa.

"Sanctions have not been effective at any time," he said in the Commons, adding that Canada opposes apartheid and Canadians an annual export markets of $40,000,000 or $50,000,000.

Mr. Diefenbaker's reply to a question by David Lewis (NDP—York South), who referred to the resolution passed recently in the UN General Assembly in protest against South Africa's apartheid racial policy.

One section of the resolution asked UN member countries to boycott South African goods and refrain from exporting to that country.

"Such action will not be taken by this government," the prime minister said.

Canadians had dealt with South Africa "on the friendliest terms" for many years.

Lutherans Demanding $9,000 of TCA

TORONTO (CP)—The 143 Lutheran pastors who boarded a jet to Germany Monday night have demanded that a train from Trans-Canada Air Lines for losses incurred when their flight was interrupted in Ireland.

A TCA spokesman said Tuesday the petition will be referred to the government's legal department when it is received.

Gerald Brunn, spokesman for the pastors, presented the petition around at the airport. It asked compensation for food, lodging, loss of gifts and transportation. Mr. Brunn said about 90 passengers signed.

A group of 144 arrived at Toronto International airport at 9 p.m. Sunday for the Christmas flight to Dusseldorf. They were told the flight had been cancelled by Air Canada and Air Transport Association because of alleged infractions of charter flight laws.

TCA later agreed to take the group Monday night if they paid the difference between charter and regular fares—up to $200 extra a passenger. The original return fare on the portion of the original group could not make the flight Monday night.

$650 Damages Awarded to Girl's Estate

TORONTO (CP)—The estate of Donna McDougall, murdered in 1961, was awarded $650 damages Tuesday, arising from a traffic accident three years before her death.

Justice D. R. Morand of the Ontario Supreme Court awarded the sum to the 14-year-old girl's estate in a civil action involving Miss McDougall and Miss Mary Ann McLaughlin, Frank Vale and Larry Murdoch all of Toronto.

Miss McDougall was shot to death in her home at Keswick, Ont., about 30 miles north of Toronto, June 25, 1961. Lowell Guy Widdifield, 39, a tenant in the McDougall home, was convicted of non-capital murder and sentenced to life imprisonment.

The girl was suing for $20,000 damages after being injured in a car - truck accident near Sharon on May 14, 1958.

The court also awarded Mrs. Dorothy McDougall, the girl's mother, $6,547 for damages in the accident. She was seeking $104,005. Her son, Clifford, who asked $20,000, was awarded $1,200.

William H. Leitch, a passenger in the McDougall car, was awarded $8,018. He was asking $20,500.

At the time of the accident, McLaughlin was a truck driver for Vale and Murdoch. The truck collided with the McDougall car.

Retail Value Of Liquor Sold Up Three Pct.

TORONTO (CP)—The retail value of liquor sold in Ontario during the fiscal year ended March 31, 1962, totalled $271,-736,366—an increase of three per cent over the previous year, it was announced Tuesday.

The 36th report of the liquor control board, submitted to the legislature by Chief Commissioner Allan Grossman, showed an increase of 2.1 per cent by volume in the 1961-62 sales of spirits, wines and beers.

Most conspicuous increase in the report was in the sale of Canadian beer through retail stores—which jumped 29.5 per cent in value to $3,433,027 and 29.2 per cent by volume.

Total value of Canadian beer sold through all outlets was $178,883,527, an increase of 1.3 per cent.

Sales of imported beer were up 13.9 per cent at $503,756.

Canadian spirits totalling 5,480,648 gallons had a total value of $143,617,727, compared with 5,228,293 gallons and a retail value of $137,031,821 in the previous fiscal year—an increase of 4.8 per cent in sales value.

Imported spirits sales were $26,684,004, an increase of one per cent, for 840,501 gallons, up 0.6 per cent.

Total number of liquor stores in the province at March 31, 1962, was 299 with the opening of 24 additional stores in the previous year. There were 202 brewer's retail stores—with the opening of seven and the closing of four stores in 1960-61.

SIU Lawyers Told to Get Down to Main Issues

OTTAWA (CP)—The Seafarers' International Union of Canada (Ind.) seems to be shuffling its lawyers around as it continues its submission to the federal inquiry on Great Lakes labor troubles.

So far, eight lawyers have had a public hand in the SIU's case before Mr. Justice T. G. Norris' one-man investigation of international union rivalries that disrupted lake shipping last summer.

Joseph Nuss, a young Montreal lawyer, has been the main SIU spokesman at the 94 sessions of the inquiry since hearings began last August.

Now two Ottawa lawyers, John Richard and Kenneth Eaton appear to be moving up as spokesmen.

They have handled the SIU's case in the last few days, with Mr. Nuss sitting quietly on the sidelines.

Mr. Justice Norris told the new lawyers Tuesday to get down to the main issues.

SAYS TIME WASTED

The Vancouver appeals court judge described much of Tuesday's testimony—chiefly from rank - and - file SIU members praising their union—as a waste of time.

"We must have some freedom in the way we conduct our case," contended Mr. Eaton.

"It does not help me one bit to deluge me with witnesses who say they are happy," declared the judge.

Later, Mr. Justice Norris hinted that time may be running out for the SIU.

Several weeks ago, when he accused the SIU of deliberately trying to delay the inquiry, he said one limit may have to be imposed on direct evidence and one-examination to expedite his hearing.

"Today has been almost—not entirely but almost—a wasted day in the presentation of the submission which the SIU has made," said Mr. Justice Norris Tuesday.

"You see, Mr. Eaton, sometimes you are going to need some lime and going to need it badly. It seems to me it has been wasted today."

The hearing continues.

Two Elderly Couples Killed At Leamington

LEAMINGTON, Ont. (CP)—Two elderly couples were killed Tuesday night in a two-car collision on Highway 3, three miles east of here.

Dead are Henry Peters, 72, and his wife, Bertha, 78, of Kingsville and their passengers, Jacob Heinrichs, 70, and his wife, Helen, 73, of Leamington.

Provincial police said a small European car driven by Peters apparently skidded on ice and careered into the path of a car driven by Perry McCormack, 19, of Leamington.

Mr. McCormack was in good condition in hospital with abrasions and a possible concussion.

Edmonton Paper Said in Bad Books of Govt.

EDMONTON (CP)—The Journal quotes an official of the federal agriculture department as saying the paper has been in the Conservative party's bad books since last May when it published an editorial criticizing the Diefenbaker government.

The paper says it asked Agriculture Minister Alvin Hamilton Monday to comment on an Ottawa Journal story dealing with wheat negotiations with Red China. "The minister termed the report 'pure speculation' and declined to say anything more."

Later Roy Faibish, Mr. Hamilton's special assistant, said the minister might have spoken if The Journal had not criticized the government on the day Mr. Diefenbaker visited Edmonton during the federal election campaign.

"If I could find a warm spot in my heart for the Edmonton Journal . . ." he added. The Journal indicated it might have got fuller comment if Mr. Faibish looked favorably on it.

Asked whether other callers got the same "no comment" reply, Mr. Faibish said:

If some "chin reporters" from the Winnipeg Tribune calls, the answer is automatically "no comment."

But if someone from the Toronto Globe and Mail calls and asks the caller is more to be informed, he gets comment.

Says Insurance Act Is What Companies Want

TORONTO (CP)—A Liberal member of the legislature says Ontario's Insurance Act "is precisely what the insurance companies want it to be."

Elmer Sopha (L—Sudbury) said Tuesday during debate on the insurance department's estimates for 1962-64, "that the only representation the government gets about the (insurance) act is from the insurance industry."

Mr. Sopha said there should be a limitation of one year in which a claim might be filed following an automobile accident when the time allowed for personal legal actions was six years.

Mr. Sopha described Insurance companies as "powerful, sophisticated, and educated" institutions which had influenced by Jo Grimond, British Liberal party leader, was released today. Grimond plans to meet President Kennedy Jan. 13, and to address the Council of Foreign Relations in Chicago Jan. 17. The next day he is expected to visit Ottawa.

Police Release Names of Couple Found Dead

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP)—Police released Tuesday night the names of a man and woman found dead in a housekeeping hotel room earlier in the day by a hotel clerk.

The man was identified as Truis Neeuwenkoet, 32, and the woman as Mrs. Hilda Huggins, in her late 30s, mother of two teen-aged girls. They registered as Mr. and Mrs. Neeuwenoord of Vancouver.

Police said it appeared to be a case of murder and suicide. Both had been shot from close range by a .303-calibre rifle, police said.

The couple had lived in the hotel since coming from Vancouver in March. The man had worked as a cleaner at a window and floor cleaning business until two months ago. Frank Dunkers, owner of the business, said the man had said he was quitting because a doctor told him he had a heart condition.

The man and woman recently sold their car.

Hotel clerk John Moinar, who found the bodies when he went to collect rent that was a week in arrears, said a dresser had been pushed against the door. He said he and several guests had been watching television Sunday night when they heard a "bang." Nothing more was heard.

Grade 13 Will Start Writing Exams June 3rd

TORONTO (CP)—Grade 13 students will begin writing departmental examinations June 3, a week earlier than they usually receive their results a week to 10 days earlier, Education Minister Davis told the legislature Tuesday.

The changes, contained in a bill given first reading by the House, result from requests for earlier publishing of results to allow students time to decide on what course they will take after Grade 13, Mr. Davis said.

Earlier examination dates mean that associate examiners will be required at earlier dates, English and French markers will be asked to report in Toronto June 18, and other markers June 21 or 22.

CLOSING DATE SAME

Mr. Davis said the earlier writing dates would not affect the closing date for secondary schools.

The number of papers to be written will be reduced, the education minister said, beginning next year when a single paper will be set in each language subject other than English.

In June, 1963, a single paper will be set in biology, and in June, 1967, the number of mathematics papers will be reduced from three to two.

He said committees were at work now, redistributing the subject contents in the three grades and lightening the Grade 13 load to make that year "a better transition for students proceeding to university . . ."

Too Many People Seek Wonder Drugs to Cure Minor Aches Says Senator

OTTAWA (CP)—Many men would be better off if they would cry a little.

A warm flat iron might be better than cortisone to ease a sore back.

Women with morning sickness should have a 10-minute talk with their doctors instead of taking fancy tranquilizers.

And if modern pharmacy produces a contraceptive pill, it may be a "Frankenstein monster."

That advice was presented to the Senate Tuesday night by a former New Brunswick minister of health, Senator Fred A. McGrand, himself a doctor.

Too many people seek wonder drugs to cure minor aches, pains and mental upsets, he said. Many people think they are ill when they equate their minor disorders with symptoms of medical cases on television shows.

ATTENTION UNUSUAL

The Liberal senator generally expressed the view that if the human body is designed to cry for in old-fashioned ways there is no reason for death except old age.

Between 60 and 80 per cent of people who consult psychiatrists do not have mental or physical diseases but merely complaints, he said.

"They are more sick in mind than in body. They have pains and aches and other symptoms which cannot be cured by certi-

"Just a Second"

"Don't worry about being late dear. I managed to keep your salad hot."

none. They have worries which cannot be cured by a sedative. They are tired not by work, but by boredom, which cannot be cured by vitamins."

The debate was on the government's amendments to the Food and Drugs Act, designed to tighten procedures for licensing new drugs.

Senator McGrand said that antibiotics, vitamins, sex hormones and wonder drugs are making drug firms and not practising physicians the real sources of medical advice.

"Man would be better to cry more and give vent to emotions.

"When granddad had lumbago, grandma put a towel on his back and massaged his muscle spasm with a warm flat iron. He woke up the next morning feeling better—and he had no cortisone in his system."

Senator McGrand said that thalidomide was just such a product of the affluent society. Women took it in the early stages of pregnancy to overcome morning sickness, a normal ailment, and "a 10-minute reassuring talk with the family doctor would be more effective than any tranquilizer."

The senator said that the bill, which makes sale of thalidomide illegal, was only "shaking a finger" at pharmaceutical houses.

"Don't condemn it (thalidomide) to death," he said. "It's a little pill that can do no harm if it is not misused."

Victory Over Cuba Gives Kennedy More Confidence

By HAROLD MORRISON

Prime Minister Macmillan may come away from his talks with President Kennery in the Bahamas somewhat surprised and perhaps somewhat disillusioned. For the man who runs the White House is a tougher, more self - willed leader, more confident of his own decisions than the advice of his Allies—now that he's beaten the Russians at their own game in Cuba.

It was Macmillan, who asked for the talks at Nassau next week—not Kennedy. Further while Macmillan may agree that Britain must support the Kennedy trade bloc more on her own terms than those of French President de Gaulle or German Chancellor Adenauer.

STRONGER NOW

A year ago, Macmillan might have been in a better position to persuade Kennedy than he is today. That was before Kennedy's heart had taken a setback in the Cuban invasion debacle. He was then uncertain of himself and support. Now that period has been swept away by the U.S. success in getting the Russian missiles and bombers out of Cuba.

Kennedy wants more results from the talks than just to hear his conclusion he now is in a better position to get those results. He wants to get further with conventional forces, now numbering about 23 divisions, working up to the full 30-division target.

He is ready to talk about increased consultation with the Allies but there is no question, after events in Cuba, that he would be willing to cut his will to those of the Allies in another nuclear confrontation.

MAKE DIRECT CONTACT

Throughout the Cuban crisis, Kennedy opened and maintained direct contact with Premier Khrushchev. He didn't need Macmillan's good offices. There now is a clear view in Washington that the U.S. doesn't even need Britain's nuclear strength in deterring Russian aggression if that is enough of its own.

As for providing NATO with an independent nuclear force, that may turn out to be mostly a conversation piece. Macmillan is reported opposed to any idea of sharing custody and control of U.S. warheads with the Allies.

As for Britain, the main American drive is to get Britain into the Common Market. American sources have again emphasized that the whole fabric of Kennedy's new trade policy is based on Britain's entry. And Macmillan may be told so, clearly, when he meets with the president in The Bahamas.

House Speaker Tells Socred To Keep Seat

OTTAWA (CP)—Speaker Marcel Lambert ordered Social Credit MP Gilles Gregoire to sit down several times Tuesday when the latter persisted in asking a point ruled out of order in the Commons.

The member for Lapointe rose to question and then to protest that the answer to a question he asked Monday about the vice-presidents was inadequate. The answer was that some of the information he wanted was under the secret railway agreement between railways and that it was against CNR policy to give other details.

He sought to place the question on record.

The Speaker ruled there was no question of privilege and referred Mr. Gregoire to Commons practice that prohibit asking the same question twice.

After Mr. Gregoire suggested the publicly-owned CNR was exerting "undue influence" on government, Lambert said that by forcing him to give inadequate answers to questions.

The Speaker then ruled out of order. Mr. Gregoire persisted and the Speaker asked him to sit. He said to this gratuitous commentary."

Mr. Gregoire rose again a few minutes later to suggest that the Speaker had ruled incorrectly and asked permission to appeal the ruling.

Mr. Lambert asked him "once and for all" to abide by the chair's ruling.

Mr. Gregoire rose again to "protest."

His voice growing stern, the speaker began:

"The honorable member leaves me . . ."

He paused there for several seconds before the House anticipating a possible expulsion. Then his voice relaxed and he said he hoped the member was not launching an "attack" on the chair.

Mr. Lambert finally ordered Mr. Gregoire, to "keep his seat."

Earlier this session, Bernard Dumont (SC—Bellechasse) was expelled from the House for part of a sitting for refusing to yield the floor to the Speaker.

Kidneys Taken From Dead Giving a Few Humans Welcome New Lease of Life

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Kidneys taken from the dead are giving a few humans a welcome new lease on life.

In Boston today, a young man of about 30 is living on a kidney borrowed from a man who died 6½ months ago.

He is one of 13 persons who received kidneys from the dead during the last decade, thereby winning up to at least half a year more of life.

Another 82 men and women have received kidneys from living donors. One, getting a kidney from his identical twin brother, is perfectly healthy eight years later. That was expected to succeed.

Since few of us have identical twins, the more spectacular news is that two men have lived now for more than three years, one for two years, and two for about a year, all on gifts of kidneys from relatives or friends or fraternal no-look alike twins.

TISSUE FOREIGN

Except among identical twins, spare kidneys, whether from the living or dead, have usually lasted only a few weeks or months. The reason is, the borrowed organ is "foreign" tissue and is destroyed by antibodies much as any person produces protective antibodies to destroy invading germs or viruses.

But surgeons—reporting this world census on kidney transplants—are becoming confident they can leap this natural hurdle.

Then the living, betrayed only by a sick heart, kidney, lung or gland, could be given healthy organs to live out normal lifespans. The borrowed organs could come from persons, dying of other causes, who had willed their organs, or whose next-of-kin gave quick permission.

Such loans after death are already being made with corneas—windows of the eye—and with skin and bones and blood vessels. For special reasons, these tissues do not provoke the destructive antibody reactions in the same vital way.

DESCRIBE ATTEMPTS

Encouraging attempts at overcoming problems of transplanting living organs were described recently to the American College of Surgeons by a team of experts. Each time, the recipient has been near death's door due to sick or damaged kidneys.

More than 50 kidneys have been transplanted by a Harvard University team, and in two recent cases, the spare kidney was taken, soon after death, from patients dying of causes other than kidney disease.

The kidney and other organs usually live on for about an hour or more after the heart and the brain have died.

Transplants between identical twins almost always succeed because these twins are alike in tissue type and reactions.

CLAWED BY LIONS

CASABLANCA (AP)—A Spanish circus worker was severely clawed by lions Monday night while he was cleaning their cage. Tomas Moreno Ruiber, 44, went into the cage while the lions were out practising their act. The trainer was not aware that Moreno was in the cage and sent the lions back while he was still working.

T. Armstrong Acclaimed Deloro Reeve

MARMORA — Deloro municipal election took place on Friday, December 7th with the following result. William Hagan, Reeve for 1962 resigned and Thomas Armstrong qualified and was acclaimed as Reeve, there were six qualifications for councillors, four to be elected with the following result — Charles Gordenier, Leonard Veltman, Leo Doyle and Dennis Coleman Lie. Bruce Young and Bernard Quinlan were defeated. Village clerk is M. J. Corrigan.

Deloro School Board still lacks a member as due to a resignation four members were being sought and only three qualified and received acclamation: Mrs. B. Young, Donald Goodchild and Cecil Storing. Chairman of Board is Mrs. William Regan.

Income Tax Explained

Written and designed for the taxpayer who is not in a position to employ the services of a professional accountant or visit an Income Tax Office.

By C. A. Miller, former supervising assessor Income Tax Department.

Most taxpayers know they may claim a credit against their tax payable of 20 per cent of the amount of their dividends from Canadian Corporations, but when it comes to the depletion allowance applicable to certain mining stocks they are at a loss as to how it is applied.

Depletion allowances are deducted directly from the dividend. If you received a dividend of $100 from a Northern Ontario Mine, on which there was a depletion allowance of 20 per cent you would report only $80 as taxable income. You should show the full amount of your mining stock dividends on a separate sheet, deduct the depletion allowance and then carry the net amount after deductions to the tax return.

Depletion allowances will vary from 10 per cent to 20 per cent depending on the amount of the companys profits from underground operations. If the mineral profits were 75 per cent of the total profit or over the depletion allowance is 20 per cent.

If between 50 per cent and 75 per cent the allowance is 15 per cent.

If between 25 per cent and 50 per cent the allowance is 10 per cent.

There is no depletion allowance at all if the mineral profits were less than 25 per cent of the total profit for the year.

There have been cases where the dividends are paid quarterly and some quarters dividends qualify for depletion and others do not. However the stock holders in these cases will be notified by the company to this effect. If a T5 slip is issued, the rate of depletion will appear on it.

Question? — Do I add the depletion allowance to my tax credit for deduction?

Answer — No. Depletion allowance reduces the dividends itself.

Question? — I hold shares of stock in both Imperial and B.A. Oils. Why can I not claim depletion?

These companies make more profit from marketing from underground sources. The profits from their oil wells is not sufficient to warrant depletion.

MOVE GRAIN ELEVATOR — Affected by a decision to abandon non-economic railway lines, Western farmers are forced to move grain elevators to different locations. At least 30 elevators have been involved. This pool elevator is being moved at Wawota Sask. (CP Photo)

Year-End Outlook

Forecasts of Marketing Change in Selling Wheat Appear With Frequency

By STAN McCABE

WINNIPEG (CP)—The Western Canadian grain-growing industry enters 1963 amid discussions that indicate a new look is inevitable.

Forecasts of a change in the familiar pattern of the marketing system appeared with increasing frequency in the last year.

Agriculture Minister Alvin Hamilton poked a two-pronged fork into the Canadian bread basket late in the year, stirring discussion and controversy with proposals that Western farmers help finance credit sales and take on part of the tough selling job.

Donald Gordon, president of the Canadian National Railways, urged—in a Winnipeg speech that action be taken toward modernization of the grain-handling system. At the same time controversy was increasing over abandonment of non-economic rail lines that still play a major part in carrying grain to market.

Grain companies are concerned about the future, one worry being what will happen to their investments in country elevator facilities along abandoned lines.

WANT POLICY STATED

The Alberta wheat pool, one of the three farmer-owned cooperatives, took the stand that there should be no further abandonments until a government policy on the question has been announced.

The Saskatchewan and Manitoba pools recorded their opposition to piecemeal abandonment, saying there should be an integrated scheme.

There are 5,220 country elevators at 1,942 shipping points across Western Canada. In the 1961-62 crop year 23 were affected by rail lines being abandoned. Since the new crop year began Aug. 1, seven more have been affected. Others may have to be closed.

Mr. Hamilton's proposals for farmer contributions to a fund to back credit sales and for formation of a selling agency by the pools and the United Grain Growers provoked discussion.

One grain trade expert suggested the pools were disgruntled at the suggestion they change their traditional role of collecting grain and letting the government marketing agency, the Canadian Wheat Board, take it from there.

GOOD CROP

Whatever the feelings about these proposals, there was no question that western farmers had a generally good year on the land. The Prairie wheat crop was estimated at 538,000,000 bushels, compared with 260,000,000 in the drought year of 1961.

Other yields, with 1961 figures bracketed: Oats for grain 493,610,000 (283,965,000); barley 165,888,000 (112,640,000); rye 12,644,000 (6,519,000); flaxseed 15,685,000 (14,318,000).

As winter closed in, an expert said the moisture picture was measurably better than in the fall of 1961 when generally dry conditions prevailed.

Overseas sales of Canadian wheat in the 1961-62 crop year were the third highest, reaching 357,900,000 bushels. It was the first year since 1951 that the wheat board permitted unrestricted farmer deliveries to country elevators.

Exports were hampered in one way. The country lacked enough durum wheat, a type used in manufacture of macaroni products, to meet all demands. However, it kept traditional customers satisfied by a rationing system and production in 1962 rose to 21,200,000 bushels from a meagre 14,500,000 in 1961.

NEW CHINA DEAL

Wheat sales to Communist China were a political issue during the year, but for western farmers the economic aspects of the deal stood out. The wheat board reported the Chinese had met all commitments on their credit purchases. To the end of the year they had made firm commitments for 111,000,000 bushels of wheat and 27,000,000 bushels of barley, and a new deal was reported in process of negotiation.

During the 1961-62 crop year the wheat board increased its asking price for the top grade of Canadian wheat to $1.96½ from 1.80½. Nine cents of the increase resulted from devaluation of the dollar; seven cents was a straight boost.

William Riddel, assistant chief commissioner of the board summed up the 1962 marketing prospects this way:

"The wheat market has elements of both strength and weakness. The shortage of durums and low-grade wheat has continued to hamper sales into this crop year, but this condition is rapidly being alleviated as this year's production reaches export positions.

"The production of wheat in Europe, and particularly in France, is very high this year. This is bound to result in France being a more aggressive competitor in world wheat markets and make sales to European countries more difficult.

"Indications are that Japan will again be a good customer for our wheat and likely will purchase more than last year.

"The total exports for the year will, of course, be heavily affected by the quantity purchased by China, and currently there is every indication that these purchases will continue to be substantial."

LIBERAL UPSURGE IN U.K. — Biggest surprise in British politics this year was the revival of the Liberal party. Here, party leaders attend the annual Liberal conference. Speaking is new party president Sir Felix Brunner. Jo Grimond listens at right. Between the two are Desmond Banks and Aubrey Herbert. (CP Photo from UKIO.)

Corridor Whispers Suggest British General Election Will Be Held Next Fall

By ALAN WALKER

LONDON (CP)—Whispers in Whitehall corridors suggest a British general election will be held next fall, but Prime Minister Macmillan's decision rests on the unpredictable Common Market negotiations and the trend of opinion at home.

Although the election deadline is October, 1964, the Conservative government spent much of 1962 shaping a new image for itself and preparing vote-winning legislation to freshen the country's stagnating economy.

The year's biggest surprise was the Liberal revival that started March 14 with an overwhelming by-election win in Orpington, supposedly a safe Tory seat. The Conservatives, were quick with excuses, saying apathy resulted in a poor turnout of their voters, but Liberal leader Jo Grimond credited the victory to a middle-class white-collar revolt.

EARL SPLITS PARTY

Liberal popularity continued through the year's by-elections with Conservative majorities being cut, and in some cases the Liberals replaced Labor in second place. In the so-called "little general election" Nov. 22—a cluster of five by-elections in formerly Conservative seats—the Tories dropped two to Labor and had their majorities severely slashed in the other three. Liberal gains continued.

The Labor win in Glasgow's Woodside constituency was expected because of heavy unemployment.

In South Dorset, The Earl of Sandwich, former MP for the constituency, supported the independent anti-Common Market candidate Sir Piers Debenham and split the Conservative vote, allowing socialist Guy Barnett to defeat Conservative Angus Maude.

Most observers agree the by-elections should not be taken too seriously. The Liberals made a similar spurt in 1957 but did poorly in the 1959 general election.

They have seven seats in the 630 - seat House of Commons compared with 364 for Conservatives and allies, 256 for Labor, with one independent and two vacancies.

Conservative morale was low after Orpington. Then the party started a facelifting operation to convince voters it is a young, progressive party.

PURGES CABINET

The gaudiest manifestation of this came July 13, "Black Friday," when Macmillan purged seven of his 21 cabinet ministers including Chancellor of the Exchequer Selwyn Lloyd. This reduced the average age of the cabinet members by four years to 51. Reginald Maudling, 45, replaced 57-year-old Lloyd, who took the rap for the government's unpopular tight - credit policy.

The year saw two Labor splits. Roy Jenkins, once Hugh Gaitskell's fair-haired boy, organized about 50 of Labor's 250-odd strength around a pro-Common Market platform, but the party conference opposed almost unanimously the government's handling of the Brussels negotiations.

Later during the election of Labor's deputy leader, George Brown, one of Jenkins' supporters, managed to keep the post despite a strong challenge from Harold Wilson, but the battle was bad for Labor's image.

The Common Market proved a handy political football all year. Some observers said Gaitskell was secretly in favor of Britain's joining it, but that he felt it would make a good issue with which he could force and win a general election. He emphasized the Commonwealth prime ministers' uneasiness about the EEC and implied that unless a referendum were held on British entry, a future Labor government would have the right to repudiate the Treaty of Rome.

He also said Britain would lose her political autonomy if she joined the Six. Britain's chief negotiator at Brussels, Lord Privy Seal Edward Heath, said this was nonsense.

The main battle over the Common Market will probably come in the spring. Some experts feel Macmillan will make sure Britain is safely in before he calls an election. But late in the year the Six appeared to harden in their attitude to British entry. The phrase "best terms available" started creeping into government statements and previous promises to join Europe only if the deal was "acceptable to all" were heard less frequently.

Gaitskell's threat to pull Britain out of the EEC if he ever gets into power might have made the Six leery. A mandate for the Conservatives "could fix this. And Macmillan certainly knows an election on Common Market lines would draw attention away from other issues. He will probably wait and see how the land lies later.

UNPREDICTABLE FUTURE — Prime Minister Macmillan faces an unpredictable future in determining the date of the next general election and Britain's course in European Common Market negotiations. Despite by-election losses to Liberal and Labor candidates, Mr. Macmillan was optimistic as he addressed the Conservative party conference at Brighton this year. He envisaged "great strides forward" for Britain in the next 10 years. (CP Photo from UKIO)

SPORTS

Sport Slices . . .

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

At this time of the year sports editors and sportscasters are asked by the Canadian Press to look back over a shoulder and select what they believe the outstanding stars individually and collectively that flashed over the sports horizon during 1962.

First selection is the three outstanding male athletes which should produce some head-scratching. They are to be listed in order and among consideration should be Bobby Hull, the "Million-Dollar Baby" Frank Mahovlich; Gary Cowan, Kitchener golfer, the low shooter in the Eisenhower Cup world amateur golf tournament; Harry Jerome, still Canada's top sprinter, despite his disappointing showing at the Empire Games; Don Jackson, world figure skating champion; George Knudsen, golfer, who won several international golf tournaments and of course, Bruce Kidd, 'nuff sed.

The three outstanding gal athletes? Hmmm. Let's see! Mary Stewart, the 17-year-old swim star, pops up first in mind, then comes Sue Hilton, the London, Ont., golfer and daughter of a former Bellevville football star, with an uncle in Trenton; Abigail Hoffman, the track whiz-kid and Nancy McCredie, the shot-putt star.

The three top teams. You cannot leave out the Toronto Maple Leafs, Stanley Cuppers; the Winnipeg Blue Bombers, Hamilton Tiger Cats and Calgary Stampeders as football fame; New Westminster senior lacrosse club who won the Mann Cup four times in a row, and that glamorous skating couple, Otto and Maria Jelinek, world figure skating champions.

The greatest sports disappointment of 1962? It could be the "Foggy Day In London Town"; Harry Jerome at Perth, Australia; Montreal Canadiens dropping four after winning two playoffs; the Argos, or what have you.

The greatest sports thrill of the year. There's Bobby Hull scoring goal Number 50 in the last game of the schedule; Bruce Kidd winning the Games six miles and Gold Medal Number One; youthful Mary Stewart, flashing to victory and a Gold Medal over the best in the Commonwealth; Don Jackson winning that world title in Prague among others.

The greatest sports surprise? You could list Canadiens' lapse in losing that four after winning two; Football Commissioner Halter stating the Grey Cup in the fog and the same commish calling it off with minutes to go; the Argos letting Cookie Gilchrist go, and a few others.

The greatest sports oddity? In my book I'd say that million-dollar offer for Frank Mahovlich; Bruce Kidd, a short distance runner, in entering the Games marathon and turning in a fine performance for 22 miles.

The greatest sports comeback team or individual? I would top this list with Bobby Hull's splendid feat in scoring 50 goals in 25 games in the last half of the NHL schedule, after hitting for 14 in the first section. Then there's the Toronto Argonauts, among others.

Then there's the question of how the Grey Cup should have been handled under the foggy circumstances. Did Halter do right? I'm going to reserve opinion on that one. There are several angles to be considered.

Collectively I think we had a great sports year in the country. The fine showing of our athletic team at Perth, I think, is worthy of special mention. The government's decision to allocate five millions to physical fitness was another milestone.

Score Three In 69 Seconds

Hawks Edge Flyers 4-3

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Scoring three goals in one minute and nine seconds of the second period, St. Catharines Black Hawks held off a third-period rally Tuesday night by Niagara Falls Flyers for a 4-3 victory in an Ontario Hockey Association Junior A game.

The win places Black Hawks in a fourth-place tie with Hamilton Red Wings. The Flyers were tied for second place with Peterborough.

Ken Hodge, Fred Stanfield, Jim O'Brien and Archie Yurkiw scored for Hawks.

Gary Dornhoefer got two goals and Ted Snell a single for Flyers.

Whitby and Toronto Marlboros tied 4-4 in a Metro Junior A group fixture at Whitby.

Aces Nip Clippers 2-1

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

If you're looking for the answer to what's keeping Quebec Aces in front of the American Division of the Eastern Hockey division, you might try goalie Charlie Hodge.

The little veteran was the difference Tuesday night in the Aces' 2-1 victory over Baltimore Clippers in the only league game scheduled. He made 41 saves compared with only 22 for the Clippers' Marcel Paille.

Hodge gave up a goal to Sandy McGregor in the second period. Mike Labadie tied the score and Mike Harvey fired the winner.

NHL Production Down ★★★★★

Marksmen Off Or Goalies Better?

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Is the netminding better in the National Hockey League? Or are the forwards off their shooting form?

Whatever the answer, NHL goalies have allowed only 430 goals to date, exactly 30 fewer than were scored in the same number of games last year.

The statistics indicate that some of last season's high scorers are having trouble.

For example, New York Rangers' Andy Bathgate led the individual scoring race at this date last year with 37 points.

This year, Chicago's Stan Mikita is leading the scoring parade with 26 points. At this point last year, eight players had 26 or more points.

So far, nobody is averaging a point-a game—the pace set by Bathgate and Bobby Hull of Chicago last season in tying for the scoring title with 84 points in 70 games.

A year ago, Claude Provost of Montreal Canadiens led the league in goals with 17, and was in second place in scoring with 32 points, five less than Bathgate.

HAMPERED BY INJURY

Today, Toronto's Frank Mahovlich leads in goals with 15. Provost, hampered by a shoulder injury that caused him to miss three games, has seven goals and is tied for 22nd spot in scoring with 13 points.

Bathgate led in assists a year ago with 38—enough to put him into a tie for the league scoring lead this year.

Today the smooth - skating Rangers' right-winger is tied for the league in assists with 17. Milt Schmidt - Detroit centre Alex Delvecchio share the lead.

Mikita was tied for 12th place in league scoring a year ago. Lincoln McMahon, Boston, tied for second spot in scoring with Bathgate with 25 points each, was tied for 20th place last season with 15 points.

Detroit's Parker MacDonald, today occupies 12th spot in the league scoring race with 21 points, while a year ago he was floundering in the minors.

REPEAT PERFORMANCE

Five players among the league's top 10 scorers today ranked among the top 10 a year ago. Besides Bathgate and Mahovlich, they are veterans Bernie Geoffrion of Montreal, Gordie Howe of Detroit and Johnny Bucyk of Boston.

This year's lowest goals-against averages belongs to Chicago's Glenn Hall, with 1.92, while a year ago Toronto's veteran Johnny Bower led netminders with a 2.33 goals-against average.

The Bruins again have the most generous defence in the league. Rookie Bob Perreault has a 4.04 goals-against average to date this year, while Doug Head had a 4.33 goals-against average a year ago.

In the only game tonight, New York Rangers meet first-place Black Hawks in Chicago. The Hawks would seem to have a good chance of increasing their two-point lead over second - place Detroit in the game, as they have won all five previous games this season between the two clubs.

The Rangers will have Gump Worsley back in nets. The 33-year-old goalie missed three games with a sprained left shoulder.

City Hockey At Arena Tonight!

Welbanks Motors and the Pepsi's will battle it out for second place, and possibly first, in the opening game of tonight's City Hockey League doubleheader at Memorial Arena.

The two clubs are tied for second place, two points back of the loop-leading Trudeau Motors who clash with Joyce-Rollins Combines in the nightcap.

If the Combines can upset Trudeaus, the winner between Pepsi's and Welbanks will climb into a tie for first place.

The first game is slated for 7.45 with the second getting under way at 9.15.

There will be several individual battles going on as well. Gary Goyer and "Pug" Kellar, both of Trudeaus, are tied for the league scoring lead and will be out after as many points as possible against Joyce - Rollins tonight. There are several other players not far behind the leaders.

The Pepsi's-Welbanks game has all the earmarks of a grudge battle as the Pepsi's have lost just once this year and it was Welbanks who turned the trick.

Meanwhile, Joyce - Rollins have lost a couple of close ones, a 4-2 and 5-3, the past two weeks and will be giving everything they've got to pull an upset against Trudeaus.

It looks like another good evening of hockey at Memorial Arena.

Break 18-Game Loss String

Sarnia Rams Win First

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sarnia Rams provided the biggest news in Ontario Hockey Association Senior A group Tuesday night. They won. The Rams defeated Kitchener-Waterloo Tigers 5-2 with a three-goal splurge in overtime in their first victory of the season. It ended their losing streak at 18 games.

The win came in the club's first game since a reorganization movement by the players. The Rams had purchased three previous games because of a lack of players, but dressed 14 Tuesday night, while Kitchener-Waterloo started with only nine players and finished with seven.

Bruce Jones, Barry Jakeman and John Price scored the overtime goals. Bob McCaig and Jakeman earlier tied the score after Mac Dubois and Jim Dahmer had given Kitchener-Waterloo a 2-0 lead after two periods.

DEFENCEMAN HURT

The Tigers lost Reg Whaley, one of their two defencemen, in the extra period with a charleyhorse. Bob Forhan was ejected with a misconduct penalty in the overtime period.

In the other league game Tuesday night, Woodstock Athletics edged Galt Terriers 3-2. The result left the Athletics six points ahead of the fourth-place Terriers. The Tigers are fifth and the Rams sixth.

Jerry Theberge scored two goals in seconds apart in the second period to wipe out a 1-0 Galt lead. Toby Black scored the other Athletics goal. Lloyd Mercer gave Galt its early lead.

Rugger Tour Was Success

VANCOUVER (CP)—A Canadian rugby team's tour of Britain was "quite a fabulous success" despite its poor record, says captain Buzz Moore.

The team won one game, tied one and lost 14 on the tour. Moore and the players returned Monday.

"This may sound ridiculous, but we put Canada on the international rugby map," said Moore. "We're now accepted by the British and they want us back."

CAMBRIDGE WINS

TWICKENHAM, England (AP)—Cambridge crushed Oxford 14-0 in their annual Rugby Union match before a crowd of 50,000 Tuesday.

Giants Place Four

Packers Dominate AP All-Stars

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP) — Green Bay Packers dominated the Associated Press all-star team of the National Football League with a total of 10 of the 22 players selected on the offensive and defensive units.

Paul Hornung, the player of the year in 1961, did not make the team selected by a committee of sports writers and broadcasters from the 14 league cities. Green Bay's star halfback missed about half the season because of a knee injury.

Fullback Jim Taylor, tight end Ron Kramer, tackle Forrest Gregg, guard Jerry Kramer and centre Jim Ringo of the defending champion Packers were named to the first offensive team. Defensive end Willie Davis, tackle Henry Jordan, linebackers Dan Currie and Bill Forester and the safety man Herb Adderley of the Packers made the defensive unit.

New York Giants put four men on the two teams including Y. A. Tittle, their 36-year-old quarterback, and Del Shofner, his favorite target at split end. Tackle Roosevelt Brown also made the offensive team for the Giants and safety Jimmy Patton made it on defense.

Detroit Lions tremendous defensive unit earned four places with Joe Schmidt, the hardy perennial, at centre linebacker, 226 - pound Roger Brown at tackle and Joe (Night Train) Lane and Yale Lary in the secondary.

Jim Parker of Baltimore Colts shared the guard assignment with Kramer, who took over Hornung's place - kicking chores. The Colts also placed 35-year-old Gino Marchetti at defensive end.

The starting backfield on offence included Tittle at quarter, Taylor at fullback, Bobby Mitchell of Washington Redskins at flanker and Don Perkins of Dallas Cowboys, for the first time since he joined the league six seasons ago, Cleveland's Jimmy Brown did not make the team.

Two players who formerly performed for Canadian clubs were named as alternates. Pittsburgh's John Henry Johnson, a centre back with Calgary Stampeders of the Western Football Conference, was a runner-up on the offensive team and Cleveland's veteran Bob Gain, who once starred with Ottawa Rough Riders of the Eastern Conference, came close as a defensive tackle.

Darts League Results

Very close scores featured the action in Belleville Dart League play this week with a slim one-pin spread separating the clubs in six of the seven games.

AHAP topped the Legion, A. and P. downed Will's, Hobby Shop edged Corby's, El Rancho shaded the Landscapers, Dover's nudged the Skyliners and Lucky Lews defeated Jim's Place, all by 6-5 scores.

In the only other game McInnes Men took a 7-4 win over Eendusters.

Mets Trade Pair

Mantilla To Red Sox

NEW YORK (AP)—Infielder Pumpsie Green and pitcher Tracy Stallard, who threw home run No. 61 to Roger Maris in 1961, were acquired by New York Mets of the National League Tuesday in a trade that sent utility player Felix Mantilla to Boston Red Sox of the American League.

The Red Sox will deliver a third player, a minor leaguer, at a later date.

Mets president George Weiss said Stallard will be placed on the roster of Buffalo Bisons, a farm club in the International League, in what was regarded as a bookkeeping move because the Mets' roster now has a maximum 40 players. The right-hander, who pitched in the minors last season, will be given an opportunity to win a berth in spring training.

Weiss said he expects Green, a switch hitter who batted .226 last season, to take up slack in the left-handed-hitting department, and Stallard to team up with Craig Anderson as the top right-handed relief specialists.

Mantilla hit .276 for the Mets last season.

BEATS MEXICAN

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—Featherweight champion Davey Moore coasted to a unanimous 10-round decision over Mexico City's Fill Nava in a non-title fight Tuesday night. Moore, of Columbus, Ohio, weighed 130½ pounds. Nava weighed 128½.

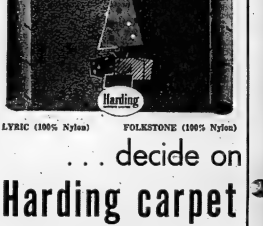
300 Nights Harness Racing

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Racing Commission Tuesday approved 300 nights of harness racing next year at four tracks.

Opening the season will be a 26-night meeting at Toronto Old Woodbine starting July 1.

The new Mohawk Raceway meet at Campbellville, Ont., will have 52 nights, a 28-night meeting starting May 1 and a 24-night meeting starting Sept. 2.

The new Windsor Raceway at Windsor has been given 36 nights, starting Sept. 2 and ending Dec. 24.



Fort Erie Western Fair will have 70 nights of racing, a 35-night meeting starting May 20 and a fall meet starting Sept. 30.

HEADS FOOTBALL POLL

NEW YORK (AP)—Unbeaten, untied Southern California has been voted the 1962 U.S. national collegiate football champion in an Associated Press poll. It is the first West Coast team to receive the honor since 1939.

Doug Jones, Folley on Saturday

Loi is the reigning European champ in this 140-pound division. He lost the world title to Perkins in Milan Sept. 14.

The light - heavyweight and heavyweight divisions also pick up a bit this week with action in New York Saturday and Rome Friday.

The Madison Square Garden fight sends Zora Folley of Chandler, Ariz., the No. 6 heavy, against Doug Jones of New York, rated No. 8.

In Rome it will be Guilio Rinaldi, No. 4 in the light-heavy class, and Bob Olson, the former middleweight king who is rated No. 8. Rinaldi recently whipped Chic Calderwood Jr. to win the European light-heavy crown.

The Folley-Jones match was postponed once when Folley came down with the flu. He defeated Jones on a decision last Aug. 1.

Montreal's Bob Cleroux is on a Boston Garden card Friday that scheduled five 10-rounders. The Montreal heavyweight goes against Tom McNeeley of Arlington, Mass.

TORONTO (CP) — George Chuvalo, almost a forgotten man among heavyweights, packed his boxing gear, shed his manager and left for Detroit today to start on a comeback at the tender age of 25.

"If I wanted to be a painter, I'd move to a place where there's a better environment for painting," said George. "But I want to be a fighter, so I'm moving to a city where there's a better environment for fighting."

Chuvalo, once ranked fifth among world heavyweights and former Canadian champ, intends to manage himself for a while.

Jack (Deacon) Allen, veteran handler of boxers in Toronto, has been Chuvalo's manager for the last five years.

Allen announced Tuesday that he had severed his connections with Chuvalo, but "the decision was not of my making."

"It's been in the air for the last year," said Chuvalo, "it finally came to a head Tuesday. We parted on a mutual understanding and there are no hard feelings — we're still good friends."

Allen said there were still 10 months to go on their five-year contract but that George had asked for his release.

STILL HAS CHANCE

"He's one of the best heavyweights Canada has ever had," said the Deacon. "He's never been knocked down, not even in the gym. I still have unbounded faith in Chuvalo's ability to reach the top if he applies himself to it."

Chuvalo, who fights at 207 pounds, now weighs 212 and hasn't had a fight in more than a year. In 28 professional bouts he has won 22—16 knockouts—lost five and had one draw.

His last fight was Oct. 2, 1961, against Joe Erskine of Wales. Chuvalo lost that one at Toronto on a fifth-round disqualification.

"I've had seven or eight bouts for him since then, all against top fighters," said Allen. "But he didn't take them."

"I didn't want to take them with things being the way they were," said Chuvalo, referring to his differences with the Deacon. "It wasn't a question of turning them down—I never turned down a fight in my life."

HAS NEW TRAINER

The husky Torontonian says he has been training in Detroit for the last month, travelling back and forth, and has hooked up with trainer Theodore Mo-Worter.

He has unsettled business with Bob Cleroux of Montreal, the man who stripped him of Canadian title.

Cleroux signed a return-match contract with Chuvalo which he hasn't honored, an act that has resulted in Cleroux being suspended in Canada and in most of the United States. Cleroux meets Tom McNeeley at Boston Friday night.

"I can't do much until I fight him again and that may come about soon," Chuvalo said.

"Then I'm going to try for the name fighters."

Does Allen feel Chuvalo is capable of being his own manager?

He hesitated, then answered: "It's a matter of making the right matches at the right time."

Kingston Tops EPL Scorers

OTTAWA (CP) — There's a familiar ring to the weekly scoring statistics released Tuesday by the Eastern Professional Hockey League.

They show six of the top 10 scorers are members of the Kingston Frontenacs — and that's been the story since the league opened its schedule.

Rookie Jeannot Gilbert of Frontenacs is the leader with 42 points, two better than teammate Don Blackburn, and four better than his former linemate, Bobby Leiter. Leiter, top scorer for many weeks, has been with Boston Bruins since early this month.

Marc Dufour of Sudbury Wolves is fourth in the scoring list with 35 points. His 21 goals make him the leading marksman in the four-team league. Fifth is Gerry Ouellette of Kingston with 30 points.

Two Sudbury players hold sixth and seventh positions. They are Dave Richardson with 29 points, and Gordon Labossiere with 28.

Three players are tied for ninth position. They are Billy Carter of Hull-Ottawa Canadiens, and Dick Cherry and Harry Sinden, both of Kingston. Each has 27 points.

Norm Armstrong of Sudbury continues his reign as league badman with 98 minutes spent in the penalty box. Sudbury is the most penalized team with 403 minutes.

There's another familiar story in the goaltending statistics. Still the leader is Ernie Wakely of Hull-Ottawa with an average of 2.55. Second is Bruce Gamble of Kingston with a 3.15 average.

SIGNED BY ALS ..

MONTREAL (CP) — Iowa State lineman Dick Walton, a draft choice of teams in both major United States football leagues, has been signed by Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference, it was announced Tuesday. Walton, 21, six-foot-three and 235 pounds, played guard, tackle, defensive end and linebacker with Iowa State.

Top Winner In American League

Terry Took Up Yankee Slack

BOSTON (AP)—Ralph Terry's contribution to New York Yankees' victory in the American League pennant race is reflected in the official 1962 pitching statistics released Tuesday.

The 26-year-old right-hander, taking up the slack caused by the lefty Whitey Ford's arm miseries, won the most games in the junior circuit, 23, pitched the most innings, 299, and walked the most batters, 20. He also allowed the most homers, 40.

Terry, who blanked San Francisco 1-0 in the seventh and deciding game of the World Series, finished eighth in the regular season earned run competition with a 3.19 average.

The ERA title was captured by Detroit Tigers' Hank Aguirre with a 2.21 mark. The southpaw, who became a full-fledged starting pitcher after seven years as a reliever, posted a 16-8 record last mark.

Robin Roberts, the former Philadelphia National League star who made an excellent comeback with Baltimore, was second with a 2.78 average.

Three pitchers won 20 games. They were Camilo Pascual of Minnesota, Jay Herbert of Chicago and Dick Donovan, Cleveland.

Herbert, who lost nine games, had the highest winning percentage, .690. Pascual was the pitcher in strikeouts with 206 and complete games, 18. He also shared the lead in shutouts with Donovan and teammate Jim Kaat. Each had five.

Minor Hockey

A full schedule of Squirt and Midget games provided plenty of spirited action in Belleville Minor Hockey Association play at Memorial Arena last night.

SQUIRT

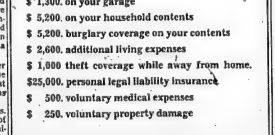
The Bruins took a 5-1 victory over the Canadiens. B.) Lonier scored two goals with one each for Freddie Stickle, P. Reston and J. Cass for the winners. P. Hennessy potted the lone Canadien marker.

Red Wings and Rangers fought to a 4-4 tie. J. McKilligan, J. Wiggins, R. O'Neil and P. Dixon potted the Wing goals while M. Bray, P. Gray, D. Snider and B. Cousins had the Ranger goals.

The Black Hawks took a 3-1 decision over the Barons. M. Semark, J. Mulvihill and P. Wall fired the Hawk markers. D. Barriage had the Baron goal.

Browns blanked the Flyers 6-0. W. Farrel scored two goals with the others going to M. Trusiach, D. Nelles, J. Spackett and J. Semark.

Royals also turned in a shutout win, stopping the Frontenacs by a 1-0 score. B. Buchanan netted the only goal.



MIDGET

Maple Leafs downed the Macs 4-2. K. Kaye, B. Creelman, B. Clements and D. Leach potted the Leaf goals while A. Wilson and P. Fralick had the Mac goals.

Rick Ellis led the Buzzers to a 4-1 victory over Canadiens. Ellis scored three goals and Harrington got the other. Pete Fleming and Don Smyth had two assists each, Moore and Holgate one. Monty Flindal scored for the losers, assisted by Paul Ford.

The Black Hawks shaded the Rangers 2-1 with Brian Smith scoring both the Hawk goals. Steve Zibler added on one. Doug Olsen scored for Rangers with Bob Hunter assisting.

Red Wings defeated the Maple Leafs 6-3 with John Doran firing three goals. Rob Bateman, Gary Lucas and Greg Browning also scored while Bateman had two helpers, Lucas, Doug Gregory and Bob Lascaster one each. Don Adams, Gary Rutherford and Gerry Muldoon bagged Leaf markers, David Chapman helping on one.

Should Use Starting Gates

Tells British To Revise Racing Ideas

YORK, England (AP)—Daniel G. Van Clief, United States financier and racehorse owner, told British racing officials Tuesday night they should revise some of their ideas to advance the cause of international racing.

"A review of international racing to date reveals that there has been no real unity or real understanding," said the farmer from Fairmont, Va.

Van Clief was speaking at the Gimcrack dinner, held each year in connection with the 106-year-old Gimcrack Stakes. The American won this year's stakes with Crocket.

Van Clief told Britons they should think again about using starting gates. No gates are used on British tracks.

Van Clief said that after watching a few races on British tracks he "became adjusted to the ragged performance, some what resembling a cavalry charge commanded by a few reluctant sergeants, which is known as the British start."

Van Clief also reprimanded British breeders for exporting too much of their best stock to foreign studs, including American.

HOTSPUR WINS

GLASGOW, Scotland (AP)—Tottenham Hotspur of England defeated Glasgow Rangers 3-2 Tuesday night to gain the quarter-finals of the European Cup of Cup winners soccer tournament. Tottenham won by 8-4 on aggregate after home-and-away games. The Spurs beat Rangers 5-2 in London last month.

SENT TO ANGELS

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Philadelphia Phillies sent outfielder Jack Davis to Los Angeles Angels of the American League Tuesday for catcher Earl Averill. It was a straight player deal. Davis, 24, played in 48 games with the National League Phils last season and had a .215 batting average. Averill, 31, played with the Angels two years. He appeared in 92 games in 1962, mostly as a pinch hitter, with a .219 average.

Indians Dominate AL Race

Sweeney is the top scorer with 40 points on 11 goals and 29 assists. Cline and Boyer are tied for second with 33. Sweeney is the leader in assists while Cline is No. 1 in goals with 18, with a 2.80 goals-against average.

Quebec Aces' Charlie Hodge is the most effective goalie, with a 2.80 goals-against average.

A Charging Bear

No 'Sitting Bull' This

NEW YORK (AP)—Ronnie Bull, Chicago Bears' fine running halfback, was named rookie of the year in the National Football League today by an Associated Press committee of sports writers and broadcasters from the 14 league cities.

Bull, the Bears' No. 1 draft choice a year ago after leading Baylor in running and pass-receiving for three straight seasons, started his pro career working on defence. After a succession of injuries crippled the Bears, he moved to offence.

His figures through the 13th game last Sunday show 372 yards in 103 carries for a 3.6-yard average and 29 passes for 324 yards. He has returned nine kickoffs for 235 yards.

SEAGRAM'S FIVE STAR

CANADIAN RYE WHISKY

Big Butch Bouchard, Rock Of Canadiens' Defence, Still Owed $25 by Dick Irwin

By KEN SMITH

MONTREAL (CP) — Big Butch Bouchard, the rock of Montreal Canadiens' defence a decade ago, has exchanged his bleu - blanc - rouge uniform for one of grey flannel.

Now 42, Bouchard has become a highly successful—and prosperous—restaurant owner.

He retired in 1956 after 15 seasons in the National Hockey League so he could, he now says, devote more time to his family and his business.

Since then he has become caught up in so many other activities, from politics to charities and youngsters' sports, he is right back where he started —he's talking again of giving up at least some of them so he can devote more time to his family and his business.

Despite his success, the five-time all-star still remembers a lost $25 from his playing days.

The money disappeared during a game against Chicago Black Hawks. The Canadiens' late coach, Dick Irvin, thought the Black Hawks had too many players on the bench. He sent Bouchard, the team captain, over to referee Red Storey to demand a penalty.

FORGOT PROMISE

Storey, he says, sent him back to Irvin with the word, "no penalty."

"Dick sent me out again to tell Red no penalty, no game. Red got a bit excited at that and told me, 'if you don't get your team on the ice you'll get a misconduct.'

"Now a misconduct meant a $25 fine and I wasn't very interested in that, so back to Dick I went again. But he said, 'Don't worry, you go out there and argue with that guy. If you get a penalty I'll pay it.'

"So out I went and I argued. And I got the penalty—but I never did get that $25 back from Dick."

Not that he needs the money —his east-end restaurant is large, softly lit and filled with gleaming linen, glistening glasses and paying customers.

Because of his big name in sports and his business success, Bouchard—his first name is Emile but it is almost never used—is in constant demand to help with various charities and other organizations.

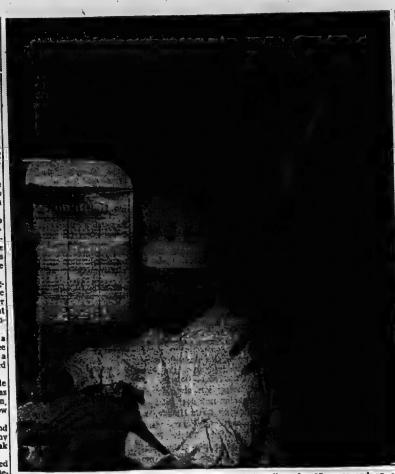
He was president during the last two years of existence of the Montreal Royals baseball club—a post that may or may not be considered charity.

ELECTED ALDERMAN

Since being elected alderman on his first try at politics in suburban Longueuil three years ago, Bouchard has had a chance to try to do something about one of his pet peeves—the lack of proper playing facilities for city children.

"I feel that, with what I've taken out of sport, I owe it to the kids to give them as much as I can," he says.

Last year he took time out to organize a bantam hockey tournament in Montreal. This winter the tournament is to be province-wide and Bouchard is talking about having it include all Canada sometime soon.



Bouchard, completely bilingual, was the cause of one of the most unusual rulings ever handed down by the NHL—that all debates with referees be conducted in English.

It came about because of a discussion he had with referee Georges Gravelle during a game against Detroit Red Wings.

Bouchard and Gravelle started talking in French as did Abel, then Detroit captain, skated over and wanted to know what was going on.

Bouchard turned to him and said, "If you want to know, why don't you learn to speak French?"

The infuriated Abel reported this to Jack Adams, former Detroit general manager. A few days later, following Adams' official protest, the NDHL ruled out French.

NEW CHECKING MANNERS—Butch Bouchard now checks figures with his cook instead of checking opposing National Hockey League forwards. Bouchard, bruising defenceman with Montreal Canadiens for 15 years and an all-star five times, is the successful owner of an east-end Montreal restaurant and an alderman in suburban Longueuil. He retired from hockey in 1956. (CP Photo).

Western Hockey

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampeders came from behind to hold Vancouver Canucks to a 2-2 overtime tie in a Western Hockey League game Tuesday night.

Vancouver led 3-1 and 3-2 after the first and second periods.

The stalemate, reached despite a spectacular 53-stop performance by rookie goalie Gilles Villemure of Vancouver, left Calgary undefeated in three games running and moved the Cowboys within a point of the third-place Edmonton Flyers in the league's Northern Division.

Dale McDonald, Milan Marcetta and Lou Jankowski scored for Calgary.

Vancouver's markers came from Dave Duke, Bob McCusker and Jim Baird.

RICH IN GOLD

South Africa's gold production is great enough to pay the country's entire foreign debt with less than four months production.

Owner Sues Race Body

CALGARY (CP)—Race horse owner William E. Osler testified in Alberta Supreme Court Tuesday that he was "denied the opportunity to win" when deprived of stall space in racing meets operated by the Western Canada Racing Association.

Mr. Osler's $8,000 suit against the association, which operates races in Calgary, Edmonton, Regina and Saskatoon, began Tuesday.

His dispute with the association began on March 8, 1960, when he applied for stall accommodation for three horses during four 1960 race meets at Calgary and Edmonton.

In addition to claiming $3,000 special damages and $5,000 general damages, Mr. Osler is requesting the court to declare he was "wrongfully denied the right to enter and race his horses."

Canadians Do Well

Swimmers Star Down Under

By J. C. GRAHAM

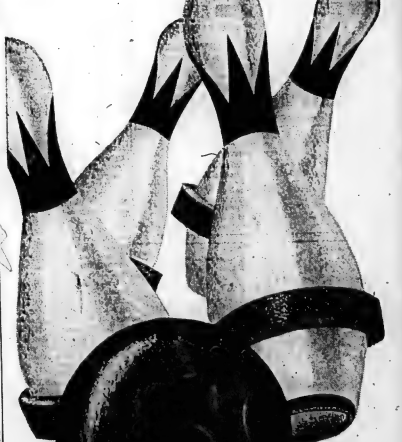
AUCKLAND (CP) — Canadian swimmers turned in some fine performances in two meets in New Zealand Tuesday night as they continued their tour following the British Empire Games in Perth, Australia.

At Rotorua, Sandy Gilchrist of Ocean Falls, B.C., picked up two victories. He won the 100-yard freestyle with a time of 50.9 seconds—considered an excellent time because splash ditches at each end of the pool hampered the swimmers' turns —and also won the 220-yard freestyle in 4:35.0.

Jack Kelso, another Ocean Falls resident, was hardly called in to fill up the eighth lane in the 100-yard breaststroke and ended up winning it. His clocking was 1:08.1.

New Zealand champ A. B. Robertson downed Kelso by a good margin to win the 100-yard backstroke.

Patty Thompson of Hamilton had a battle with S. Nicholson of New Zealand in the 440-yard women's freestyle but edged her out with a winning time of 5:14.0.



In a meet at Stratford, Montreal's Madeleine Sevigny won the women's 220-yard freestyle with a time of 2:25.3 but Allison Glendenning of Hudson Heights, Que., was edged out by New Zealand champion Valeria Haddon in the 110-yard breaststroke. Miss Haddon's time was 1:16.3.

In the men's events at Stratford, Aldy Melhardt of Vancouver won over D. F. Gerrard of New Zealand in the 100-yard butterfly and Steve Rabinovitch of Montreal beat out New Zealand champ T. Graham to win the 100-yard breaststroke.

AT THE PARK — James Stewart stars with Rock Hudson, Arthur Kennedy and Julie Adams in the great out-door drama "Bend in the River", color by Technicolor, opening Thursday at the Park Theatre. On the same program "Tammy and the Bachelor", in Technicolor and CinemaScope starring Debbie Reynolds, Leslie Neilson and Walter Brennan. Show starts 7.10. "Bend in the River" shown at 7.50 and "Tammy and the Bachelor" at 9.40 p.m.

Agriculture Minister Says Vote Closer Than We Think

PICTON — Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, Hon. William A. Stewart, was guest speaker at a banquet held by Progressive Conservatives of Prince Edward-Lennox, Monday night. Urging the PCs present to be ready for an election, the Minister commented: "The day of elections will come and it will come sooner than some of us think."

Promotion of the party was the essence of Mr. Stewart's speech. He stated the basic philosophy of the Progressive Conservative Party as one which embodies a belief in God and in the value of the individual. "It is on this basis our party has become great," he said. In John P. Robarts he felt the party has for its leader in Ontario a man dedicated to the development of the province.

MEDICAL INSURANCE

As part of the P.C.'s program for provincial development the speaker mentioned that a non-compulsory medical insurance plan would be tried in by '64. He described both the Liberal and NDP plans as compulsory and financed largely by the government. When asked where the money would come from, Mr. Stewart quoted Donald Gordon, Donald as saying, "from an increase in sales tax." He stated the Liberal plan would cost $200 million, the NDP's, $160 million. He wondered if they recognized them must be a limit to the expenditure of public funds.

Mr. Stewart rapped John Winterman's stand in the outlawing strikebreakers as political irresponsibility and as a move to gain the labor vote. What, he asked the farmers in his audience, would happen if you were unable to deliver your harvest to a canning factory that was struck.

FAMILY FARM

The minister spoke of strengthening and maintaining the family farm unit through the reintroduction of the Junior Farmer Establishment Loan so individuals can better compete with groups which have substantial capital.

FOOD COUNCIL

He announced the formation of a Producer - Processor Food Council to discuss some of the things that concerned both groups.

The current Trade Council was termed by the minister as "really catching on." He said consumers to cut their purchases of non-Canadian goods by $100 a year and buy Canadian, a move which would contribute to the formation of 60,000 new jobs.

Regarding the export picture, he warned farm groups not to sit back and rest on the British market. As an example of its possibilities he pointed to the 300 percent increase in sales of tomato juice to Britain. He noted that while Ontario beef's at England's World Food Fair this summer serviced 33,200 people. He had praise for Ontario agriculture who had staffed the booth, Prince Edward's Rose Marie Hallett among them. "They did a magnificent job as ambassadors of Ontario," he said.

The Minister felt his trip to Prince Edward was in the nature of returning a visit. He remembered that four Prince Edward Junior Farmers had stayed at his home in Middlesex this summer while on a tour of the area. He described those as four very fine young men. No group has ever left a finer impression he said.

Speaking of Norris Whitney's recent promotion in the House, Mr. Stewart said he is looked upon as one of its hardest working members.

MINISTER'S BACKGROUND

The Hon. Mr. Stewart was introduced by M. C. A. Norris Whitney who told that the Minister during his short tenure of office has made a mark for himself and earned the respect of all members of the legislature. Born in Middlesex county Mr. Stewart has farmed all his life, being particularly interested in the raising of beef cattle. He is the father of four girls. A long time Conservative, Mr. Stewart helped get people to the polls before he was old enough to vote. His official public service started as a member of his local secondary school board which he functioned for ten years. He joined the legislature in 1959 on the death of his county's member. In 1960 he was minister without portfolio and in '61 he was appointed Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Since then Mr. Whitney said Wilbur Stewart has worked untiringly on behalf of those engaged in agriculture.

Dwight Reynolds thanked the guest speaker.

F.E.D. MEMBERS REPORT

Also addressing the gathering was M.P. Douglas Alkenbrad who welcomed Mr. Stewart to the riding. He spoke of the Minister's part in raising Norris Whitney to the position of Deputy Speaker of the House and chairman of the whole House.

In a report on his activities in Ottawa to date Mr. Alkenbrad stated that more than one million dollars in grants, subsidies and public works had been awarded the riding to date. He asked for public support on a new ambulance in Wellington harbor. He announced the start of discussions regarding the dredging of Picton harbor. He said a sounding survey will begin as soon as the ice is strong enough. It will locate the areas where dredging in needed.

50,000 Less Farms Than 20 Years Ago

PICTON — The annual meeting of the Prince Edward Soil and Crop Improvement Association was held in the Bloomfield town hall. The guest speaker was Mr. H. F. Crown, the newly appointed director of A.R.D.A. in Ontario. In his opening remarks he asked the question, Is There a Need for a Rural Development program in Ontario and How Can A.R.D.A. bring this into effect? He pointed out that there is a growing percentage of people on the land who receive less than an adequate living and as high as 20 per cent of our farmers gross less than $2,000 per year. The number of operating farm units has decreased by almost 50,000 in the past 20 year period, and the cost of equipment per farm has increased by four times.

He further mentioned that we in Ontario are turning from a net exporter to a net importer of agricultural products. Mr. Crown mentioned that the A.R.D.A. program is administered by the Ontario Department of Agriculture and pointed out that the main purpose is to bring about an improvement in the rural economy. This might be achieved in many ways including alternate uses of marginal and submarginal land such as forestry, community pastures and recreation purposes.

The speaker was introduced by Grover Smith and thanked by Holmes Matthie who presented Mr. Crown with a Prince Edward County cheese. Others who spoke on the program were Ken. Fallis, Field Supervisor, Soil Crops Branch and Leland Wannamaker, Director, Ontario Soil and Crop Improvement Association. Brief reports were given Fred Hope, County Weed Inspector and Project co-operator, Richard Foster. Elmer Young, Alex Mann, Holmes Matthie, Ken. Mariett, James Denard and Klass Werkhoven. Leland Wannamaker presented Harry Gosline, Demorestville with the 1961 McNish Award Certificate for his outstanding achievements in winning the World Rye Championship on two occasions at the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair. Mr. Gosline won the World Rye Championship in 1958 and again in 1961.

He also won the Reserve Championship in 1959 and again in 1962.

The results of the 1962 Prince Edward Pasture Competition were announced at the meeting and the prize winners are as follows: 1st—James E. Alexander, Hillier; 2nd — Sherman Foster and Son, Hillier; 3rd — Ross Parks, R. 2, Bloomfield; 4th — Gordon Parks, R. 2, Bloomfield; 5th — Allen Baxter, R. 1, Bloomfield; 6th — James Denard, R. 1, Hillier; 7th — Klass Werkhoven, R. 2, Belleville; 8th — H. N. Denard, R. 2, Bloomfield; 9th — K. H. Werkhoven, R. 2, Belleville, and 10th — Harry Top, R. 2, Belleville.

James E. Alexander, Hillier, who won first place for the second year in a row was awarded the Hogg and Lytle Seed Co. Ltd. scroll and cheque for $10, and Sherman Foster and Son were awarded a cheque for $10 from Bishop Seed Co. in Belleville for showing the most improvement in the Pasture Competition. Prize money for the competition was also received from the Plant Food Council of Ontario.

A turkey was given by the Association as a door prize and was won by James Matthie, and a gallon of weed spray material donated by Maxwell Feeds, Picton, was won by Holmes Matthie. Chairman for the program was Alex Mann, president of the Prince Edward Soil and Crop Improvement Association.

Frank McHugh Will Be Back on 'Going My Way'

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 18 years ago character actor Frank McHugh played the role of a priest in a movie called Going My Way, starring Bing Crosby and Barry Fitzgerald.

Tonight McHugh will be back on Going My Way, only this time it is an ABC television program—and he plays a safe-cracker's assistant.

McHugh, who started in show business in his native McKeesport, Pa., stock company as a youngster, has been in literally hundreds of plays, silent movies, talkies and, now, television. In the movies he was almost inevitably cast in parts calling for a funny drunk. He played innumerable comedy reporters, too, but perhaps is most often seen nowadays in the late, late TV shows playing a cab driver in James Cagney's famous Roaring Twenties.

"There have always been good plays and bad plays; good movies and bad movies," says McHugh. "And there will always be good television programs and bad ones. I think—probably because I'm an actor, but real quality comes from the ability of those who perform in the shows. After all, they call a bad doctor a quack; a bad lawyer, a shyster—and a bad actor, a ham."

"I've never been a star," he remarked. "But after all, when I entered the theatre, most of us didn't want to be. We just wanted to be good actors."

Recommended tonight: Steel Hour, CBS, 10-11 EST—Big Day for a Scramble, drama about an aging, professional golfer, with James Whitmore.

Italian Doll Invests Her Money in Houses, Stocks

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)" — Don't you believe that diamonds are a girl's best friend, says Elsa Martinelli. Houses are.

She should know. She has five of them. She used to have six, but sold one because the neighborhood was depreciating.

Elsa is the Italian doll with an affinity for wild animals. At least that has been the story of her recent film career. She was the magazine photographer in Hatari, which put her in proximity with all kinds of beasts.

Now she's in Rampage with Robert Mitchum and various cats, such as tigers, jaguars, etc. Strange company for a girl who was one of Europe's most successful fashion models. But she doesn't mind, especially since the returns may provide her with another house.

"I now have three in Paris and two in Rome," she said between scenes. "I had another in Rome, but the area is building up all around it. When that happens here, property values go up. That is not true in Italy."

INVESTS IN HOUSES

"You have to do something with your money, and houses are as good an investment as any," she explained. "Besides, decorating is my hobby. I buy houses that are run-down and fix them up for rental. I keep one in Paris and one in Rome for myself."

What about buying some here?

"Not practical. It would be too hard for me to call from Europe if a house here needed a plumber. But if I should be here a couple of years I'd make movies, then I might consider it."

She rejected the suggestion that real estate here was high.

"Why, I have seen some excellently houses with swimming pools in Beverly Hills between $60,000 and $70,000," she said. "They would be much cheaper than that in Europe. If you tried to buy a five-room apartment with three bedrooms and two baths in one of the better districts of Rome, it would cost $250,000. That is just for the apartment, in a building with other apartments."

Despite her fondness for real estate, she isn't single-minded about it. "You've got to diversify your investments," she reasoned. "I also have money in other things, including American stocks. Blue chip, of course."

SHOWMAN FARMER

Andy Griffith, star of CTV's ndy Griffith Show, owns a 53-acre farm on Roanoke Island, S.C.

Service Clubs May Operate Regent Theatre

PICTON — Picton service clubs will investigate the possibility of operating the Regent Theatre. The need of a theatre was emphasized at a meeting of representatives of the organizations, Sunday afternoon, when various projects which would benefit the town and district were discussed.

A special committee representing the Royal Canadian Legion, Rotary Club, the Kiwanis Club, the Lions Club and the Chamber of Commerce will be formed under the chairmanship of Frank Stevens.

The informal meeting discussed many possibilities including that of the interested organization taking over the theatre operation on a lease basis with a canteen operated by volunteers.

Reeve Barney Hepburn expressed the opinion that town council is not interested in using the Regent block for municipal offices.

This was the second such inter-club meeting designed to co-ordinate the efforts of organizations in the community.

Vice wurk and was originally sponsored by the Lions Club, but Kiwanis club president, Action of the organizations in exploring the possible re-opening of the theatre. It is to be hope that the public may again enjoy screen entertainment as well as having a civic auditorium where a variety of events could be held.

The First Battalion Canadian Guards are keenly interested in having a theatre in the town and at the meeting full cooperation was assured by Major William Remple and Capt. Graham Ball.

Form Board To Welcome The Guards

PICTON — Co-operation of local organizations in community events was discussed forth several suggestions at Sunday's meeting. One of the topics was how members of the First Canadian Guards might be made welcome and members integrated into local organizations and activities.

Possibility of entertaining single men of Camp Picton in local homes for Christmas and New Year's is to be explored.

"While there may not be too many of them here for the holidays, I think this is a wonderful idea and one which every-man at camp who is away from home on these days would appreciate," said Major W. Remple. The full battalion will be here early in the new year following leave. Churches will be asked to co-operate.

CARNIVAL AND DANCE

Also discussed were an ice carnival, with prizes for costumes, at the County Centre, on January 18.

Also proposed is a gala dance the locale not yet decided, and January 19 as the suggested date. It will be a "free" dance with army personnel as guests. It would also provide an opportunity for single men of the camp to meet local girls.

A combined service clubs organization can accomplish a great deal, commented Chamber of Commerce president Gerry Morrison, who chaired the gathering.

Among those participating in the discussion were Major W. Remple and Capt. Graham Ball of the Canadian Guards; Capt. Jack Rogers, Dr. Lionel Dockrill, Kiwanis president; Capt. L. Pearo of the Salvation Army; Rev. Robert Black, Rev. V. E. Mitchell, Rev. D. Kemble, Jack Fawkes, Bill Strachen, Jesse Mason and B. Hepburn.

4 Inches Snow Falls in Town And District

PICTON — Picton and district had around four inches of snow Tuesday morning. The fall ended shortly after noon. Visitors from Belleville expressed surprise as they reported no such fall there.

Monday night four inches fell at Point Petre and Salmon Point, along Lake Ontario.

Plows were quickly in action and roads were not blocked, thanks in part to lack of wind which would have caused drifting.

Merchants welcomed the fall as it will speed up retail trade that Christmas is near, and spur shopping for winter merchandise.

Cheese, Butter Production In County

PICTON — Creamery butter production in Prince Edward County for the first ten months of 1962 showed only a small increase over the same period last year ago. The 1962 production amounted to 120,091 pounds, compared with 118,483 pounds for 1961 making a total increase of 1606 pounds.

The production for October was down slightly from 13,867 pounds in 1961 to 11,057 pounds in 1962, a decrease of 910 pounds for the month. Cheddar cheese production showed an increase of 18,192 pounds for the first ten months of the year from 1,927,004 pounds for the ten-month period ending in October 1961, to 1,945,196 pounds in 1961 to 198,512 pounds in 1962, an increase of 28,334 pounds, according to the Ontario Dept. of Agriculture.

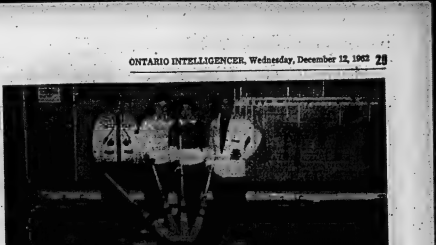
Labor Congress Does Not Want Nuclear Weapons

OTTAWA (CP)—Refusal to allow nuclear weapons on Canadian soil or in the hands of Canadian troops was urged Tuesday in a six-point Canadian Labor Congress submission to the cabinet on International affairs.

A thorough review of Canadian defence and foreign policy is urgently needed, said the 1,050,000-member labor body.

It said the recent Cuban crisis was again brought to light the confusing and contradictory nature of Canada's defence policy. The time now was ripe for a "comprehensive; thorough and critical review of this policy, either through a white paper or a special parliamentary committee or both."



It made these other suggestions, all flowing from policy approved at the CLC convention last April:

Every effort should be made to help achieve complete and general disarmament under effective international control.

Canada should oppose the spread of nuclear weapons to nations still lacking them, including Canada itself.

Defence spending should be trimmed and the savings spent on public essentials at home and economic aid abroad.

Plans should be laid for a comprehensive plan to divert defence spending into constructive, useful projects — thus avoiding harsh economic dislocation in the event of general disarmament.

PRIZES BEING AWARDED — A rink of Mrs. Kay Moore, Norman Moore, Mrs. Doreen Lovett with Charles Lovett holding the broom, scored an eight-ender, the ultimate in curling at a Bonspiel at the local club on Saturday. For this feat the rink will receive many awards, one being from Corby company and each will receive a new eight-ender broom.
It is seldom an eight-end is scored in this popular sport. Mr. Moore is the new manager of the Royal Bank and with his wife, Kay, start residence in the city on a happy note.

White's District
WHITE'S DISTRICT — Sgt. John Linn of Cobourg was a Saturday visitor of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Linn.
Mr. and Mrs. Donald Sandercock, George, Lee and Jimmie were Sunday callers of her parents Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Cunningham of Rose Hall, Hillier.
Among those from this district who attended the social evening at Marder's School on Friday evening were Mr and Mrs. Cecil Jeffery, Mrs. W. Jeffery, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Sickle and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Curtis.
Mrs. Walter Jones is a patient in Trenton Memorial Hospital.
Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Curtis entertained on Sunday for dinner and tea guests, their family, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Price, Stephen and Cathy of Bellville and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pearson, Linda, Karen and David of Trenton.
Mr. and Mrs. Casey Ketcheson of Trenton were Saturday callers of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Larsen.
White's Church Sunday School visited the Green Acres Rest Home on Sunday afternoon and entertained the patients with a varied program of music, carols and readings.
Next Sunday's church service will be held at the usual time at White's Church. In the afternoon the Christmas party will be held at 2 p.m. Communion service will be held in the morning.

Wide Religious Liberty Enjoyed Say Leaders

VANCOUVER (CP)—Jewish leaders enjoy religious freedom in Canadian schools, say Jewish leaders here.

They commented Monday night on charges by University of B.C. sociology Professor Werner Cohn that school prayer in public schools "are a violation of the civil liberties of non-Christian pupils and of Protestant-Society in schools is an infringement of religious freedom.

Dr. Cohn, in a speech to the founding convention of the B.C. Civil Liberties Association, also told of a Jewish girl in the U.S. who was taunted as a "Christ killer" after she asked to be excused from singing Christmas carols.

William Gelmon, president of the Vancouver Lodge of B'nai B'rith, said there's nothing wrong with Christmas carols and carols in schools "as long as the right of Jewish children not to take part is respected."

"I am not aware that this right is violated in this country," he said.

PLAN EXERCISE
LONDON (AP) — The Soviet Union's northern fleet will carry out joint exercises with the rocket and air forces in the Barents and Kara seas area Dec. 15-25, the Soviet defence ministry announced today. The announcement was attributed by Tass news agency. The Barents Sea lies between northern Scandinavia, northern Russia and the Arctic Circle.

Picton
W. 'Bill' Pope Dies of Typhoid In Virgin Islands

PICTON — Word was received by his sisters here on Saturday that William (Bill) Pope had died from typhoid while in the Virgin Islands in the Caribbean. It is planned to bring the body to Picton for burial but arrangements have not been completed.
Mr. Pope's wife and daughter live in Nassau while another daughter attends a girls' school in Michigan.
His sisters are Mrs. Ted Folds and Mrs. Rayburn Dawe.
Son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pope, he was born in Picton 43 years ago and attended local schools. Later he attended the College of Art in Toronto and while studying arts, taught in California returned to Canada to enlist in the RCAF. He served with distinction overseas with the rank of Flight Lieutenant and remained in the Air Force five years after the war as a pilot.

Injured While Playing Hockey At Centre

PICTON — Gordon Fitzgerald, 28, suffered head injuries as a result of a fall while playing hockey at the County Centre and is a patient in Victory A. Kingston General Hospital. He is reported to be improving satisfactorily. An employee of Procter-Silex, he collided with another player during a game and struck his head. After treatment at Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital he was removed to Kingston. Mrs. Fitzgerald resides at the corner of King and Bowery streets. He is a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Demille and came here to work at the new industry.

TO LAUNCH STUDY
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy has recommended the government spend $100,000 to launch a study of transportation needs in the heavily populated area between Washington and Boston. Kennedy Tuesday endorsed a White House report calling for funds for an analysis of all types of transportation now in use in what is called the north-eastern megalopolitan corridor."

Frankford
FRANKFORD — Mrs. S. McCree of Tweed and Miss Ethel Shaver of Ottawa spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Preston Chase and family.
Mr. David Strome of R.P.N.C. Petawawa spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Strome.
Miss Henrietta Wood attended the funeral of her aunt in Detroit, Michigan on Tuesday.
Mrs. H. W. Rose accompanied by Mrs. J. F. Rose of Trenton spent a few days last week, in Toronto.
The Rev. and Mrs. Mac Wilson and family were Saturday guests with Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Dillett. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson and family will take up pastoral duties at Timmins, Ontario.
Mr. and Mrs. Grant Allen of Warkworth spent Wednesday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Rowe and family.
Mr. Bill Dafoe of Marlbank spent the weekend with—his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mervin Dafoe.
The Rev. and Mrs. O'Mara of Tamworth were Friday supper guests with the Rev. and Mrs. A. Carson.
Mr. and Mrs. Fred Spencer and family of Port Credit spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. George Spencer.
Mr. and Mrs. Harry MacDonald and son Garland spent the weekend visiting friends in Oshawa.
Mr. and Mrs. David Palmer, Jr. and family of Picton spent the weekend with Mrs. David Palmer, Sr.
F/O and Mrs. Ted Strome and daughter Cathy of Portage La Prairie, Manitoba returned there after several weeks with Mr. and Mrs. R. Strome. F/O Strome completed a six-week course at the RCAF Station, Centralia.
Mr. Doug. Badgley of Toronto spent the weekend with his father, Mr. Delbert Badgley.
The Rev. F. F. Downing, Trinity Anglican Church rector, suffered a mild heart attack and is a patient in Belleville General Hospital.

The days before Christmas are almost as good as the day itself, for children, because the stores are all so busy demonstrating the mechanical toys. Not all of these children watching in a shopping centre store will be lucky enough to get an electric racing car set from Santa, but they can all have the fun of watching it in the store.

Winter Cowboy

S'No Easy Job This - - Riding Herd on Reindeer

EDMONTON (CP) — Sven Johannson, recently arrived from Sweden, has taken off for Inuvik, near the mouth of the Mackenzie River, to look after a herd of reindeer owned by Al Oeming who operates a game farm near here.

Accompanying Mr. Johannson are his wife, two - year - old daughter and a stack of scientific reports on reindeer-keeping compiled by research stations in the Scandinavian countries and the Soviet Union.

Many problems confront reindeer keepers, said Mr. Johannson, and the most serious is feed and nutrition. During the winter the animals feed on lichens, which are deficient in protein. Supplementary protein feeding could be the answer but there is the problem of cost, particularly since a herd may contain 5,000 to 10,000 animals.

Also, the mortality rate was high. In a herd winter all the calves might die. In Sweden a mortality rate of 20 to 30 per cent was common.

One way to solve the problem, he suggested, is to slaughter the weakest calves before winter. In the Soviet Union some herders take out up to 75 per cent of the calf herd each fall and slaughter the animals for meat and fur.

Other difficulties include the presence of parasites and diseases, Mr. Johannson said. These are hard to treat because of the large number of reindeer involved.

A difficulty peculiar to Canada is the presence of caribou in the north. Reindeer like to follow the caribou as they travel and it's difficult to keep the herd from running off. In Sweden there are no caribou or wild reindeer.

Mr. Johannson has spent the last 13 years tending herds of reindeer in Denmark, Norway and Sweden.

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Many past efforts can now be made to bear fruit. Be ready to accept added responsibility. Remain alert for greater opportunity, profit. Be sure you have solid facts to back statements.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Changes occur in your favor. Do not resist improvement. Avoid adhering to status quo. Take a chance on your own abilities. Gemini and Virgo individuals are on "your side."

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Emphasize original approach. Money problems soon overcome. But you must take initiative. Owners may not have confidence because they do not perceive potential. Act on your own!

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Take care in expressing yourself through a second person. Others may misquote you today. Decide upon program and carry it out. Cycle continues high. Realize you are on "winning" side!

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): Insist on certain amount of privacy. Review past achievements. Look to future possibilities. Strive for new ways of self-expression. Be versatile. Keep mind and heart open.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23): Accept opportunity to make new friends. Turn on Virgo charm. Share knowledge, hobbies. Encourage stimulating conversation. Break away from routine. Relax. Take step to insure future happiness.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Accept certain realities. Outline constructive program aimed at achieving ambitions. Refuse to be sidetracked. Opportunity to impress one in authority arises. Take advantage of it!

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Good Moon aspect today highlights publishing, religion. Gain strength through aid of loved ones. Put across ideas with sincerity, vitality. Make this a banner day!

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): It's time to "take stock." Get off by yourself. Sum up present situation. Money-making idea should be put to use. Be practical where marital or business partners are concerned.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Answer mail, make calls to friends who have been ignored due to busy schedule. Emphasize relations with public. Come out of shell. Express views. Read newspaper to keep up with current events.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Persevere. No time to give up. Aid soon forthcoming. Look at funny side of situation. Smile, make friends by avoiding "long face." Gain by optimism.

Pisces (Feb. 2 0to Mar. 20): Aspirations can be transformed to realities. Make basic changes. Insist on payment for services rendered. Maintain dignity. Speak up to one in authority. Be gracious, but determined.

* * *

If today is your birthday . . . you are able to express ideas in form of stories, parables. Fine for writing, publishing. Added responsibility, more income indicated.

* * *

General Tendencies: Policies are set. Position of nations, individuals becomes more "fixed." Special ward to Capricorn: Essential that you have all facts at hand. This could lead to better things in near future.

Nuclear-Powered Sub Tankers May Be Answer in Bringing Crude Oil Out of Arctic

CALGARY (CP) — Nuclear-powered submarine tankers may be the answer to transporting crude oil out of the Arctic, says a Calgary oilman.

S. D. Moore, president and general manager of Phoenix Canada Oil Co. Ltd., said he expects the Japanese will have built a prototype of such a vessel before crude oil production facilities are in operation in the Arctic.

Phoenix, a Canadian independent which has acreages on Cornwallis and Bathurst islands, plans to participate with Bankeno Mines Ltd. of Toronto in one or more drilling projects next year.

The discovery of oil sands and seepages on several arctic islands was reported in October.

Mr. Moore said the deep-sea channels between the islands, while restricting overland access, make tanker shipping the most economical method.

A submarine tanker, he said, could operate for five years on a few handfuls of fuel, leaving space normally occupied by fuel oil available for the vessel's cargo of crude.

WEATHER PROBLEM

Such a submarine would be able to operate on a year-round basis, he said. Without the armaments and expensive equipment of military submarines, the tanker would evolve into a simple tube.

The delays, discomforts and dangers of bad weather would be avoided. Mr. Moore said another advantage is that submarines require 40 per cent of the horsepower of surface vessels because of the absence of resistance.

"This means that a decrease in the time it would take for a round trip decreases the total number of tankers which would be required."

Any problems of radiation from nuclear reactors would solve themselves, said Mr. Moore. The crude oil cargo would act as a shield between the crew and the reactor while the sea would be an automatic cooling medium without expensive pumping and piping requirements.

Syracuse Chief, Deputy Chief Resign Posts

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — A state investigation commissioner has recommended that the Onondaga County district attorney investigate conflicting testimony given at a public hearing on alleged police corruption.

Commissioner Myles Lane made the recommendation Tuesday after hearing testimony by two city officials and a policeman about dismissal in 1960 of gambling charges against a woman allegedly involved in a numbers betting racket headed by Percy Harris.

Harris, a convicted gambler whose name has figured prominently in the hearings, has been ordered to testify today. His wife was accused of lying to the commission when she testified Tuesday.

Mayor William F. Walsh announced a shake-up of the 340-man police force Monday night after the resignation of Police Chief Harold Kelly and Deputy Chief Francis Ryan. The special commission has taken control of the police department.

Strikes, Scandals and Legal Feuds Kept 'Em Down on U. S. Farms in 1962

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. agriculture hit the headlines in 1962 with scandals, farm strikes, battles over farm legislation and government efforts to shuttle down costly crop and dairy surpluses.

The scandals revolved around Billie Sol Estes, West Texas financier convicted by a Texas court of alleged fraud, and his relations with the agriculture department under its big cotton production and grain storage programs. These relations touched off congressional investigations.

The farm strikes resulted from efforts of the National Farmers Organization, a relatively new farm group centred largely in the midwest, to have processors and buyers pay higher prices for meat animals and grains.

The battles over farm legislation were waged in congress and, indirectly, in congressional elections. The Kennedy administration sought to get new legislation authorizing tighter production controls on such big surpluses as wheat, feed grains and dairy products.

GOOD GIVEN AWAY

Government efforts to reduce these surpluses involved stepped-up contributions to the needy at home and abroad, and efforts of payments to farmers for reducing plantings of grains.

In terms of income, 1962 matched 1961 with farm operators getting an estimated $12,800,000,000 after paying production costs. This was the highest net income since 1953 when it totalled $13,800,000,000.

Little change from 1962 was forecast for 1963. However, the average income per capita for the farm population averaged a little higher in 1962 than in 1961, reflecting a further decrease in the number of farms and in the farm population.

The farm strike had a temporary effect of holding down on marketings of livestock and a temporary increase in prices in some markets. But farm leaders generally agreed that it had no lasting effect on the market situation.

Farm prices for the year as a whole averaged about two per cent above last year. But the volume of farm marketings was below last year.

LAW RULED INVALID

NEW YORK (AP)—The appellate division of the state Supreme Court declared Tuesday that New York City's minimum wage law is invalid. The law would have set a minimum hourly wage of $1.25, advancing to $1.50 next year. State minimum wage legislation preempts the area, the court ruled.

Have Not Skills To Make Skybolt Work--Kennedy

Final Decision Awaits Talks With Macmillan

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Kennedy says engineering required to make the Skybolt work is of a kind that has been "beyond us." But he is sure Britain will play a significant role as a nuclear power even if the ballistic missile is scrapped.

Emphasizing that no final decision on this 1,000-mile-range bomber weapon will be taken until he meets with Prime Minister Macmillan in the Bahamas next week, Kennedy made clear Wednesday he doesn't think there is much point in continuing development of the Skybolt which failed its first five tests. Britain is depending heavily on the Skybolt to extend the life of the British bomber force.

"The problem with the Skybolt is that it is the most sophisticated weapon imaginable," Kennedy told a press conference. "To fire a missile from a plane moving at high speed to hit a target 1,000 miles away requires the most advanced engineering and, of course, it has been reliably, in a number of tests, engineering that's been beyond us."

The U.S. has put $500,000,000 into development of the Skybolt and completion of the system as well as acquisition of the weapons would cost about $2,500,000,000. What is at projects competing for the American budget, Kennedy questioned whether the project is worth the money. But he will wait to hear from Macmillan before making a final decision.

Without the Skybolt, Britain's nuclear strike power will be vastly reduced. But with the rapid expansion of its own nuclear missile strength, the U.S. now is reported to have concluded Britain's nuclear capabilities no longer are essential as a strategic deterrent against Russia.

Kennedy said also the U.S. will issue new regulations within two weeks to discourage the flow of international commercial shipping to Cuba. At the same time the U.S. will maintain daily surveillance to make sure no more missiles are introduced on that island.

That was in Kennedy's initial response to Soviet Premier

Popcorn Now Sold in Khyber Pass But Old Battle Fever Revives

KHYBER PASS, Pakistan (AP)—The clang of ancient battle seems to echo still from the limestone cliffs of this historic invasion route where Alexander the Great's soldiers marched into India and generations of British troops fought the Pathan tribesmen.

But now you can drive comfortably through the Khyber Pass in a taxi and buy a pomegranate at the mouth of Abraham Lincoln or a bag of fresh popcorn on the way.

Under the colorfully calm exterior, however, tribal passions still boil, and the pass is once again a point of tension.

Cut through great brown shale and limestone walls, the Khyber is the only road between Kabul and Afghanistan across the towering Hindu Kush range. Over the centuries foreign invaders have used it to conquer India—Persians, Tartars, Moguls and Persians.

The Khyber is a restricted area, administered by tribal area -still. Visitors need a special pass from the Pakistan governor.

The political trouble that swirls around the pass today is between Pakistan and Afghanistan and Afghanistan broke off diplomatic relations 15 months ago when Kabul government was first accused of fomenting strife and subversion among tribesmen in the frontier area.

Afghanistan traditionally brought its imports through Pakistan and shipped them through the Khyber Pass. It stopped when the dispute arose. Pakistan lost a lucrative transport business but Afghanistan may have cut off its nose to spite its face.

Now the country has no practical way of importing anything. Some goods still come through the Soviet Union or follow an almost prohibitively expensive roundabout route through Iran.

The United States has virtually suspended aid since materials cannot be brought in.

ATLANTIC BILL CALLED ANEMIC BY SENATOR

Passes Commons After Long Debate

OTTAWA (CP) — An opposition senator, taking up where House of Commons critics left off, said Wednesday the government's Canada-Atlantic Development Board is suffering from "pernicious anemia."

The bill, being shepherded through the upper chamber by Senator Frank C. Welch (PC—Nova Scotia), received first reading late in the day after the Commons ended lengthy discussions with unanimous approval on third reading.

Senator Harold Connolly (L—Nova Scotia) took the general tenure of Commons objections to the bill when he said it was inadequate. He was to continue his remarks today.

Before the 18-clause bill left the Commons, Allan J. MacEachen (L — Inverness - Richmond) attempted to introduce a last-minute amendment at third reading that would have thrown the measure back to the committee stage.

WOULD AMEND

He proposed an amendment that would have the act to provide an annual list of proposed capital projects designed to enlarge the basic economy of the Atlantic region.

The amendment was meant to offset criticism that the "fundamental weakness of this legislation" which provided for a "purely promotional service . . . give advice, said Mr. MacEachen.

When Speaker Marcel Lambert ruled the amendment out of order on the grounds it was either redundant or outside the scope of the bill, a procedural wrangle ensued and Mr. Mac-

J. W. Pickersgill (L—Bonavista-Twillingate) said somebody one is posing as secretary of the Atlantic Development Board, an agency still before Parliament.

The Commons later gave final approval to the bill setting up the board and sent it on to the Senate, where it received first reading at that stage.

Allan J. MacEachen (L—Inverness - Richmond) moved an amendment to the Atlantic Board bill which Speaker Marcel Lambert ruled out of order.

When the Liberal MP appealed the ruling, Speaker Lambert was upheld 113 to 90, Conservatives and Social Creditors voting with the chair.

John Davis (L—Coast-Capilano) called for scrapping of the Columbia River Power Development treaty and a new approach to the issue.

H. A. Olson (SC—Medicine Hat) said the present Atlantic Provinces Economic Council is able to do all that the proposed Atlantic board would.

Survival Chief Says Mobile Columns Geared for Rescue

OTTAWA (CP)—Maj.-Gen. A. E. Wrinch, chief of the army's national survival operations, says mobile columns would rescue hundreds of thousands of persons in event of a nuclear bombardment of Canada.

He declined in an interview to give a figure in this regard because there would be so many imponderables and variables in such a disaster. But he said the army now is capable of rescuing more than three and four times as many persons as it was three years ago.

Gen. Wrinch said most of the planned 210 mobile survival columns have been organized—there are some 700 soldier-civilian-militiamen and civilians in each column—and that nearly all the equipment for them has been delivered.

Asked what the army has achieved in the field of national survival for its expenditures of some $120,000,000 for this purpose since September, 1959, Gen. Wrinch listed:

1. A "good" warning system across the country.

2. Establishment of some 2,000 fallout monitoring posts and a 47-station nuclear detonation and fallout reporting system.

3. A widespread communications system, including buildings and radio equipment. Construction of six regional emer-

Kennedy Tries to Put Stop To Stevenson Controversy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy tried again to close the book on the Adlai Stevenson chapter in the Cuban crisis. He said it should be left to history "when the whole record will be spread out in great detail."

But he said he thought that after having read various statements of the last 10 days "any historian reading this record later should be left to historians —who walks through this mine field of charges and countercharges, should proceed with some care."

The president in his press conference Wednesday again endorsed the UN ambassador saying:

"The fact of the matter is that Governor Stevenson renders very distinguished service. . . . He has done an excellent job at the United Nations."

But the president left up in the air who in the administration might have given any reporters information portraying Stevenson as urging appeasement during Cuba's cabinet meetings of the National Security Council's executive committee.

NO COMMENT

The president said "it is my judgment that this statement or interpretation of Governor Stevenson's position did not come from a member of the National Security Council. I would not like to tell on that. I never heard any one characterize Stevenson's position in that way and I am satisfied myself that no one did."

Kennedy was asked: "You don't know, then, who leaked

Jury Attaches No Blame In Shooting

KINGSTON (CP) — A coroner's jury Wednesday night attached no blame in the shooting death of Mrs. Lillian Usher, 39, but recommended a $100 fine for anyone found with a loaded gun in their car's glove compartment.

The jury was told by witnesses that Mrs. Usher dropped a shotgun she had borrowed from a friend and it discharged.

Mrs. Usher is survived by her husband, Keith Usher, an associate professor of geology at Queen's University, and four children between the ages of six and 12.

GROMYKO LAUDS 'CALMER, SOBER' U.S. ATTITUDE

Way Seems Open For Co-operation

MOSCOW — Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko today praised the "calmer and more sober" approach by Washington to international issues and said the way appears to be clear for Soviet-American co-operation.

Gromyko was speaking at a session of the Supreme Soviet (Parliament) that has been marked by attacks on Communist China and its Balkan ally Albania.

Gromyko told the Soviet deputies a "restrained and sober approach" has gained the upper hand in Washington even though there are "many and big" setbacks relapses into "extreme aggressiveness."

Russia, he said no longer sees any unsurmountable obstacles to Soviet - American co - operation, provided the Americans want it.

Turning to Cuba, Gromyko sought to answer American charges that he personally misled President Kennedy and State Secretary Dean Rusk about the Soviet missile buildup on the island.

Gromyko said he assured Kennedy and Rusk there were no Soviet offensive weapons in Cuba. But he did not tell the American leaders about Soviet rockets on the island because "they did not ask us." In any event, he said the rockets came under the category of defensive weapons "as Mr. Khrushchev pointed out yesterday."

NO COMMITMENT

Gromyko said the Soviet Union would like to negotiate a settlement on Berlin problems but left in setting no deadline for the agreement.

Gromyko said the Supreme Soviet, in the presence of Premier Khrushchev and President Voroshilov, that the Soviet Union is prepared to continue an exchange of opinions

'Historic Turning Point' in Red Relations

K Declares Ideological War on China

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Khrushchev declared war today on the ideological views of Communist China and Albania and pledged to fight his peace with his old enemy in the Communist camp, Yugoslav President Tito.

In an open attack on anti-Soviet Wednesday, Khrushchev told the Soviet people for the first time the details of his feud with the dissenting Chinese and Albanians.

A neutralist diplomat called the speech "a historic turning point" in Moscow-Peking rivalry.

Khrushchev declared that dogmatism, a Communist synonym for the extreme views of the Chinese, had become just as dangerous as revisionism, a word applied to such independent Communist thinking such as Yugoslavia's.

He swore that, from now on, "Soviet Communists cannot be brought in.

there is nothing higher than loyalty of the ranks of the world Communist movement, will fight resolutely against both right-wing and left-wing opportunism, which today is no less dangerous than revisionism."

In an open affront to the anti-Tiloist Chinese and Albanians, Khrushchev declared Soviet friendship for Yugoslavia's Communists.

He never an approving nod from Tito, seated behind him on the stage, and loud applause from the deputies of the Supreme Soviet.

Khrushchev blamed Stalin for the differences that led to Yugoslavia's expulsion from the Communist camp in 1948.

But Yugoslav comrades were not wholly blameless," he added.

"There are still serious divergencies on a number of ideolo-

Robarts Promises Solution To Alleged Inequities In School Financing

Premier Offered Differing Advice From Anglican, Catholic Bishops

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Robarts, offered differing advice Wednesday from two churchmen on how to correct alleged inequities in Ontario's system of school financing, has promised the province's solution will soon be found.

The advice was given in two briefs, one Wednesday from the Anglican bishops of Ontario and the other Tuesday night from the Ontario Separate School Trustees' Association and the Association of Bilingual School Commissions.

The Anglican brief rejected an earlier plea from the province's Roman Catholic bishops that separate schools be given a larger share of corporation property taxes.

The brief said this request and one for extension of the taxsupported separate school situation to secondary schools "would cause a violent disruption of the public and secondary school system and do a definite disservice to the community as a whole."

ASKS THROUGH GRANTS

Rt. Rev. H. R. Hunt, Suffragan Bishop of Toronto and one of four bishops who briefly presented the brief to the premier, said later that any inequity in the financing should be corrected through provincial grants.

"If corporation tax were deflected in a greater manner than at the present time, then it would cause a dislocation to the public school system."

Coincidentally, the brief from the separate school trustees involved a departure from earlier demands for reapportionment of the corporation taxes.

Instead, the trustees proposed a "reasonable" share of financing similar to systems in force in Nova Scotia and Alberta and plans advocated by Ontario's Liberal and New Democratic parties.

The separate school trustees in their brief said the financial situation in the public system is serious. They suggested no deadline for remedial action, however.

"Unless a radical change is made in the financial structure of educational costs in this province, and made in the immediate future, we shall be

NATO Meeting Will Be Held In Ottawa

PARIS (AP)—Ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization will meet in Ottawa in May in addition to hold their regular spring meeting in Ottawa.

No date has been fixed, but is to be announced before the current ministerial session ends Saturday.

External Affairs Minister Green offered the Can-dian site at the opening meeting of the annual review.

RAF Jets Stop Lynching In Sarawak

SERIA, Brunei (CP-Reuters)—Quicker than in a TV western, the RAF came to the rescue of a British government official.

Four RAF Hawker Hunter fighter planes swooped down over Limbang just as the rebels were about to lynch the chief British government official in Sarawak — Richard Morris, an Australian-senior RAF sources said.

The sources said the rebel saw the jets "at the stage of looking for a tree to hang Mr. Morris from."

"However, they scattered, and took off and Mr. Morris was left with the rope still around his neck," they said.

Toronto Woman Made to Watch Fatal Stabbing

TORONTO (CP) — Raymond Spatz, 32-year-old unemployed warehouse worker was charged with non-capital murder today after police followed his hysterical wife to their home.

Mrs. Doreen Spatz, 34, bleeding from a knife slash across her mouth, ran into the Fape Ave. police station screaming:

"Help, there's going to be a murder."

Police raced to the apartment in the near, two-storey Riverdale Ave. home to find Jean Fournier, 46, dead on the living room floor with a single stab wound in his chest.

Detectives Louis Thain and James Cochrane said Mrs. Spatz was dragged from the room, locked with a knife and forced to watch Fournier being stabbed.

The woman ran out of the house, flagged a motorist and was taken to police.

"She was covered with blood and holding a towel over her face when she arrived," said sergeant Gordon Burgon. "She mentioned a man going berserk with a knife."

Mr. and Mrs. Spatz and Fournier, an unemployed short order cook, had lived together in the single bedroom apartment since September.

Police said the three started drinking Wednesday afternoon and an argument started after midnight.

Mass of Arctic Air Envelops Entire Eastern Half of States

CHICAGO (AP) — A huge mass of Arctic air enveloped the entire eastern half of the United States today. The dam-aging and tragic effects of the prolonged late autumn cold wave and snowstorm mounted.

The unseasonably cold weather persisted from the northern borders deep into the southland, causing inconvenience and hardship.

Damage to property and to vegetable crops in Florida was estimated in the millions of dollars. The continued cold threatened the multi-million dollar citrus crop in Florida's southern counties.

Deaths in connection with the severe wintry-type weather in the eastern section of the nation's 100 mark—with some estimates as high as 150.

The biting cold air dropped temperatures to record low levels for the season and for the date in many areas. The southland was especially hard hit by the icy blasts.

The mercury plunged to 11 below zero in Crossville, in eastern Tennessee. Temperatures along the coast dipped to the middle teens. Readings of zero were reported in north Georgia and in mountain areas of Alabama. Three persons, including several children, died in fires in Georgia.

More snow fell in the snow-clogged sections of the northeast and strong winds added to the mountainous drifts. Colder weather swept into the main snowbelt which covered areas along the south and north shores of the Great Lakes in Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York. Deep drifts ranged up to from 20 to 48 inches after a week of steady snow.

LIMELITERS DIMMED

POVRO, Utah (AP) — The three members of the Limeliters singing group and three other persons were injured Wednesday night when their chartered plane crashed in a field about one mile from the Provo airport. Lieutenant Alec Hazeley, 30, who suffered a cracked rib, said: "No one knows what happened." The pilot said the altimeter said we were still 800 feet above the field before we crashed."

REHABILITATION SERVICES GET MUCH CRITICISM

Estimates Passed In Night Session

TORONTO (CP)—Estimates for the provincial reform institutions department were passed Wednesday night, the first night sitting of the Ontario legislature this session. The passage came after seven hours of debate.

The estimates of $19,708,000 were up from last year's' figure of $18,230,000.

Both Liberal and New Democratic Party members criticized the department's work and its minister for the last year, Wilfrid Hamilton Hackett. Most of the criticism was directed at the department's rehabilitation' services.

Ray Edwards (L—Wentworth) said the salary range for social workers in the department was not high enough to handle treatment of the more than 9,000 prisoners a year.

Mr. Haskett said the department GIVES SALARY RANGE

ment has 12 full-time social workers, but Mr. Edwards said a social worker should not have to handle 200 inmates at a time and 750 inmates in a year. He said higher salaries would attract more workers and perhaps prevent inmates from returning to jail a second time.

He said cost of maintaining a prisoner for a year was $2,000. Mr. Haskett told him the salary for a social worker starts at $5,000 to $8,200 a year.

Donald C. MacDonald, NDP leader, said the government was being "penny wise and pound foolish" in relation of grants to voluntary organizations such as the John Howard Society and the Elizabeth Fry Society.

Mr. MacDonald said the grants of $15,000 to the former society and $10,500 to the latter were the same as for last year and the year before.

He said these organizations were doing rehabilitation work among prisoners that some-

Dog Retrieves Drowned Deer From Icy Lake

This dog helped itself to venison from the refrigerator in a big way—and got away with it.

The dog is a fine Labrador Retriever owned by Conservation officer Jack Thibadeau of Lands and Forests.

The refrigerator is a lake near Plevna.

Unfortunately for them, a buck 1½ years of age and a 6½-year-old doe misjudged the atmosphere of the "frig."

Mother Nature had partly defrosted the northern "icebox" and when the deer ventured on the treacherous surface they were submerged in icy water.

Officer Thibadeau saw the deer carcasses floating in the ice-skimmed water a hundred feet off shore.

Getting a boat was out of the question so he decided to try out his dog, an excellently trained animal.

The retriever, a bit reticent at first over taking an icy chilled swim, plunged into the water, swam to one deer and dragged it to shore. It repeated the feat and brought the other in.

What prompted the deer to venture on the ice is not known, but Officer Thibadeau is mighty proud of the family retriever.

WHEAT BIN BURSTS

ELMONT, Ken. (AP) — A large metal grain storage bin at Elmont burst in frigid weather Tuesday, spilling 900,000 bushels of wheat valued at $2,625,000. Total damage was estimated at $400,000.

Residential Areas Become Kaleidoscope of Color

With Christmas now less than two weeks away, displays of colored lights marking the festive Yuletide season, are again appearing in all parts of the city.

The downtown merchants were the first to get the colored lights spirit and about two weeks ago strings of colorful lights, sparkling aluminum foil, and lighted Christmas bells appeared in the downtown areas.

But since then the residential areas have followed suit and most streets have now become a kaleidoscope of color emphasizing the Christmas season.

In recent years outdoor Christmas lighting has become increasingly popular and in the residential districts seems even more pronounced this year.

Almost solid lines of outlined porch roofs, doorways, eaves and roof gables, appear on some streets as residents vie with one another in dreaming up the most attractive displays.

In addition to the lights varied Christmas displays, including the ever-popular rooftop Santa and his reindeer, all go to remind that Christmas is just a dozen days away.

BCI Glee Club Will Present Musicale

The Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School Glee Club, Sunday afternoon, Dec. 16th, will present its Christmas musicale in the school auritorium.

This year, Mr. Clifford Templer assisted by Ronald Robertson, will direct the 70-voice Glee Club in "The Child of Bethlehem", a Christmas cantata arranged by Louise Stairs. Three members of the Glee Club, Lillian Vincent, Barbara Belch and Wayne Sobis will be heard in solo parts. The hour-long program will begin with an impressive candlelight service at 2:30 p.m.

The B.C.I.V.S. Glee Club presented its first Christmas musicale six years ago and with two exceptions has since been an annual event. This year, the staff and students of the school again extend a cordial invitation to the general public to share with them in their musical presentation of the Christmas theme.

Final Session Of Ladies' Day Out Held

The final 1962 session of the popular "Ladies' Day Out" program was held at the Y.M.C.A. this past Tuesday, Mrs. Margaret Baker, assistant chief operator for Bell Telephone, was the guest speaker for the afternoon.

She discussed the importance of the sound of one's voice over the telephone. It is just as important to have a pleasant voice and courteous manner over the phone as it is to have a neat appearance and good grooming, when meeting people.

Practice and proper concentration can be used to good advantage to groom one's voice, suggested the speaker.

The morning session included the usual dramatics group program and recreational swimming.

It is anticipated that a spring session will be held.

Bilingual Santa To Be Here Sunday

As for the last few years, the members of the local French-Canadian "Club les Marquette" will entertain their friends on Sunday, December 16, at a Christmas party held in the Columbus Hall, 397 Front St. from 2.30 p.m. on. A bilingual Santa Claus will be available and distribute souvenirs to all the young ones. Everyone interested in the district is invited to join in celebrating the old custom. The party will be run by a short play presented by the students of the French classes inaugurated this fall by the club. Admission is free.

Heavy Drifting At Wellington, Cold in North

The weather followed its traditional design in the Quinte district this morning.

In the Picton-Wallington area snow squalls blew in from Lake Ontario, blanketing the southern reaches of the county. At the northern end of the district, the Bancroft area recorded the lowest temperatures. Belleville, by and large had the extremes had it cold, with only a threat of snow up to noon.

The snow fallout drifted in across Prince Edward about 10.30 a.m. By noon, reports from Wellington said it had drifted up to six inches in parts of the village. Traffic was slowed on local highways and county roads, but no serious accidents were reported.

Temperatures continued to skate in sub-zero zones through the night. Once again, the mercury reached its lowest point in the Bancroft area. One reading taken by the Department of Lands and Forests, recorded a low of 17 below.

At Trenton, where the high reached yesterday afternoon was 11 above, the thermometer registered an overnight low of four below. In the Gilmour area, Lands and Forests records showed the mercury dipping as low as 12 below.

In Belleville, the overnight low was seven above. Skies were overcast today and there were a few brief snow flurries—blown over from the Prince Edward storm.

With the cold spell, lakes in the northern end of the district are starting to freeze over. However, say Lands and Forests officials, the public is warned against trusting the ice surfaces. None of them is yet safe for crossing.

Soldier Warned To Meet Terms Of Sentence

Purchase of car tires by rubber cheque brought a Kingston soldier into magistrate's court in Belleville this morning.

Pte. D. C. Clare, stationed with the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps at Kingston, pleaded guilty to false pretences, was given a year's suspended sentence and ordered to make good the cheque.

OPP Constable Jack Fullerton told magistrate T. Y. Wills the soldier purchased two tires and tubes for $36 from the East End Sussex station near Trenton. The cheque tendered the station operator was returned by the bank. At the time, Clare had 57 cents in his account.

Clare told the magistrate he expected to be out of the army by the year's end, when he also promised to make restitution.

The magistrate warned the soldier to meet the terms of his sentence.

If you fail to carry that out you can be arrested for breach of recognizance . . . and that applies anywhere in Canada."

H. Hamilton Again Heads Plowmen's Body

Harleigh Hamilton of Sidney township was re-elected president of the Hastings County Plowmen's Association at the first annual meeting held recently.

Also re-elected were Earl Sager of Madoc township and Harry Coulter of Tweed, as vice-presidents. Dr. Russell J. Scott of Belleville remains as honorary president.

Reviewing the year's activities, Mr. Hamilton noted the Association had been formed in June of this year with the main activity being the staging of the county plowing match held in September at Hydro on the farm of Ed Sexsmith. Prior to the match three coaching classes were arranged in the county with Win Timbers of Stouffville as the coach.

Mr. Hamilton expressed pleasure that implement dealers had taken interest in the match by having displays and demonstrations.

SET MATCH DATE

The Association also sponsored a county plow team to the International Plowing Match at Owen Sound. Team members Robert Hamilton and David Hamilton, Ameliasburg showing and learned much from their experience.

The date for the 1963 county match has been tentatively set for September 25th.

The directors elected were: R. Tracey Adams, L'Amable; Gordon Card, Bancroft, R.R. 1; Russell Abbott, Belleville; Farley Vermilyea, Belleville, R.R. 5; and Malcolm Wilson, Coe Hill.

The honorary directors will be: The Warden of Hastings County and the chairman of the agricultural committee.

Norm Hardwick New President Of Legion Post

The regular monthly meeting of Branch 99 Royal Canadian Legion was held on Tuesday evening with the president, Les Digby in the chair. The highlight of the evening was the election of officers for 1963.

Chairman for the election was Zone F3 secretary Jack Rashotte. The officers elected were as follows: president — Norm Hardwick; 1st vice-president — Bob White; 2nd vice-president — Bud Walters; treasurer — Joe Ellard; padres — Protestant, Bram Humphreys; Roman Catholic, Reverend Maurice Imboff; sgt. at arms — Scotty Brooks; executive members — Dick Kirby, Frank Daniels, Ed Smith, Fred Hodge, Joe Seames.

There were contests for only two positions, those of 2nd vice-president and sgt. at arms, all other offices were filled by acclamation. The new officers will be installed on January 8th, at the next meeting, by District Commander Al. Bragg of Picketing.

The various committee reports showed that that Branch had made considerable progress during the year.

Three new members were initiated into membership in the branch.

The Legion children's Christmas party for members' children will be held on Saturday afternoon when Santa is due to be in attendance. Also on Saturday afternoon the Legion sponsored film show "The Great Commandment" will be held in Moira Secondary School. This show is open to children only. Tickets for this show have already been donated by local business houses. There are three showings of this film at 12 noon, 2 p.m. and 4 p.m.

Entertainment chairman Fred Davis reported that the Saturday night dance for December 21st would be cancelled as the hall has been rented for a private party on that occasion.

Order Youths To Re-tin Milk Cans Stolen

Three Wellington district teenagers have been ordered to re-tin a farmer's milk cans as part of their sentences on charges of pilfering in Hillier township.

Pleading guilty before magistrate T. Y. Wills at Picton were Laverne Brown, R.R. 1 Hillier, Melvin Sanderson, R.R. 1 Wellington, and Wayne Craig, R.R. 1 Hillier, all 18.

Magistrate T. Y. Wills placed them on two years suspended sentence.

They were arrested by police chief Earl Marvin after theft of 50 gallons of gas from Arthur Clarke and milk cans from his neighbor at R.R. 1 Wellington, John Van Haarlem.

The magistrate ordered the youths to pay restitution for the gas and the costs of re-tining three milk cans.

437 Are Admitted To Hospital in Month

TRENTON — During the month of November there were 437 adults and children admitted and 432 discharged at Trenton Memorial Hospital. Eighty new entries came into the world.

There were 337 emergency cases handled and 751 out-patients cared for.

In the operating room 64 major surgical operations took place and 111 minor operations.

The average daily population of adults and children came to 112.3 and of newborn infants 16.6. There were 15 deaths during the month, five of which involved newborn infants.

Sidney Ratepayers, Officials Oppose Annexation at Meet

TRENTON — The public hearing into Trenton's application for the annexation of 180 acres of Sidney Township land, adjacent to the town's eastern border, was continued in Trenton Wednesday. This was the second session of the hearing, before Ontario Municipal Board representatives H. E. Roberts, chairman, and A. L. McCrae. The first was held on Oct. 24.

Last time, the hearing had been set up in the council chambers at the municipal offices. Due to an overflow of spectators, the meeting was adjourned, kit and kaboodle, to the town hall, over the police station. This time, Trenton's municipal heads anticipated public interest and called the meeting in the town hall.

John Weir, a Toronto lawyer, employed by the town to cope with annexation problems, told the court that Trenton and Murray township councils had come to an amicable agreement to push the western boundary of the proposed annexation in Murray township further to the west, in order to take in whole properties and forestall division of individual properties. A surveyor's description of the change will be presented to the OMB at a later date.

The OMB chairman, Mr. Roberts, corrected an oversight and called upon Alfred Vaughan, president of the Trenton Ratepayers' Association to present the ratepayers' views on annexation. Mr. Vaughan had been prepared to speak at last Oct. 24 meeting, but had not been called.

"The ratepayers," said Mr. Vaughan, "considered the town was in no position to take on more responsibility in the form of extra land when it couldn't even provide water and sewer services to parts of the present town. Mr. Vaughan named specifically the area in which he lives — the Bay - Flindall St. area.

TANKS POLLUTED

He said that septic tanks were used in this area and that since the land was "shallow" in this area, it was becoming polluted.

Mr. Vaughan said that he understood the town wanted more land in Murray for residential growth. "What the town didn't need," said Mr. Vaughn "was more residential land." "What it did need," he said, "was more industries."

Mr. Vaughan said that the ratepayers were afraid that the addition of more land, and the subsequent increase of flow into sewers and the sanitary disposal plant, would result in the town having to build another sewage plant.

Mr. Weir, in rebuttal, tried to fix the exact paid up membership of the Trenton Ratepayers' Association, but Mr. Vaughan couldn't fix the exact number, except that he said he thought it was around 150.

Alan Sprague Q.C., representing Sidney, took a considerable interest in Mr. Vaughan's reference to "polluted" ground and backed-up septic tank systems.

"Does the local MOH know about these conditions?" asked Mr. Sprague.

"I think so," said Mr. Vaughan.

"Well, would you say that he is being remiss in his duty if he isn't doing something about it?" asked the lawyer.

"If he knows about it, he's neglecting his duty," conceded Mr. Vaughan.

George Crawford, a consulting engineer with the firm of Gore and Storrie, told the OMB judges that the town had adequate water and sewer services to serve the town itself and the annexed areas. He said that these systems were being extended throughout the town by plan and admitted that while the present sewage plant now served around 10,000 persons, it would have to be extended to serve 15,000 persons. This the town and the Ontario Water Resources Commission planned to do, he said.

TOLD OF SERVICES

Mr. Crawford said that he had taken a walk along the shore in the Sidney township area under consideration for annexation, and that he had seen two pipes, leading from a motel and a trailer camp, discharging what he judged to be raw sewage into the bay.

Byron Harder, clerk of Sidney township, told the court of existing services in the area proposed for annexation. He said that the area was policed by OPP from Belleville; received fire protection from Belleville and under the Mutual Aid and would soon be served with recently purchased township fire fighting equipment, (based at Batawa and manned by volunteers.)

Under questioning, Mr. Harder said that the township had a land use and building by-law, modelled on that of Thurlow township. This by-law had yet to receive OMB approval, said Mr. Harder. The OMB officials took a decided interest in this by-law and finally Mr. Harder came up with the information that the by-law had been sent to the Department of Municipal Affairs, and not to the OMB for approval.

Mr. Harder told Mr. Weir that he believed that there was a large septic tank at the trailer camp mentioned by Mr. Crawford, although he said he didn't know exactly where it was.

Harleigh Hamilton, reeve of Sidney, also confessed ignorance about the exact location of the septic tank but he said that he felt certain it was there.

Mr. Walter Richards, chairman of the Sidney Township Ratepayers' Association (no relation to the Trenton Ratepayers' Association, said Mr. Hamilton), presented a petition, against annexation, signed, he said, by all but five of the property owners in the part of the township under consideration for annexation. Sum total of signatures was 22.

Mr. Richards said that he personally opposed annexation because he felt the only thing the new Sidney residents would get out of it was higher taxes. He said that he felt there wouldn't be the same good bus service provided for school children from the area, should it be annexed. Mr. Richards said that he hadn't told the petition signers of his theory in connection with the bus service before asking them to sign. But he said he had only taken the petition to two homes, Mr. Keith Gainforth, who had taken the petition around to the rest of the signers, also denied telling them about the possible lack of bus service for their children, should the area be annexed.

S/L D. E. Allison, senior construction engineering officer at RCAF Station Trenton, told the court that part of the land under consideration for annexation, was DND land and had been earmarked for future DND housing construction. Mr. Weir remarked that he had tried, in vain, to find out the proposed land use from air force headquarters, and intimated that he was pleased to have this information.

Following further evidence from Sidney township ratepayers, the court was adjourned at 3:10 p.m. and will be resumed at 1 p.m. today.

13 Tons of Christmas Cheer Flown to West New Guinea

TRENTON — This year's Christmas support flight of Canadians serving in the Far East was carried out by a Hercules aircraft and crew from 435 Air Transport Squadron based at Namao, Alberta.

The big, four-engined, turboprop transport, one of four such aircraft in service with the RCAF, carried a load of over 13 tons out of Trenton to Biak and Saigon.

The load, made up of supplies, equipment and Christmas mail, included a pair of Otter floats and 15 pounds of Christmas cake.

Officers and men of the RCAF's Air Transport Command fly and maintain two amphibious Otter aircraft at Biak, West New Guinea, for the United Nations Security Force. In addition, Wing Commander Ralph G. Herbert of Kelowna, B.C., serves as Air Adviser to the Commander, UN Forces, West New Guinea, with headquarters in Hollandia.

The aircraft staged to Biak via Edmonton, Anchorage and Cold Bay Alaska; Midway and Wake Islands in the Pacific. The flight to Biak covered nearly 10,000 statute air miles and took the aircraft and her crew across 5,000 miles of Pacific Ocean.

After unloading the 116 Air Transport Unit material at Biak, crew and aircraft proceeded to Saigon via Manila in the Philippines. Here, Canadian army troops waited in 96 degree temperatures for a "little bit or home," the big Royal Canadian Air Force Hercules aircraft, and, of course, her cargo.

After a four-hour stop at the Saigon airport, crew and aircraft flew back to Namao via Tokyo, Japan, and Elmendorf in Alaska, with over 8,000 pounds of retrograde supplies and mail from Biak and Saigon. Away from their home base at Namao, near Edmonton, for ten days, the crew, during that time, had flown more than 20,280 nautical miles to make sure Canadian military men serving in far away places would have a "Happy Christmas."

A Disturbing Story

A London Daily Express commentator says fear is mounting in the British defence ministry that the U.S. is seeking to obtain political control of the RAF H-bomb force.

If these fears have the slightest justification in fact, the development is most sinister.

There is disturbing circumstantial evidence that the story may not be cut from the whole cloth.

For instance, there is Dean Acheson's recent reference to Britain as having lost its former role in world affairs and having so far failed to find a new role. There is the secretary of State Dean Rusk's failure to hand Acheson even a mild rebuke when asked to comment. This attempt to downgrade Britain has been interpreted as an effort to push Britain into the Common Market—but it would also be consistent with any desire to gain control of Britain's nuclear deterrent force.

Commenting on Acheson's speech the other day, we said the fact Britain was no longer a first-class power had long been obvious to any intelligent observer. If any reader thought this too harsh a judgment, let him consider the ultimatum which the Daily Express commentator says may be handed Britain: "Either hand over political control of the British H-bomb force to the U.S. or we will cancel the Douglas Skybolt missile on which the RAF depends and you will have no deterrent force at all."

Imagine, in the days of Pax Britannica, the Royal Navy's firepower depending on guns designed and supplied by a foreign power!

But the really vital question here is what reason the U.S. could have for desiring to acquire control of Britain's V-bomber force.

There is only one reason which would not provide grave grounds for misgiving. That would be a desire to reduce by one the number of countries able to start a nuclear war. But any fear that Britain might press the button against the wishes of the U.S. is utterly preposterous. As was observed in our editorial on Acheson, one of the reasons why Britain is today a second-class power despite the possession of nuclear arms is that the temper of its people would likely make it impossible for the government to use this power except as a dying gesture of defiance.

It follows that the only reason why the U.S. would want to win control of Britain's nuclear force is because the U.S. fears Britain itself would be reluctant to use it, or to threaten to use it.

Recently we said that the world was a safer place today than before the Cuban crisis, because Khrushchev had proof of President Kennedy's readiness to act forcefully in an emergency. Therefore, we argued, Russia would not inadvertently push the U.S. into a nuclear war.

About the same time several other newspapers took the contrary view, holding that the success of Kennedy's firm stand had greatly strengthened the hand of those in the U.S. favoring an adamant refusal to give an inch to Russia's demands. The labelling of Adlai Stevenson, U.S. ambassador to the UN, as a virtual "appeaser" in an article in The Saturday Evening Post lends support to this view. We had mentioned the danger but, we fear, had underestimated it.

As Stevenson said, in denying the Post's assertions, if the day dawns when the U.S. turns its back on reasonable negotiations with Russia, the world will be in acute danger.

If anything develops which confirms the Daily Express story of a U.S. attempt to take over Britain's H-bomb force, the outlook will be black indeed.

Lack of Campaign Donations Postpones New Election

By RICHARD JACKSON
(from The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — What has happened to all the crystal ball gazers, political soothsayers and medicine men who only a few weeks ago were so sure Parliament would not last out the Throne Speech Debate — and that Diefenbaker, Pearson, Thompson, Douglas and Company would be out Christmas shopping around the country for votes?

This newspaper, and certainly its Ottawa column, were fortunately not among the crepe-hangers — and these, in the strange business of political prognostication were in the huge majority—who had this unhappy, uncertain, but definitely not uninteresting Parliament dead and all but buried in the October infancy.

Then, back in the sane and sensible opening weeks, the time element, the weather, the very unwillingness of the ordinary backbench MP to make the gamble, all seemed to conspire to rule out a snap, pre-Christmas election.

Since late October, the simple lack of the required time for organizing it, has made any quick go-for-broke campaign impossible.

But to those first touch-and-go weeks, there now seems to have been an even more compelling reason why the Conservative high command would not have hepped.

Money.

THE KING-MAKERS

Heard it explained, on a quick out-and-back jet-week-end West, by one of the nation's biggest political "moneymen" — one of those high-rolling, high-living hobby horses who have been politics, and who routinely pick up a hefty hunk of any Federal campaign kitty.

He does not do this in any mysterious behind-the-scenes of attempted to manipulate or even influence national politics, but rather as a sort of obligation, believing it to be the responsibility of everybody to interest themselves in public affairs as actively as they are able to afford.

Sat, then, in the glass-walled penthouse headquarters atop the tallest building in the West's biggest city and listened to this fellow explained men and greatest home-grown enterpriser between the Lakes and the Rockies explain why a pre-Christmas campaign never could have been in the cards.

"Little matter of money," he mused, swivel-chairing around to gaze out beyond the boundaries of the city to the oil fields and his resources empire. "You see, almost all campaign contributions in the end go back to corporate giving.

"Contributions are deductible, once every year or four years, and in exceptional and infrequent circumstances, perhaps two years in succession.

"But the Department of National Revenue, I feel certain, would never, in any event, stand still for two deductions in the same year.

"And BOTTOM 20 MILLION

"There already was a deduction being calculated by just about all corporate treasurers who would imagine, for contributions to the campaign last June.

"Another within six months, in the same year, was plainly impossible."

It has been estimated that the last election cost a hotly debated $20,000,000. Chief electoral Officer Nelson Castonguay puts his costs at $1.00 per vote, or $10,000,000.

And the four parties between them, easily went for another $10,000,000 — very probably more. And that would hardly take into account the sudden individual expenses which the candidates themselves must tap out in "instant money" from their own pockets without the public appetite or help from National Campaign Headquarters.

Every party gets a financial hand-up for a campaign. Business and industry assist the Conservatives. Liberals rely on just about equal measure, and, more recently, resurgent Social Credit, typically, on more orthodox "Western" wing.

Organized Labor chips in — but a CCF party, with its rank and file member contributes, almost on the basis and system of the check-off — for the New Democrats.

Passing the political pot is nothing more than personal participation in national politics, a good, helpful, democratic exercise.

The opportunity will come again — this next March or June — and there seems little doubt it will be 1963, it will be deductible for the big spenders.

Space programs come high, but at the higher things, as U.S. Vice-President Lyndon Johnson pointed out at a recent dinner in Washington. The nation's entire space program, he said, is costing less annually than the $5,000,000,000 it spends on face powder, lipstick and nail polish. Which is worth more? Frankly, we don't know.

Strictly Personal

To Be Truly First, One Must Be Kind

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices: Periods, like people, have their own overweening egos; and whenever one of moderns mention the "Dark Ages," we do not include our own — but it likely that a thousand years from now the barbarism of the 20th century will seem not far removed from the barbarism of the 10th.

An expert in any delicate fear never gets as much public applause as the second-rater, because the expert is humble enough to see how mastered the art of making the difficult look easy.

The superiority of classical music over the popular kind is not a cultural prejudice but an easily demonstrable experience — in that popular music quickly exhausts itself and must be replaced weekly or monthly, whereas one can listen to Mozart or Bach all one's life and still not exhaust its potentialities for giving pleasure. It is quite exactly the difference, indeed, between infatuation and genuine love.

People seem "ungrateful" only when we expect more gratitude than a person has any right to; those who bother to keep careful scores of favors and recompenses are always sure to feel themselves on the short end.

Small children prefer adults who are cool, dry, off-hand, humorous and unpatronizing; yet most adults approach them are warm, moist, intense, — and then wonder why the children are "shy" or "unresponsive" with them.

The man who puts himself on being "just" without considering whether he is also kind is deluding himself about his "justice" — for there is no possibility of giving others what is due to them if we are not willing to give them a little more than is their due, if necessary. Justice without kindness soon degenerates into an inhuman equation that contradicts its very intentions.

Of all the millions of words written on the state of marriage, the only sensible ones were penned by Samuel Butler, when he said: "Matrimony and bachelorhood are both of them at once equally wise and equally foolish."

It is the vanity of fearing that others might think one was not invited that prompts many persons to attend parties they might otherwise forego.

More people believe in religion than believe in God; they regard religion as a therapeutic process, and they hypostatize God as a kind of cosmic masseur.

Medicare Spreads Cost

Toronto Telegram

Political parties ambitious to unseat the Conservative Government of Premier Robarts in the next provincial election may be committed themselves to the principle of prepaid medical insurance.

Medicare is attractive vote bait. To many it means that in return for small monthly contributions they will be relieved of medical expenses if and when illness comes. Financially everybody would like that.

T. C. Douglas, MP, used it as a vote-getter when he was Premier of Saskatchewan and was seeking the position of National leader of the New Democratic Party. In using it as a political lure, he created a condition of chaos that was straightened out by his successor — a condition that left deep scars in the province and one of the most medical hands and brains.

The important lesson of the Saskatchewan experiment is that medicare should not be used for political ends. It is far too important. And it is far too complex and costly a proposal to be advanced recklessly. It is not something that can be promised today and delivered tomorrow.

It is not only misleading but mischievous for any political party to suggest that medicare would produce cut-rate medicine. The most it will do — and it is a desirable objective — is to spread the cost of medical care for everyone evenly over the whole mass of Ontario's earning population.

Premier Robarts appears ready to approve the project in a mature and intelligent way. While plans have not been worked out in detail, the Government apparently intends to use already existing insurance plans rather than set up its own elaborate and expensive machinery.

It is understood that a board would be appointed to set certain standards of price and treatment and to supervise the conduct of the participating organizations. In addition, provision would be made to provide medical service to families of marginal income as well as to the aged, indigent and in "disaster" cases such as arose from the sale of thalidomide.

It would also recognize the essential fact that, unlike the Saskatchewan plan, it would be based on the co-operation of members of the medical profession at each stage.

It is probable that a certain degree of compulsion would be involved in dealing with insurance of groups of more than fifteen persons.

The Government is bound to be more realistic in its approach to the medical issue than the parties seeking power. After all, the Government has implemented a hospital care insurance program that involves an expenditure of $150 million a year, which is a burden of which is borne by the premium-paying insured.

From experience with other plans, it is almost inevitable that the total cost of medical care rises under a state insurance system and that what are considered reasonable premiums cannot carry the weight of the extra burden taxpayer makes up the difference.

To Your Good Health

When to Tell Your Child the Important "Facts of Life"

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: When should parents tell their daughters the "facts of life"? I'm 13 and have not been told yet. What should I do? — M.C.

Good question, M.C. And a good, terse, sensible one.

By the age of 13, girls (or boys) have acquired some knowledge of the "facts of life." If they live in a city, on a farm, they know a lot of them.

However, the youngsters in cities, far in the majority, don't have that advantage. On the other hand, maybe they hear more (both correct and incorrect) from their schoolmates.

Now parents are sometimes quite a bit in the dark. (Believe me, I know what I'm talking about. I'm a parent, too!) We're never quite sure what our child-ren know or don't know. Nor do we know what they are curious about, unless they ask us.

There are all sorts of excuses. Some are too shy to talk much; some are too intent on hiding their ignorance by saying they can think of, regardless of whether the youngsters are ready for such information. And nearly all of us are afraid, frankly, that if we start talking about some of these things, our children will say, "Aw, Pop, (or, Gee, Mother) I already knew that!" We are apt to put off our discussions. Not that we are unwilling, but we don't want to sound like dopes.

We'd rather (I think this is true of most of us) have our youngsters ask specific questions whenever they are puzzled or curious. "What's a menstrual disease?" "Why is petting dangerous?" "What's wrong with going steady?" "How long does it take for the baby to grow before it is born?"

I recall, from some years back, a nice lady explaining (in the manner of her day) that the stork is going to bring you a baby brother." And I remember, with satisfaction, that the little girl, then about 3, tactfully whispered to her mother: "Shouldn't you tell Auntie that babies really grow in mamas' stomachs?"

If I were 13, I'd wait until one of my parents had a bit of spare time, and then ask something that I really wanted to know. I wouldn't say, "I'm old enough to know the facts of life," or anything like that. I'd ask some specific question, and the form of the question itself would be a pretty good indication of what I did and what I didn't know already.

Get it started, and from then on, it's easy.

At least, that's the way I hope I'd do it — if I were 13. I know for sure that that's the way I'd like the question to be brought to me. I don't want to bore my own youngsters. (Actually, mine are now well beyond their teens.) But I do want them to know anything I can tell them, any time they want to learn.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it true that three is the maximum number of children a woman should have by Caesarean? Should they be spaced at least three years apart? — Mrs. H.A.

There's no set rule about the "maximum" number or frequency. A couple of years between pregnancies is a good thing, but if a Cesarean is required, there is little choice.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is Tietze's syndrome? — Mrs.H.A.

It's a disorder of the joint where one of the upper ribs joins the breast bone. It can become sore and swollen. The cause is not known. It may subside by itself; otherwise injection of hydrocortisone may have healing effect. It is uncomfortable but not serious.

THE PACKSACK

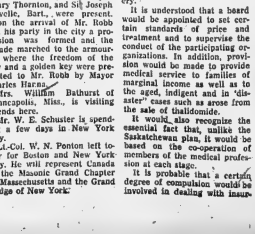
by GREGORY CLARK

On the way home from the office last night, my companion was a middle-aged man who has been in the managerial and executive ranks of business for years, and is financially quite comfortably off. As we backed and filled our way through the rush hour traffic, we got talking interested in the various cars and their drivers that we overtook or which passed us.

"How," he demanded" are all these people able to buy new cars? New cars, mostly; or at least recent models. Where do they get the money? All my life, the purchase of a new car every three or four years has been a serious financial consideration. I suppose I am a bit better paid than the average, or even the majority. But all you have to do is look at the drivers of these cars to see that they can't all be top salaried people. Where do they dicens do they get the money?"

I was unable to enlighten him. Maybe my friend, they don't have the money.

"The fact of the matter is," he said, "that these people are making far more money than is generally supposed. The figures I have on the actual average wage of Canadians is simply preposterous. Not only the number of cars, but what you might call the social distribution of cars, proves it."



Animal Fats

Farmer's Advocate

The American Medical Association is worried now because people may be indiscriminately cutting down on animal fats. This may be resulting in an unbalanced diet and so the more harmful fats go deeper than the cholesterol they're trying to cut out, says the association. Who knows, animal fats may soon swing back into favor.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — Action in Gunnar Mining overshadowed all else on the stock market today following a $14,300,000 bid for control of the company.

A group headed by Teck-Hughes Gold Mines has offered $11 each for 1,300,000 of the 3,541,860 Gunnar shares outstanding.

The purchase offer also includes a request for proxies to be voted against Gunnar's proposed acquisition of McNamara Corporation. Toronto - based Cochrane-Dunlop Hardy Corporation, Toronto - based Consolidated Building Corporation, Toronto - based Canada Iron Foundries and Montreal-based Dominion Bridge, Imperial Oil, Royal Bank, Consumers' Gas and Interprovincial Pipe Line.

Losers included Abitibi, Algoma Steel, Distillers-Seagrams and Dominion Bridge. Steel, all down in a ¼ to ½ range.

On the exchange index, industrials dipped .13 to 563.00. Golds rose .21 to 85.71, base metals .22 to 187.01 and western oils .50 to 116.09. The 11 a.m. volume was 787,000 shares compared with 650,000 at the same time Wednesday.

Among base metals, Noranda gained ⅛, International Nickel and Rio Algom ¼ each and Denison ⅛.

In western oils, Dome dipped ⅛, while Great Plains Development gained ⅛.

Wednesday, the stock market drifted aimlessly, with only a few highlights to stir interest.

Intraprovincial Steel and Pipe grabbed the spotlight early, racing through impressive volumes and showing a wide-swinging price range. Reacting to news the company has received a $3,000,000 order from Pacific Petroleum, the stock opened through $3,000 shares while other shares as high as $2.80—best price this year—then eased to $2.10, up 20 cents.

Dominion Bridge emerged as another favorite, climbing two points to 19. B.C. Power, on extremely heavy turnover, touched a 1962 high of 19¾ before settling back to 19¼, ahead ⅜.

Canadian Breweries had two special - sized transactions of 10,000 at 10¼ net, and it closed at that price, unchanged on the day.

Banks firmed, with Montreal, Nova Scotia, Toronto-Dominion and Royal all showing gains ranging to a point. Walker-Gooderham gained 1¾.

7-Year-old Boy Hit by Car

A 7-year-old boy was rushed to Belleville General Hospital this afternoon after he was hit by a car near Our Lady of Fatima School, in the northwest end of the city.

Police say the boy dashed in front of the car.

The boy was still undergoing X-ray examination up to press time.

RepaymentTerm On Theft Charge Is Extended

A father of nine children, one of four men ordered to pay restitution for theft of mine equipment in the Madoc area, today had his repayment term extended another six months in magistrate's court.

David James Lemmon appeared before magistrate T. Y. Wills along with Lemuel Sanford and Daniel Hector Andrews. A fourth man, Keith Toms, is still being sought by police.

The four were arrested for theft from the Magnetic Mine Company in the Madoc area six months ago, placed on suspended sentences and order to make good the loss caused by the theft.

Lemmon this morning told the magistrate he was now working an average of $28-30 per week cutting lumber in the bush.

The magistrate asked him if he could pay $50 by next June.

"I can try anyway," replied Lemmon. "I'll do the best I can do."

"I do not feel like letting him go absolutely clear. I think he should make an effort to do something," said the magistrate.

Sandford, ordered to find $300, said he had paid $77.

He said he was now depending on trapping in the bush for his income and asked that the court lower his payments to $10 during the winter — when trapping success is at a minimum.

"As long as you pay some reasonable payment there won't be any action taken against you during the winter," said the magistrate. "You will be working next spring. See if you can get caught up then."

Andrews, living in the bush, had made no restitution so far, the court was told. He said he had paid $75 down for an old truck which he thought would have helped him in hauling wood.

The magistrate said he could have paid the $75 in restitution.

He ordered Andrews to repay $100 by the end of the year. If he met the order, his time for full restitution would be extended.

"You are going to pay it or go to jail for an appropriate time," warned the magistrate.

Thant Pleased By Support of Congo Operation

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Heartened by strong support for his appeal to UN members to pay their share of The Congo debt, Secretary - General U Thant summoned his advisory committee today to consider tough new steps against Katanga.

The 110-nation budgetary committee voted 75 to 17 with 14 abstentions to accept a World Court opinion that UN members are legally bound to pay assessments for such special peace-keeping operations as the UN Congo force.

Police Cruiser Kills Man, 71

TILLSONBURG, Ont. (CP)—Charles Mayo, 71, of Norwich, Ont. was struck and killed Wednesday by a provincial police cruiser of the Tillsonburg detachment.

Police said the man was dressed in dark clothing.

The accident occurred on Highway 59 about 14 miles east of Tillsonburg.

Const. Walter Baguley, a member of the force for two years, was the driver of the cruiser.

East Hastings PC Association Hears Minister

The annual meeting of the East Hastings P.C. Association was held at the Masonic Hall in Madoc last evening. Mrs. Broad, the president, chaired the meeting.

Several items of business were conducted before the guest speaker for the evening, the Honorable William G. Davis, Minister of Education, addressed a capacity audience. Mr. Bruce White, treasurer of the association, introduced the speaker, and the speaker was thanked by Mr. Vera McMurray, Vice-president. Other speakers were Clarke T. Rollins, MLA for the riding; Mr. Bentley, the past president; Mr. Fred Mitchell, immediate past president; Mr. Charles Keehn, president of Belleville East Hastings Association; and Mr. Harold Varty, 1962 warden of the County of Hastings.

The honorable member from West County spoke on the throne speech as recently presented to the legislature. Mr. Davis dealt "through the youthful leadership of Premier Robarts, Ontario has a government with a capacity for making decisions". He described the Throne Speech as "one of the most forward, far reaching and exciting that he has ever had the privilege of hearing". The speaker discussed the Ontario plans for economic development for industry, the proposed medical care plan "which would be the finest health scheme ever devised by any government".

Also discussed were junior farm loans, portable pensions, assistance for retarded children, Ontario council for the arts. The acquisition of shore line properties for park lands will require a budget of some two hundred million over the next twenty-year period. In his own department, the recent changes with respect to grade 13 examinations were discussed. The speaker also reported that the government is giving assistance to one-and-one-half million school children in Ontario, and has spent $243,000,000 for vocational and technical education. Votes of thanks were given Mr. Clarke T. Rollins, MLA, acted as host to those present for a Christmas banquet.

The existing executive was returned for another term.

Garage Worker Found Dead At Thomasburg

A 29-year-old garage employee was found dead this morning in his house-trailer at Thomasburg.

The body of Fred Gray was discovered by his employer, garage-operator Earl Morton, when he did not show up for work. Provincial police at Madoc said they were conducting a formal investigation into Gray's death and did not suspect any suspicious circumstances.

There were no signs of violence in the trailer. A TV set in the trailer was still tuned on when Mr. Morton made the discovery. Gray, a local resident, lived in the trailer parked behind the garage.

South African Police Kill Six Negroes

PRETORIA, South Africa (Reuters) — Six Negroes were killed when police opened fire on them Wednesday during a clash in the Transkei territory. Police Commissioner Lt. - Gen. J. M. Keevy said today.

Keevy said more than 60 Negroes attacked a police mobile unit with spears and battle axes when the police tried to close an illegal meeting. Shots were heard and stones were thrown at the police, Keevy said.

Three policemen were injured, one "fairly seriously."

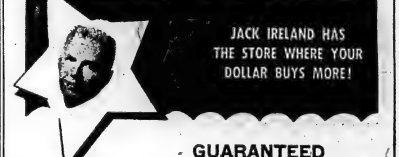
Keevy said the Negroes were from Cape Town and planned to burn down the house of Chief Kaiser Matanzima, chief of the Transkei territorial authority.

Breach of HTA Brings Term in County Jail

A Deseronto man was sentenced to 10 days in jail this morning for driving while his licence was suspended.

Robert J. Williams pleaded guilty before Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

Deseronto police chief K. M. Gloster said Williams lost his licence in 1960 for impaired driving. In June 1961 he was fined $75 for driving while under suspension.



The accused was arrested last Thursday and held in custody after he failed to appear in court.

Magistrate Wills dated the 10-day sentence from his arrest.

"If you keep this up," warned the magistrate, "your next term of imprisonment will be way beyond that."

Survival

gency headquarters has started. They are partly underground.

4. Provision of equipment for re-entry operations into target areas, such as rescue gear and radiation measuring devices.

5. Special militia courses during which 62,000 men trained.

6. Special maps, training aids and publication of civil defence books and pamphlets.

The army carries the heaviest civil defence burden. But many other departments are involved, including the prime minister's office, the health department, defence production and agriculture.

The survival columns, built around militia units, have drawn up their plans of action and some have held rehearsals.

One drawback is that half the militiamen live in cities which are likely targets. It would be preferable if all militia units were outside target areas but this would be difficult and areas have laid plans for getting to their rural bases quickly to begin re-entry operations.

All told 105,000 persons in the 210 mobile columns would carry out the rescue operations, with another 42,000 in support.

One big item still to be delivered is mobile decontamination equipment—in effect, portable bathhouses. Some signal equipment is also yet to come.

WOULD WARN HOMES

Next year a pilot project may be undertaken in one or two areas for installation of a warning device, similar to an alarm clock, in every home with electricity.

Ontario Hydro is making a survey in Southern Ontario on generating needs for such a system, known as N.E.A.R., for national emergency alarm repeater.

Meanwhile, 1,322 of, the planned 1,600 warning sirens have been installed across Canada. Tests continue with them. One was held Nov. 15 at Kingston, another Dec. 8 at Brantford, and a third will be held at London, Ont., early next month.

To a common complaint that sirens can't always be heard indoors, Gen. Wrinch said that if the sirens are ever blown seriously, radio and television will also broadcast warnings at the same time.

Rehabilitation

Elmer Sopha (L—Sudbury) said the $15,000 grant to the John Howard Society was a niggling amount.

"No expense should be spared" in recruiting social workers for provincial rehabilitation services, he said.

Leo Troy (L—Nipissing) asked what the present qualifications were for guards in provincial institutions, and, was told that the educational requirement was "Grade 8 but preferably Grade 10."

Another Liberal, A. E. Thompson, representing Toronto Dovercourt, suggested the problem of crime and repeated jail terms often resulted from drug addiction. He said the province should establish a free treatment clinic for addicts.

Premier Robarts said treatment of drug addicts was not within the jurisdiction of the provincial department, but "that is not saying we are not interested" in the problem.

Mr. Haskett in introducing his department's estimates, suggested the need for a "university-centred institute of criminology" to conduct research into crime reduction.

"No adequate effort has been made to pool our brains and resources in tackling this (crime) problem," he said.

His outline of the institute was that it would provide for a supply of "highly skilled professional personnel from various disciplines—education, law, sociology, medicine—to serve in many fields, aiding in eradicating social problems, formulating laws, dealing with offenders . . ."

CAN'T FIND IT

Liberal Leader John Wintermeyer said he agreed for the need of such an institute but he could not find a mention of "a nickel for research" in the estimates.

He suggested that because alcohol is a contributing factor in prison terms for 30,000 of 56,000 persons jailed last year, the province's income from liquor sales should be used to finance better treatment facilities for prisoners.

He said academic and occupational training for prisoners must be increased and more post-jail guidance provided.

Mr. MacDonald, who agreed with the Liberal leader, said Mr. Haskett "isn't even within reaching distance of reality." He said that after a year in the portfolio, Mr. Haskett "still doesn't know what is going on in his department."

ASKS MIMICO PROBE

He earlier asked for a public hearing into the resignation of all full-time professional staff at the provincial drug addiction and alcoholism clinic at Mimico reformatory.

He said eight full-time workers there, which included three psychologists, three occupational therapists and two social workers, had resigned, along with at least one part-time worker.

He said the department's replacements at Mimico "are relatively unqualified and inexperienced in this field."

Mr. MacDonald said that professional workers were "not interested in working in a custodial atmosphere that frustrates the treatment process."

He said that the newly appointed superintendent at the Mimico clinic was not, as Mr. Haskett maintained, a social worker and had no experience in handling drug addiction.

(Mr. Haskett said in the legislature Monday that the replacement of the superintendent had served to place "a treatment man in charge of this important work." The reforms minister said the new superintendent, Scott Keane, was formerly "head social worker at Ontario Training Centre, Brampton.")

Mr. MacDonald asked what Mr. Keane's qualifications were for social work.

Receiving no reply, the NDP leader said: "He is not a social worker . . . his only qualification is a six-month probationary course in the United Kingdom."

He said the question facing the government was whether it was "running a jail or a treatment centre and obviously you are running a jail."

Council Will Allow Firemen To Hold Parties

DESERONTO — A special meeting of the town council was held on Monday night to reconsider a motion passed at the meeting on October 2nd.

The motion granted the local volunteer fire department permission to hold bingo games in the fire hall and council felt that this motion should be rescinded because it specifically stated bingo parties. Councillor Detlor asked Mayor Sweetman to explain why the council was meeting to discuss the motion and the mayor advised that council should not have specifically mentioned bingo.

Councillor Howard, chairman of the fire and police committee advised council that Chief Gloster had advised him to do something about the firemen holding bingo parties, and he had asked the mayor to call the meeting.

Reeve Lott advised council that the firemen have spent a good deal of what they have made for the benefit of the town and asked Chief McVicker if he had any statements to make.

Chief McVicker told of the improvements to the building that had been done by the firemen; he told of the firemen installing sanitary facilities in the town hall, of the parades staged by the firemen, of the purchase of new uniforms and the purchase and equipping an emergency vehicle so that the town would have two ambulances in case there was ever need for a second ambulance or if the one maintained by White and Morris were incapacitated. The last venture was the purchase of lights as far as the finances would permit for the decoration of the town streets. The Public Utilities had finished the job and decorated the big tree in the park to make the town more attractive.

Council made it plain to the firemen that they wished in no way to interfere with their activities and that the firemen would have full use of the rooms over the fire hall at any time they wished to use them or for any purpose.

Rebel Resistance Broken, Jungle Chase Commences

LABUAN, North Borneo (AP) — British troops pushed out from regained towns in Brunei and northwest Sarawak today chasing rebel bands seeking refuge in dense jungles and swamps.

Lt.-Gen. Sir Nigel Poett, commander of British Far East land forces, declared after a visit to operations areas that the possibility of rebel guerrilla resistance was remote after six days of combat.

"We have broken the back of the rebellion," he said.

He pointed out that the rebels, who wanted to set up an independent state composed of the Brunei sultanate and the two neighboring Crown colonies of Sarawak and North Borneo, were armed only with shotguns and a few rifles.

Rebel dead so far are believed to total about 50. The British have lost 10 dead. A number of civilians and police also have been killed.

TELL OF HEROISM

The freeing of 45 hostages from Seria jail by the British forces Wednesday brought the first eyewitness accounts of the early hours of the rebellion last Saturday, as well as stories of heroic parts played by a Scottish nurse, an Anglican priest and an Australian doctor.

Rev. John Vyvyan led a group of hostages in the Lord's Prayer as the rebels forced them to march as a human shield in an attack on the police station at Penaga west of Seria.

"Those 15 yards seemed like 15 bloody miles," said a Shell Oil Company aircraft engineer.

Two or three prisoners were forced to go ahead for a party in front of the jail, while the others were lined up 200 yards to the rear.

After a few moments the line was ordered to march ahead. When shooting started, the hostages fell on their faces. Several escaped in the confusion. But one hostage, a Eurasian engineer, was killed, and five others were wounded.

NURSE PERSUADES

Originally 62 persons, including 12 women and children, were rounded up as prisoners by the rebels. But nurse Jean Scott of Glasgow persuaded the rebels to free the women and children. She refused to treat a badly wounded rebel unless they agreed to the exchange.

As the prisoners, grimy and unkempt, walked out of the jail they cheered "our brave little Jean."

Dr. Alan Maclean was praised for dashing under fire from the cover of a vehicle to drag one of the wounded hostages to safety and give him first aid.

it."

"No, I don't know who," he replied, "and I think it is unfortunate if anybody discusses any matter that comes before the National Security Council because I think it lessens its effectiveness. . . ."

The tempest blew up over an article in the Sturday Evening Post, written by Washington newspaper men Stewart Alsop and Charles Bartlett, which gave an account of the council's deliberations during the crisis and the positions various members took.

Stevenson has denounced the account of his position as untrue and Kennedy made public a letter expressing his confidence in the UN ambassador.

VISION IMPAIRED

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A Miami man has been charged with watching television while driving on the Florida State Turnpike. Driver Jack S. Minsteer, 26, was arrested by State Trooper Joe Bowers, who said he gave chase when Minsteer's car ran off the highway, pulled back on, then continued, astride the centre lane. Bowen said he found a portable TV set in operation on Minsteer's dashboard.

with the West on a solution of the German problem.

While saying no time limit was placed on such negotiations, he said the Communist powers ultimately would sign a separate peace treaty with Communist East Germany if the Western powers refused to come to an agreement.

"But we will not count the pages of the calendar," he said.

Gromyko repeated the proposal by Khrushchev to replace the Western allies' troops in West Berlin with the flag of the United Nations.

He said that after a treaty is signed and the Allied troops are out of West Berlin, the Soviet Union would give guarantees for the city's independence.

NEED UNDERSTANDING

Without mutual understanding between the United States and the Soviet Union, it would be impossible to settle a single international conflict, Gromyko said.

"Either we must decide controversial questions at the conference table or slide into war —there is no other way out for the Soviet Union or the United States."

Despite their "ideological differences," Gromyko continued, "the Soviet governments does not see any unsurmountable obstacles in the relations between the Soviet Union and the United States . . .

"If there is agreement between Premier Khrushchev and President Kennedy, there will be a solution of international problems on which the fate of mankind depends.

"The Soviet Union would welcome such agreements."

Napoleon Died From Boredom Says Historian

LONDON (Reuters) — Napoleon Bonaparte died, not from arsenic poisoning nor ulcers nor cancer, but from boredom, according to Gilbert Martineau, French consul on the lonely British South Atlantic island of St. Helena where the French emperor died a prisoner in 1821.

Martineau, now in London, has charge of two Napoleonic museums on St. Helena. He has been investigating theories that Napoleon was poisoned.

He discounts several theories about the cause of death.

Although a lock of hair, said to be Napoleon's, contained traces of arsenic, it was useless as proof unless it could be proved that it was cut from the corpse and not from Napoleon's head before his death.

OTHER EXPLANATIONS

Arsenic could also have been introduced into the body quite innocently, by fish and by the emetics his doctor gave in the months before his death, The Times quotes Martineau as saying.

Neither could Napoleon have died from the ulcer found during the autopsy because if it had been ruptured he would have vomited blood.

The theory of cancer also failed to fit the facts. Napoleon's corpse was fat, not wasted, and he showed no secondary signs of the disease.

Amoebic abscess of the liver, also suggested, would also have been discovered during the autopsy.

"He died of boredom," Martineau concluded. "He died because he wanted to."

Khrushchev's warning that Russia will safeguard Cuban sovereignty and will take appropriate steps if Kennedy fails to abide by a pledge not to invade Cuba.

U.S. STAND UNCHANGED

Kennedy told reporters Khrushchev's remarks appeared to be directed to the Communist bloc rather than the West. The U.S. position, he added, remains unchanged from that of Nov. 20 when Kennedy said he could give no assurances against invasion of Cuba until the Communists agree to international inspection of Cuban territory. Negotiations on that point are, continuing at the United Nations but State Secretary Dean Rusk already has indicated the outlook for agreement is bleak.

While displaying an uncompromising attitude on Cuba, Kennedy said he is negotiating to establish "instantaneous" communications with Khrushchev. The two leaders had to rely several times on open broadcasts during the Cuban crisis because normal coding procedures slowed their message transmissions.

"In a nuclear age speed is very desirable," Kennedy said. The new set-up may be either a telephone or teletype—a form of typewritten transmission—which the president suggested might be safer.

Asks Removal Of Widow as Administrator

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The mother of the late comedian Ernie Kovacs asked a court Wednesday to remove his widow as administrator of his estate.

Mrs. Mary Kovacs, 62, of Hollywood, charged in a Superior Court complaint that Kovac's widow, actress Edie Adams, has mismanaged the estate and, unless removed, will render it insolvent.

Judge Clyde C. Triplett issued an order requiring Miss Adams to answer the charges in court Jan. 3. She is in Europe making a motion picture.

Mrs. Kovacs claimed she has no money and Miss Adams refused to help her obtain money from two $500,000 life insurance policies.

Kovacs, 43, was killed in an automobile accident last Jan. 13.

Rylstone

RYLSTONE — Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Spencer spent a day last week at Palmer's Milk.

Agnes McKeown, nurse-in-training at Belleville General Hospital, and Paul McKeown, student at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, spent the weekend with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McKeown. Paul kept things going at home while Agnes accompanied her parents to Hamilton where Mrs. McKeown and Agnes attended a trousseau tea in honor of Miss Betty Filer, bride-elect.

Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Mumby and family and Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Fitchett - and Ross, Campbellford, were supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Heath, Don and Carol, on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Reid and Ted and Mrs. Easie Reid, were supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walt Reid and George, on Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Doug Young, Mormora; Miss Barbara, Mumby, Peterborough and Edd Fry, 11th Line, were Sunday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mumby and daughters.

Mr. Harold Pillen preached a most inspiring sermon on Sunday afternoon, when he chose for his subject "The Two Trees, the Christmas Tree and the Cross of Jesus." The junior choir sang a lovely choir song, "Standing on the Promises of God." Service at 2:30 in the afternoon will continue through December.

Mrs. Archie Samus, Dundonald, and Mrs. Mabel Beggs, Campbellford, were overnight guests of their sister-in-law, Mrs. Stanley Finch and nephew Earl, on Friday last week.

Margaret Mulheron of Bethel was a weekend guest of her school chum, Marilyn Stewart.

Garland Finch was a supper guest of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Finch and boys, on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Archie Samus, Dundonald, spent a day last week with Mrs. Howard Finch and Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Finch.

Denton Meikleljohn spent the weekend in Toronto and Oshawa and attended the Maple Leaf - Chicago Black Hawk hockey game on Saturday night.

Mrs. E. C. Trumble entertained several young folk at a birthday party in honor of her son Chris's birthday on December 9th. Among those present were: Tommy and Lois Reid, Diane and David Grey, Kathy Thomson, John and Jerry Heath, Barry Linn, Doug Meikleljohn, David Wildman, Lyle, Jimmie, Marie and Craig Finch, Lenora Stapley and Tommie and Michael Trumble.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Finch and boys were Sunday supper guests of his mother, Mrs. Mabel Beggs, in Campbellford.

Atlantic

Eachen appealed the decision. The Speaker's ruling was upheld 113 to 80—the Conservatives and Social Credit combining to overpower the Liberals and New Democrats. It was the fourth time this session that a decision by Mr. Lambert has been unsuccessfully appealed.

Earlier in the same debate J. W. Pickersgill (L — Bonavista-Twillingate) said that although the projected five-man board is not yet legally formed, he had learned that someone is representing himself as its secretary.

WOULD BE CONTEMPT

This had been reported to him by Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland and if such a move had in fact been taken with the consent of the government it would amount to contempt of Parliament.

Revenue Minister Hugh John Flemming said the government had "never heard of such a thing." It was never even contemplated, he said. "I am unable to understand this."

After the Commons had approved the Atlantic development board legislation it began debate of the government's motion for interim supply for January involving expenditures of $330,089,511.

The motion was seized upon by John Davis (L—Coast-Capilano) as an opportunity to advocate the government scrap the existing Columbia River treaty in favor of a new one based on general principles. He said the entire power development program was being held up because of secondary questions.

6th Tyendinaga

6TH TYENDINGA — Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Treverton and Mrs. F. Treverton spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Harold Taylor, in Toronto.

Several from this line attended the turkey supper in Melrose church hall on Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Alton Goodman and family had Sunday night supper and spent the evening with Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Goodfellow and Cathy.

Wayside Inn, Shannonville, To Open New Lounges Mon.

When Milton Yearns bought the Wayside Inn, Shannonville, about six years ago, he didn't plan to expand it. Having sold out his hotel interests in the north, Mr. Kearns planned to relax at Shannonville, with the 125-year tradition established by the Albion Hotel. It was to be a quiet place to retire.

That was six years ago. But last June, Tyendinaga voted liquor lounges and licensed dining rooms into the township, and everyone expected the Wayside Inn to supply the demand. Monday, the "Village Pump" cocktail lounge, and the "Country Dining Room" will be opened for business.

To make way for the new facilities, Mr. Kearns had a 2,200 square foot addition built on the hotel. The addition, of concrete block construction, with a prestressed concrete floor and steel roof, was built wholly by local labor.

Inside, the Village Pump has captain's chairs for 108 people. The walls of the lounge are a natural finish chipboard. The floor is covered with a genuine Tintawn carpet, imported from Ireland. Electric heating and air conditioning will keep customers comfortable in any weather.

The Country Dining Room, in a remodeled section of the building, is planned to seat 28 people.

Wellington

WELLINGTON — The Anglican Laymen's Association of the parish, of Wellington and Hillier held its annual Christmas banquet on Tuesday evening in St. Andrews parish hall.

Mr. Warner McFaul introduced the guest speaker who on this occasion was Capt. H. A. Durrand, R.C.A.S.C., who gave a most interesting talk on Indo-China. Capt. Durrand is well qualified to talk about this particular area in the Orient, as he spent some time there as a member of the International Commission for the Supervision and Control of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

The members and their guests sat down to a delicious dinner prepared and served by the ladies of St. Andrews Choir Auxiliary, following the toast to the Queen, proposed by the president, Gerry Springgs, and grace said by the Rector, the Rev. J. J. Rogers. Mr. B. A. Evans thanked the ladies on behalf of those present. Mrs. Hal Glover responded for the members of the choir auxiliary. Gerry Springings spoke briefly and welcomed the numerous guests and then every one joined in singing carols, led by the recior with Mrs. Warner McFaul at the organ.

Col W. A. Davern thanked Capt. Durrand and made a presentation on behalf of the association.

Robarts

unable to discharge the responsibilities placed upon us by law."

The trustees said that in 1960 the average per-pupil revenue from all sources was $306.62 for public schools and $300.32 for separate schools.

"The losers are the children in the separate public schools."

At a press conference Wednesday, Roland Perrault of Ottawa, administrator of the bilingual school group, said that, apart from equalizing the burden as between Catholics and non-Catholics, the plan would level off inequalities among various public school districts FINDS 'IMPOSSIBLE'

"It's an impossible situation now," he said.

Chris Asnef of Fort William, president of the trustees' association, said the proposal would "save a lot of hardship on individual boards."

He said the organizations feel it is up to the Ontario government to work out details of the plan.

"With their experts, they are in a better position than we are to set up the mechanics of a scheme," he said.

Under the proposed program the provincial government would establish a basic standard of educational cost for a child. The cost would be met by provincial grants and a uniform mill rate based on equalized assessment throughout the province.

SEEKS SOLUTION

Premier Robarts told both delegations a solution had to be found and would be in the near future.

Bishop Hunt said the Anglicans "would certainly hope this would not become an election issue where we would have the province divided into two camps religiously."

"Speaking personally," the bishop said, "I would be most desirous to meet with our Roman Catholic brethren on issues that can be resolved."

Reaction to the Anglican brief varied from general approval by Protestant leaders and public school trustees to opposition on the part of Roman Catholic clerics.

However, Ontario Liberal Leader John Wintermeyer, a Roman Catholic, welcomed the Anglican brief as a constructive step which merits careful study.

"I trust it will promote not only public understanding of the financial plight of separate schools, but also public support of a policy of educational financing which will remove the inequalities which now exist not only as between the separate and the public elementary schools, but between the rural and urban schools as well."

AGREES WITH STAND

Provincial NDP, leader Donald MacDonald agreed with the Anglicans' contention that the problem cannot be solved by a redistribution of corporation taxes. "You don't take away from the public schools to meet the needs of separate schools," he said.

The Anglican brief stirred opposition from Catholic leaders on almost all its points and support from representatives of other Christian denominations and public school trustees.

Some Jewish leaders stood firmly in the middle, opposing both Anglican and Catholic views and advocating complete secularisation of provincial schools.

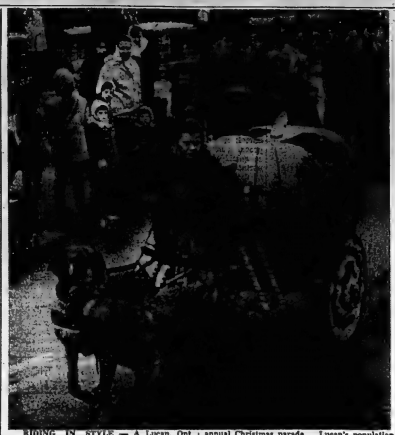
Rev. Frank Stone of the Catholic Information Centre, denied an Anglican contention that financial inequalities were redressed by provincial government grants, but supported an Anglican request that the alleged inequalities should be examined by the government.

John Middleweek, executive-secretary of the Metropolitan Toronto separate school board, said Catholic schools now receive only 1½ to 2 per cent of educational revenues from corporation taxes. He said this is ridiculous because Catholics represent a far larger proportion of corporation stockholders than this share would suggest.

DISMISSES IDEA

He dismissed the Anglican stand that public schools are not secular and added:

"Only Catholics have a common front as to what to teach children in the way of religion."



Rev. Leland Gregory, secretary of the Baptist Convention of Ontario and Quebec, said that if any denomination wants separate schools, it should pay for them itself as the Baptists did several years ago.

He said the Baptist Church did not have a codified approach to the separate school issue, but was preparing one.

Rev. Harold Vaughan, secretary of the United Church of Canada board of schools and colleges, said the Anglican brief is similar to the United Church's brief and said his church does not want to see further fragmentation of education.

Abraham Feinberg, rabbi emeritus of Holy Blossom Temple, said Anglican insistence that Christianity be taught in public schools might force many Jews to establish their own parochial schools.

Rabbi Feinberg said he supports complete secularization of all public schools and said this is the view of the Canadian Jewish Congress.

2nd Sidney

2ND SIDNEY — Ralph Mastin has arrived at Trenton Memorial Hospital after spending nine and one half weeks at Kingston General Hospital.

Mrs. John Reid of Trenton, Mrs. Morris Sickle, Mrs. Clayton Curtis, Mrs. Frank White, Mrs. Donald Sandercock and Mrs. Alva Meyers of this district represented the Bay of Quinte Branch at the Women's Institute annual convention, held at Club Canara at Belleville on Tuesday and also attended the turkey dinner at night and the showing of slides of the Dominion president, Mrs. Lymburner's trip to Associated Country Women of the World conference held in Australia this past summer. Mrs. Donald Sandercock, district director and Mrs. Harold Dickens, secretary - treasurer, represented the Institute on Wednesday at Club Canara.

The sympathy of the neighborhood is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Alva Dunn in the sudden death of his sister, Mrs. Wallis of Wellington who passed away this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Hart were supper guests of her brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. William Blackman of Wellington on Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. George Clement and Kenneth spent the supper hour and evening with her sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Zaton of Marmora, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Reid were weekend guests of their daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Backer and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Reid of Toronto.

The Bay of Quinte Institute held a euchre on Friday evening at Harder's School. There were seven tables of euchre played. Mrs. Pete Jordan won first prize for ladies; Mrs. Alfred St. Hilaire, low; John Niven, first prize for men; Frank White, low; and Pete Jordan won the lucky cup.

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

Einstein once said that if he were given a single choice as between knowledge and imagination, it would be the latter he would want. Too many people, however, are under the false impression that education takes place any time and anywhere we expose people to the facts.

The age of science has spawned a host of theories about life, which appear to be scientific because they are factual. But while the sum total of facts may supply us with data useful and sometimes indispensable - they do not necessarily endow us with truth or vital understanding. One punster put his finger on the nub of the question. He said: "You can lead a man to knowledge but you can't make him think."

Thinking - if it is to be creative and adventurous - is more an art than a science. And the cultivation of the art of thinking depends more on imagination than on knowledge alone.

Indeed they are correct who insist on "knowing the facts," "tabulating the results", "adding up the averages", or analyzing the statistics." To get to the unknown we must first know as much as we can about the known. But the "known" is not the same as the "knowable", if we don't soar above the ground we shall forever remain landlocked peasants.

SCIENTIFIC WORK

Ironically, in no other field of human endeavor does imagination play so significant a role as in scientific work, itself.

The great modern discoveries were not found by scientists who were nothing more than "human I.B.M. machines". They were made by men who were capable of clearing new paths of making a "break-through". They were not satisfied with adding up the columns and counting the known facts or figures.

Literally they broke away from the facts; only then did they make a break-through."

Thomas A. Edison once consoled his over-worked and almost despairing assistants with this incisive bit of wisdom. "Don't be upset because we have conducted 50,000 experiments which have failed. We didn't fail. On the contrary: We now know 50,000 wrong ways. This will help us get to know the right way."

THE RIGHT ANSWER

There are times when the right answer can lead to delusion rather than to delightful discovery. If it is too easily given, too quickly found, a "correct" answer, may be merely a slick substitute for thought, a glib slogan rather than a thoughtful conclusion. Conversely, the wrong answer, in the hands of imaginative people, may be instructive and may even serve creative purposes. Knowing what won't work can help us to understand why it won't work and thus open up new possibilities for open-eyed imagination to work on. When we are forced to wrestle with a problem we are made to cut our intellectual teeth on the raw material which may yet yield a sharper and more incisive finished product.

People who are convinced that facts are the equivalent of real knowledge often jump to hasty conclusions. Their thought finishes before it begins; they fail to grow in depth. Their little knowledge, because it lacks imagination, is a dangerous thing.

They think that they know, but do not know how to think - deeply, courageously and imaginatively. True, they have acquired some knowledge. But they have missed the real reward which knowledge can bring - wisdom.

Snow Queen Chosen at Talent Tea

TWEED — The annual talent tea sponsored by the Tweed Consolidated Home and School Associates was held on Friday evening. This event as usual drew a big crowd. There were several tables including a tea table, white elephant table, bazaar table and cooking table.

The Snow Queen contest held in conjunction with the talent tea drew a huge crowd. The winner of the contest was Miss Elsie Whiteloch, and runner-ups were Miss Janis Rosevear and Miss Shirley Lafleniere.

Miss Whiteloch was crowned by Miss Joan Dornan the 1961 Snow Queen. The crown was donated by Clarke's Jewellery. Flowers from Templer Flower Shop were presented to the Queen by Mrs. Rosevear and a trophy donated by Mrs. Jim Crawford and presented by Mr. Crawford. She also received a $10 cheque.

Miss Rosevear runner-up was presented with a trophy donated and presented by Bush of Daffodill Tea Shop and a $10. cheque.

Miss Lafleniere the third prize winner was presented with a trophy by Mrs. Ross Johnson and donated by Mr. and Mrs. Bob [illegible] d and a $10. cheque.

The money for the Snow Queen contest was donated by Dr. Allen, Dr. Berry and Mr. Ted Courneyea.

Club Activities

The regular meeting of St. John's Young Adult Club was held on Thursday evening and opened with a sing-song under the direction of George and Frances Nicholls.

The worship service was conducted by Andi Craik and Enid Oliver.

President Henry Oliver presided for the business. It was decided to decorate the church at the next meeting of the club.

An election for a new slate of officers for the coming year resulted as follows: honorary president — Dr. D. M. Smith; past president — Henry Oliver; president — Wayne Gunter; vice-president — Andi Craik; secretary — Dr. D. M. Smith; treasurer — Stewart Milne; pianist — Lenna Teal; attendance secretary — Eleanor Nelson; song leader — Henry Oliver; press reporter — Oscar Teal.

Xi Beta Zeta Hears Address On Education

At the recent meeting of Xi Beta Zeta held at the home of Mrs. R. G. Sine, the members were privileged to have as guest speaker, Mrs. Wanda Sine, supervisor of primary division for Belleville schools.

Mrs. Sine pointed out the importance of kindergarten training and the foundation it lays for the child's future years in school; how little minds, with proper guidance, can develop so quickly in that first all-important school year. She showed the type of "tests" the child is given to observe his alertness and powers of thinking and invited the members to play the game with her and answer the questions in the same time allotted to the child.

The members present who are mothers of kindergarten children, were amazed to learn that a fair majority of children pass the "tests" with flying colors. The general feeling was that the kindergarten child of today is fortunate that the present method of teaching has proved that learning can be fun.

During the serving of refreshments Mrs. Sine answered many questions.

The bowling party has been postponed temporarily and the members accepted the invitation issued by Gamma Mu Chapter to join them at their Christmas party to be held in the Polynesian Room.

U.C.W. Meetings

MARSH HILL U. C. W.

MARSH HILL — The December meeting of Marsh Hill U.C.W. was held at the home of Mrs. Fred Campbell with eight members and four visitors present.

The president, Mrs. Harry Coulter opened the meeting with a reading, "A Growing Fellowship".

The treasurer, Mrs. Allyn Finkle, gave her financial report and the members reported sending 17 cards and making six hospital visits and three house calls.

Mrs. Leslie Finkle read a letter from the chairman of stewardship and recruiting committee of the Board of Women.

Mrs. Ivan Clare presided over the candle lighting worships service, with the theme, "The Light of the World is Jesus."

Mrs. Harold Detlor read, "The Holly and the Ivy."

Gwenda Detlor, Marilyn, Elizabeth and Linda Finkle sang, "Silent Night, Holy Night."

Mrs. Harry Coulter read, Christmas a time of worship not of indulgence".

Mrs. Bert Jonkman read, "There's a song in the Air".

The meeting closed and the hostess served refreshments.

Alpha Lambda Hears Physical Fitness Talk

Members of Alpha Lambda Chapter Beta Sigma Phi recently met at the home of Mrs. R. Walmsley. In the absence of the president, Mrs. E. Brett, Mrs. V. Simonds presided over the business meeting during which plans were discussed regarding the forthcoming Christmas party.

Mrs. R. Walmsley introduced the speaker for the evening, Mr. G. McGaughey, physical education instructor at Moira Secondary School, who gave a brief resume of different concepts of beauty throughout history — the Greek preference of a sturdy athletic physique, the Roman ideals, the standards during the Renaissance, and today's concept. References were made to Venus de Milo, Michelangelo's "Last Judgment" and Da Vinci's Mona Lisa."

Mr. McGaughey answered the academic question "What makes a woman beautiful," by saying "poise — graceful movements, calm composure and serenity along with assurance of being physically, mentally and emotionally fit—makes a woman beautiful."

The human body breaks down through lack of use. Exercise slows down this degenerating process. Mental health suffers with physical health. In fact, statistics state one in every ten suffer from some mental disorder. To avoid a lukewarm state of health, a daily pattern of exercise combined with frequent participation in sports was recommended.

Mr. McGaughey answered sorority sisters' many questions.

Mrs. G. Muiter thanked Mr. McGaughey who certainly left behind much food for thought.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Walmsley, and co-hostess Mrs. D. Ivison.

Club Activities

U. C. MESSENGERS

WELLINGTON — Pine boughs, poinsettias and tinsel prettily decorated the centennial room for the Messengers' Christmas party with 15 members, three leaders and three visitors present. Each child made paper weights to take home.

The meeting was called to order with Mrs. Cronk presiding. Several children received their pins and were complimented on having memorized the hymn, motto and prayer. Mrs. Foster read a story about Davey's Christmas and showed pictures as illustrations. Mrs. Cronk told a story about Christmas in other lands.

Devotional was given by Mrs. Yourt who used the Scripture verse: "In as much as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto Me."

Meeting closed by all repeating the Messengers Benediction and treats were passed by Judy Ball and Debbie Harris. Each child received a candy cane.

This ishetalsmetengi .m¼ This is the last meeting till after the holidays.

Women's Institutes

RYLSTONE W. I.

RYLSTONE — Mrs. Gerald Petherick was hostess to Rylstone Women's Institute on Wednesday afternoon, when they held their Christmas meeting at the Sunday School room of Zion United Church, Petherick's Corners with an attendance of 15 ladies.

Mrs. Stanley Kerr, president was in charge of the business part of the meeting.

It was decided to hold a meeting on January 15th to make arrangements for rummaging classes to be held at Crowe River Bridge, next summer, sponsored by the Institute. The president moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Don Kerr and her assistant, Mrs. Jack Watson, for their leadership in the short course, "The Third Meal," held on two afternoons during November. The course proved to be a decided success. Resolutions, read at the area convention in Belleville, last week re "Conservation" were recead by the secretary. There was a discussion about ways and means to make money to assist with the swimming classes next summer and a pie social was chosen as the method.

The following committee was chosen: Mrs. Carl Reid, Mrs. Jack Watson, Mrs. Don Stewart, Mrs. Gordon McMeljohn and Mrs. Eldon Anderson and other members to assist in finding items for the program. Mrs. Ellis Jones was authorized to send a card of sympathy to a recently bereaved family and a card of congratulations to the parents of a new baby in the community.

Mrs. Ernest Irwin gave a splendid report of the area convention, which she attended in Belleville on December 4th and 5th.

Each lady was given a sheet of paper on which to draw designs for place mats depicting "Safety on the Farm," to be handed in before January 31st. A prize will be awarded for the best design.

Mrs. Ernest Irwin was convener for the balance of the program as follows: reading, "Room For Two" by Mrs. Alfred Barnum; reading, "Christmas Shopping" by Mrs. Jack Watson and Mrs. Carl Reid gave a short demonstration on Christmas novelties, made from apples, tooth picks, pop corn, balls and tin foil. This was most interesting, instructive and inexpensive.

Contests were conducted by Mrs. Don Kerr, Mrs. Hector Arnold and Mrs. Stanley Kerr.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, and her refreshment committee. A sumptuous treat of homemade candy was enjoyed.

45 Attend Family Get-Together

WELLINGTON — The home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence McMurter, Lake Shore Road, was recently the scene of a family gathering, where the guests, numbering 45, enjoyed a turkey dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. McMurter celebrated their golden wedding last February. Their family consists of seven sons and three daughters. All were present at the gathering except one daughter, Mrs. Eva Dillabaugh of Smiths Falls.

The party was held to celebrate the homecoming of one of their sons, Wellington, who has lived in Vancouver for 20 years, during which time he has never been home until this summer.

The sons are Ross of Trenton, Wellington of Vancouver, Howard of Trenton, Arthur and Clarke of Belleville, Douglas at home and Don of Trenton.

Others present were: Mrs. Vera Ross, of Trenton, an aunt; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Ross of Wooler, uncle and aunt, and 23 grandchildren and one great-grandchild. The party was held on Mr. McMurter's birthday, which was also Mrs. Vera Ross's birthday.

Stitched To Suit

By VERA WINSTON

Very new-looking is this imported beige and brown tweed suit which employs bands of stitching for the collar, front closing, hem, side slits and half belt of the jacket.

The straight skirt has two bands of stitching—match-box type cut—down each side of the front.

With the suit is a cropped blouse of brown satin.

Creamy Cantonese Fudge
Colored Candied Orange Peel

At the moment (and I'm hungry) I think the Creamy Cantonese Fudge I am about to reveal to you is the creamiest and smoothest fudge I ever tasted (and I'm boasting).

The Candied Orange Peel is for the sharp-eyed girls who watch their budgets hawklike.

While I have gifts in mind these will be ever so popular as sweetmeats at your Christmas parties too.

THURSDAY

Dinner Menu

Nourishing Lentil or Split Pea Soup; Individual Pizzas (Men Wednesday); Iceberg Lettuce Wedges with Cottage Cheese Dressing; Apple Dumplings with Lemon Nutmeg Sauce; Tea.

CREAMY CANTONESE FUDGE:

Do not double this batch. Make 2 separate batches if you need more.

This amount if poured to about ¾" thickness on buttered flyer cake pan makes an ideal slab of over one pound for a gift. When you wrap it protect it with a wax-paper-covered backing board. Over this stretch saran and fasten it underneath with Scotch tape. Then pak on your fancy ribbons.

1 lb. (2½ cups) light brown sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon light corn syrup, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 4-oz. can evaporated milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla, ¾ cup finely chopped candied (cut crystallized) ginger, 1-3 cup chopped nuts (almonds or walnuts or filberts or Brazils).

In a heavy pot (I used my small pressure cooker) mix together the sugar, salt, corn syrup, butter and milk. You must have a candy thermometer. Put the thermometer in the pot. Bring to boiling and boil to 235 deg. Fahr., stirring almost constantly. Do not let mercury go one hairsbreadth above 235 deg. Fahr. for this is the temperature at which you achieve creamy fudge. Remove from heat and let stand until it is most temperature. Add ginger, nuts and vanilla and beat by hand until it begins to hold its shape. Pour onto buttered pan swirling it to give attractive top, to ¾" depth. Chill until hard. Wrap (see above) as is or cut into squares and wrap each neatly in saran to pack into gift boxes.

COLORED CANDIED ORANGE PEEL:

Wash 3 large navel oranges. With sharp - pointed paring knife, slit the skin from top to bottom at 8 even intervals. Slip tip of knife under slit and peel off the 8 skin sections. Thus you will have 24 pieces. With tip of spoon scrape off pithy white section inside until you begin to see the orange oil cells. Cover with cold water, bring to boil and boil 5 minutes. Drain. Repeat twice. This removes bitterness. Drain well. Cut into ¼" wide diagonal strips. Mix together 1 cup dark brown sugar, ½ cup water, 1 tablerspoon corn syrup. Add orange strips and boil gently for 25 minutes, stirring often. Syrup becomes quite thick and much of it is absorbed by peel. Drain through sieve. (Leftover syrup may be used in beverages or on pancakes.) Separate pieces of orange peel on a board to let them dry a little while you roll them in sugars. We rolled some in ordinary granulated sugar, some in green granulated sugar and some in red granulated sugar. For fun we rolled some in chocolate shot to increase our varieties and to our surprise it tasted good. Let these stand exposed to the air (but not to robbers) overnight so they will be firm and dry enough to handle.

These make delicious dividers in a box of cut-up and wrapped fudge or/and cookies.

LIVE LONGER

The average life expectancy of a girl born in Canada today is about 73 years compared with 68 for a boy.

Needs Help With Glasses

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS—My husband has been disabled for nine years. And I am on government allowance.

Three years ago my girl had to have glasses, as she was going behind in school. She got them. A year ago she broke them and has had to do without them, as I cannot see my way to buy them. She needs them badly. Also my boy is in need of glasses fixed or changed. Please let me know if you can help. —MRS. C.

DEAR MRS. C.—So-called extras like glasses are well nigh impossible to provide for in your circumstances. Many service clubs and agencies realize this and offer help.

To discover a resource in Belleville, get in touch with the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, 468 Union Street, Kingston.

DEAR DORIS—I am on the way with my tenth baby, but it makes no difference around here. No matter how tired or sick I am, I have to get up with my smaller ones almost every night. In the past two years I have hardly slept all night except when I tried to kill myself and was put in a hospital.

The last time I was in the hospital, my husband was able to get up and see me every night. He put on such a "good and loving husband" front. But just as soon as he gets me home, and I refuse to go somewhere or disagree with him, I get knocked black and blue. The kids are all afraid of him. My relations never phone or come near me so I have no one to turn to.

You suggest to most women to see a social worker; well, that just won't work around here. As soon as he had a drink too many, I would hear all about it with a few more pokes and kicks.

Some people just don't know what it is like to want to go out with a bunch of girls and have a bit of fun at bingo — something half decent. One of these times I will do something drastic.—JUST LORRAINE.

DEAR DORIS—As I live in the bush all year I have time for hobbies. For some time now I have been interested in character reading through a person's writing. However, I have been unable to find a study course (by mail of course) or even a book on this subject. Can you help me?—MRS. S. L.

DEAR MRS. S. L.—Don't know of any course, but a detailed handbook has recently been published on the subject. I am sending you the name of it.

Graphology is a fascinating study. I can't help but feel there is a definite connection between personality and handwriting. Authorities differ on just which twists and twirls mean what—so the student has leeway to draw some conclusions of his own!

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Corinne F. — I can't seem to get my self-confidence back.

Georgine F. — She'll get it back if I get real tough with her!

Corinne F. — I'm a college graduate, 35 years old. Back in the fifties I had three nervous breakdowns, and now I live with my mother who's 80, and my sister who's 45 and supports us all.

I'm caught in a tight squeeze now and don't know where to turn. I can't seem to hold a job, but my sister has given me an ultimatum to either become self-supporting by March or to return to the hospital as an incompetent. I thought I was all set last month when I worked as a check-out girl at the supermarket. But one of their old employees turned up and they gave her back her old position — mine. I've tried posts. Either I smoke too much or talk too much to suit the employer.

These experiences make me more fearful than ever of the outside world.

Georgine F. — The trouble with Corinne is no one has ever taken a firm stand towards her. My mother still talks of her as "my poor baby" and urges her to "just come tell Mama all about it, dear" whenever Corinne meets with a problem. Then Mama agrees with her that everyone else is mean and picking on her little angel.

Well, I'm fed up. I could curl up and collapse too if I let myself go. But I keep going because there's no one to come crying to. And now Corinne had better quit bellyaching to my mother and me. Either she's well or she's still sick. If she's well, she must support herself and help me with our mother. If she's sick, then she must return to the hospital for treatment.

Putting it to her this way may make her stick to a job. So far, she tries to get fired.

The Council: Here's a vivid example of the need for treating a whole family, not just the patient, in cases of mental illness. A rehabilitation expert could "interpret" Corinne more accurately to her mother and sister who, at present, seem to be doing all the wrong things. One acts over-soft, the other over-severe. Since they are well-meaning people, each hobbled by her own rigid attitude, we do not condemn them but urgently advise them to have a few interviews with one of the professionals who understands Corinne.

The royal road back, however, must be carved by Corinne herself. And she can do it! Enlightened employers increasingly in numbers each month, impressed by the testimony of physicians, union leaders, personnel experts that a history of mental illness is not a valid ground for denying employment. It is ordinarily to be regarded on a par with physical illness.

So Corinne must try to shake off her defeatism. And the best way to start is to focus on two or three simple, attainable goals. As a college graduate, surely there are useful jobs she can fill. But she should lower her sights. Stop looking for The Perfect Position. A humble post where she really tries to please, (rather than to flee by being fired), may soon grow into the Almost-Perfect job, for it will prove a few things about her which need proving.

Then she might sign up for a course, perhaps leading to a master's degree. Even if she never gets the big parchment, the goal becomes a bright light in her life. And it leads to rubbing shoulders with lots of humans. Also, her activity for a social life of sorts through signing up for bobby classes at a Y, a library or a museum.

For both sisters we recommend a daily dose of patience. Corinne seems scared that she can't "measure up." But once she realizes her goal needn't be tomorrow the world, but merely tomorrow an honest try, she'll keep plugging upward.

BABY TEETH

If a small child loses one of his baby teeth prematurely, he should be taken to the dentist promptly, says the national health department.

Argyll Chapter IODE Holds Yule Meet

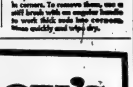
On December 5th, the Argyll Chapter, I.O.D.E. held their annual Christmas meeting at the home of Mrs. E. E. Willcocks, Redmerville Road.

The 2nd vice-Regent, Mrs. Willcocks welcomed everyone present and presided for the meeting.

Mrs. Willcocks called on Mrs. J. Cousins, educational convener for her report. Mr. Robert Burr, B.C.I. won the $100 scholarship and Mr. Bruce Fotn Moira Secondary School won the Grade 10, prize.

Special plans were then discussed regarding the Christmas treat for the adopted school at Consecon.

Mrs. F. Burtt, services at home and abroad convener, mentioned that the sewing and knitting articles were in and that the quota was over and above for the year in this project. Christmas social service work was discussed.



Mrs. L. Digby reported that the next citizenship court will be held on December 14th and a special meeting is called to make plans for this event.

It was decided that January 9th will be the next meeting date due to the holiday season.

A delightful social hour followed and Mrs. Mac Smith, Mrs. Bailey, Mrs. O. Allan and Mrs. K. Cousins were the lucky winners at bingo and Mrs. D. Harden was the lucky winner of the draw prize.

Mrs. H. Campbell, Mrs. A. Smith and Mrs. L. Davis from Trenton; Mrs. E. Loucks and Mrs. B. Rousse from Frankford and Mrs. V. Shiels from Belleville were the hostesses for the evening and served refreshments.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: How should a dinner napkin be opened and placed on the lap? Some people, I've observed, open the napkin completely, while others open it only half way. Which method is considered correct form? — H.K.B., Staten Island, N.H.

Answer: Luncheon-size napkins are unfolded completely and placed wide open on the lap. Larger dinner napkins, however, are opened lengthwise, but are left folded in half across the knees.

Question: A friend just had a baby. I'd like to send her a cheque to buy something for the infant that is really needed. This is their first baby, so naturally several showers were given in advance and the baby is well taken care of as far as clothes and other equipment are concerned. I understand she has not bought a carriage yet, so I thought a cheque that could be applied toward the purchase of one would be acceptable. What do you think? — Mrs. S.Y., Chicago, Ill.

Answer: A cash gift is certainly more practical when a baby is so well-outfitted and, as you say, might well be used to help buy something that is genuinely needed. Since the new mother is a good friend, a gift in the form of a cheque would be considered proper in this instance.

Question: We've been invited to a housewarming, and would like to know if we should bring a gift. If this is customary, what sort of gift would be appropriate? — Mrs. H.M., New Haven, Conn.

Answer: Guests usually bring gifts, although they needn't be elaborate or costly. Coasters, a telephone memo pad, assorted matches, a trivet, a broom for the fireplace, a game for the playroom, a cigarette box or a large ash try are typical of gifts that are appropriate for a housewarming.

Question: My husband and I have been invited to the wedding of a friend's daughter. Unfortunately, my husband is recovering from a serious illness, and cannot attend. A number of people I rarely get a chance to see will be at the reception, and I'd very much like to go. Would it be proper for me to attend the wedding and reception alone?

Mrs. C. W., Baltimore, Md.

Answer: Yes. Unlike an invitation to a dinner party, which usually implies that acceptance by both husband and wife is preferable, an invitation to a wedding and reception is a little more flexible. If either the husband or wife can't attend, the other still may do so as representative for the family, so it would be quite proper to accept for yourself, but decline for your husband.

Big Children Age Faster Says Expert

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mothers who want big bouncing babies could be wrong, says a Halifax pediatrician.

Bigger children may age faster and be more prone to degenerative diseases than the smaller children of past generations, Dr. William A. Cochrane said in an interview here.

"If we're going to prevent heart disease and obesity we should start with our children, not wait until they're 40 or 50 and their eating patterns are set," he said.

Studies show that children from the ages of nine to 15 are 15 per cent heavier than children of the same age were 50 years ago. And of all children today, 10 to 12 per cent are overweight.

"I recommend for children skim milk in preference to ordinary milk, less eggs and butter and animal fats."

Dr. Cochrane, associate professor of pediatrics at Dalhousie University, said he gives his own children skimmed milk — and very little ice cream.

U.C.W. Meeting

WELLINGTON — The December meeting of the United Church Women was held in the Sunday school room of the church with the president, Mrs. H. Pierson giving the opening prayer, preceded by quiet music by Mrs. C. Burr.

The C.G.I.T. group attended in a body.

It was announced that the next general meeting will be held January 3rd and the chairmen of committees are requested to bring in their annual reports to that meeting.

Mrs. C. Burr accompanied the singing of carols. Miss Viola Valleau gave a Christmas reading. "My Most Memorable Christmas" by Pearl Buck. Solos by Mrs. E. Pettingall and Mrs. Reg. Bishop were much enjoyed.

The film "On Earth Peace" was introduced by Mrs. H. Nash, who also read the commentary during the showing of pictures by Miss Valleau. A number was sung by the Misses Barbara Shortt, Velma Vanderwater and Carol Allison. Miss Judy Pettingill delighted with a song.

The meeting closed with a prayer by the president after which the social committee of Mrs. J. Dick, Mrs. W. Jackson, Mrs. A. Adams and Mrs. Sharpe served lunch.

Friends Honor Mother-to-Be

2ND THURLOW — Mrs. Robert Atkins entertained about 30 friends and neighbors at a stork shower in honor of Mrs. Sam Peoples and new baby on Thursday evening. The room was prettily decorated with pink and white streamers and bells. The evening was spent in games and contests.

Later a basket decorated for the occasion and filled with gifts was presented. Doris Rankad everyone for the lovely gifts.

Refreshments were served and social time spent.

Women's Institutes

MOIRA W. I.

MOIRA — The Moira W.I. meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Ross Ketchason with an attendance of 10 members and one visitor.

The vice-president, Mrs. Elmer Thompson opened the meeting in the usual manner and letters were read after which business was dealt with which included the setting of a price for the flower committee requirements. The president in the absence of the program was in charge of this portion of the meeting with members as follows: a reading by Marjorie Thompson; a tree contest; a reading by Eva Farrell; musical selection by Mrs. Elmer Thompson and a reading by Jean Thompson.

Lunch was served by the hostess and her assistants.

Effort Being Made to Speed Probing of Labor Troubles Between 2 Marine Unions

OTTAWA (CP)—An effort is being made behind the scenes to speed up the federal investigation of labor troubles on the Great Lakes.

Mr. Justice T. G. Norris met privately Wednesday with commission counsel Charles Dubin and SIU lawyer Gordon Henderson amid speculation that a new showdown was brewing over the slow progress of the inquiry.

The Vancouver jurist, who has held 65 public sessions in his searching investigation of union strife and shipping disruptions in the marine industry, has urged the SIU to avoid "trivialities" and concentrate on the issues before him.

"There are big issues here which have to be met—and I think should be met, head-on," said Mr. Justice Norris, in urging the union to cut short its parade of rank-and-file members as witnesses.

More than 20 sailors have entered the witness box in the last three days to praise their union, support their officers and decline their gratitude for improvements won by the SIU in wages and working conditions.

'CONSTRUCTIVE IMPROVEMENT'

"There is no doubt about it—that conditions have improved with this union," said Mr. Justice Norris.

"But this does not meet the issues before this commission."

He said the big issues is "a power which might exist"—apparently a reference to SIU President Hal C. Banks, said to dominate the union.

Eight SIU members gave evidence Wednesday, testifying that they had the right to speak on union affairs at meetings, participate on union committees, vote in union elections and benefit from union services.

"This commission or any other commission could not sit here long enough to hear everything that might be said by every member of the union," said Mr. Justice Norris.

Mr. Henderson, who entered the hearings for the first time insisted that the SIU must be allowed to meet the issues as it sees them—unless the judge defines what he regards as the main issues.

The Ottawa lawyer is the ninth lawyer to take a public hand in presenting the SIU's side of the story of inter-union rivalries on the Great Lakes.

In presenting its case, the SIU is reaching now the number of days taken by the Canadian Labor Congress and Upper Lakes Shipping Limited in presenting their cases to Mr. Justice Norris.

The judge has warned that he may be forced to set a time limit on direct evidence and cross-examination to speed up hearings which began last August and seems destined to continue well into 1963.

The investigation was ordered by the federal government after a fight between the SIU and the CLC-backed Canadian Maritime Union resulted in disruptions to shipping on the Great Lakes, including a threatened shutdown of the St. Lawrence Seaway.

Premier Bennett Says Govt. Will Aid Doukhobors

VANCOUVER (CP)—Premier Bennett said Wednesday the provincial government will help Sons of Freedom Doukhobors re-establish in any part of British Columbia they wish.

In an interview, Mr. Bennett criticized the federal government and Immigration Minister Fulton for building a special prison for Doukhobors at Agassiz in the southern Fraser Valley.

He also criticized Toronto television personality Gordon Sinclair for remarks made on a television program Tuesday night about the Doukhobors and their relationship with B.C.

Mr. Bennett said B.C. had made the Doukhobors first-class citizens, all before the Bill of Rights.

Mr. Sinclair said in Toronto that "under no condition or any combination of conditions" would he make an apology for the remarks he made.

He said it was "a national disgrace that Doukhobors, Canadians by birth, are being punished around."

"Sure they are on our backs," he said "but they are Canadians as I am a Canadian and shouldn't be pushed around."

He said he found no fault in the analogy he drew with the Doukhobor situation and the treatment of Canadian - Japanese during the Second World War.

Officer Resigns Before Council Can Act

PETROLIA, Ont. (CP)—Cpl. Paul Dore, whom a report on the town police force said failed to perform his duties in a manner to satisfy the requirements of his position," has resigned.

The report, prepared by Inspector R. W. Taylor of the Ontario Police Commission and considered by town council Monday, recommended Cpl. Dore be asked to resign.

Councillor William Stobbs, chairman of council's police committee, said Wednesday night the recommendation put council "on the spot."

If the corporal hadn't resigned council would have been unable to pay for the cost of holding a public inquiry into the ability of the corporal to perform his duties, Councillor Stobbs said.

"His frequent night duties helped keep the local ruffians in line," he said, adding that part of the trouble resulted from a personality clash between Cpl. Dore and Chief Constable Peter Emonds, whom the report said failed to show him best judgment in his position, possibly because of limited experience.

Councillor Stobbs said Cpl. Dore will be given an unqualified recommendation if he seeks work with another police force.

Council requested the police commission investigation following a challenge from Elbert Landon, a former mayor, who accused the force of using a "Gestapo tactics," especially with regard to traffic violations.

Going to Market

Britain's ECM Membership Bid Still a Painful Pill to Swallow

By GODFREY ANDERSON

BRUSSELS (AP) — The painful progress of Britain's slow-motion courtship of Europe will probably dominate 1963 far beyond the six Common Market nations.

Wherever businessmen meet in Britain or on the continent, the Brussels negotiations are a main talking - point. Will they succeed and when? If they fail, what next? Much else depends on their success. The entry of Denmark and Norway, for instance, the possible association of so-called neutrals—Sweden, Switzerland and Austria—and maybe the later coming in of Irish nations as Israel and Spain.

But Britain is the first big pill the Six must absorb if their present market of 170,000,000 is to expand to rival the major trading blocs of Russia and West. Some, mainly the French, seem to be having trouble in getting it down.

Meanwhile the uncertainty is bad for business — in Britain. The Six — France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Holland and little Luxembourg—go their booming ways.

It is true their balance of trade deteriorated further in the summer. Exports to non-member countries dropped a little. Imports continued to grow. But their experts say there is nothing to worry about. The economy is healthy and expanding, if at a slower rate.

GROWTH FORECAST

An average growth of 4.8 per cent is still forecast for the Six in the 1960 - 1970 decade. Increases in their gross national products are expected to give an average community increase of 58.1 per cent during the same period.

A report prepared in Brussels by French economist Pierre Uri and a group of five other experts says the population of the Common Market area should reach 175,000,000 by 1965. Employment should rise by seven per cent and the 6-hour week is expected to spread progressively in all the member countries.

It all looks healthy enough. What do the individual club members say?

France is preoccupied about her farm problems, although she roughly half the arable land in the market as it now stands and has embarked on a costly drive to nail down a close-at-hand market within the community, which would have built - in advantages over any Canadian or Australian growers.

West Germany's traditional trading partners have been the United States and even the Common Market. Its two-way trade with them showed a 10-per-cent jump in the first half of 1962. The gradual lowering of tariffs — now 50 per cent below the 1957 level on manufactured goods — has brought more imported items into German shops. But there have been a few spectacular price drops.

Italy has probably never had it so good, despite a continuing unemployment problem in the south. Her exports to her Common Market partners leaped 28 per cent in 1962, while her imports from them rose 20 per cent. This rate of increase may drop next year, but the general air in Rome is ode of optimism.

Half of Belgium's exports go to other Common Market countries, although exports to outsiders fell off slightly in the face of keener competition and tariff barriers. However, the outlook is good ,order books are well filled and production is slowly rising.

Industrial production in Holland went up 30 per cent, while the national product rose 19 per cent. Market membership has resulted in a slight increase in food prices, which were formerly lowest among the Six. Wages have been raised towards those prevailing in other member nations.

Final figures for 1962 community trade are not yet available, but the trend is everywhere good.

Club President Says $25,000 Collected Spent

VANCOUVER (CP) — Elmo Johnson, president of a holding "fun club," in Vancouver and Victoria, says the $25,000 collected for organization so far has been spent.

The registrar of companies has requested the Dolphin Columbia cabinet to cancel the registration of Mr. Johnston's organization — called Dolphin Recreations Limited — following an investigation prompted by the Vancouver Better Business Bureau.

The bureau estimates that Dolphin Recreations Limited has collected about $100,000 in cash and promissory notes from members and prospective members.

The cabinet is expected to announce a ruling within a few days.

In an interview, Mr. Johnston said about $25,000 has been collected by selling $300 subscriptions at $10 down and $10 a month. However, he said, his expenses have also been $25,000 —mostly in salaries and office overhead.

MEMBERS GAMBLING'

Mr. Johnston, a former cemetery plot salesman, said present members are gambling their money but if the project goes ahead they will have a membership in a very small fee which will then cost (future members) $1,000."

Members sign a contract stating they could not cancel their subscription until it was paid for, Mr. Johnston said, adding:

"A number of people have stopped paying, and although we tell them they must pay we have not sued anyone and don't intend to in the future."

He said women members outnumber men about two to one.

Dolphin Recreations Limited was called Bachelor Recreations in a name change changed in July. Memberships were sold originally to persons described as bachelors and bachelorettes. Rules were changed later to include married couples.

In the interview Mr. Johnston said he had a 1,200-member club in operation in Calgary where a $350,000 curling rink had been built. He said he was organizing a club in Regina.

The registrar of companies contends Mr. Johnston's company is selling shares while it has no assets.

ROMANOFF'S TO CLOSE

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP)—Mike Romanoff, 69, said Wednesday he is closing the swank, Hollywood-oriented restaurant that has borne his name for 25 years. He blamed a trend toward informality. He said: "There is no longer room here for an elegant restaurant to

Judge Doubts Constitutional Validity of a Section of Ont. Mental Hospitals Act

TORONTO (CP)—An Ontario Supreme Court judge says he doubts the constitutional validity of a section of the Ontario Mental Hospitals Act.

Mr. Justice W. J. Spence Wednesday questioned the procedure under which an Owen Sound district farmer was committed to a mental hospital 14 months ago.

Mr. Justice Spence invited argument from Justice Minister Donald Fleming and Ontario Attorney - General Frederick Cass on the point.

Frederick Fawcett, who has refused to pay property taxes on his 300 acres of former Crown land at Collingwood near Owen Sound, was committed to the Ontario Hospital at Penetanguishene in October, 1961, after being remanded by Magistrate A. S. Stewart of Owen Sound for mental examination on six criminal offences.

Mr. Justice Spence is trying the issue of Mr. Fawcett's sanity. Fawcett, a heavily-built, partly bald man; sat in the courtroom between two attendants.

DOUBTS CAN CERTIFY

The judge said he doubted that a provincial officer could be authorized to certify a man mentally ill and confine him to a hospital without a court order.

He said a magistrate, acting under the Criminal Code of Canada, could refer a person to an institution for mental examination after hearing medical artists, as way done in Fawcett's case. He said he was startled that under the Mental Hospitals Act, the superintendent of the institution where he person was confined could say he was mentally ill and keep the person there.

Mr. Fawcett's counsel said his client should have been returned to the magistrate who, after considering psychiatric reports, might decide to commit him to a hospital. He said a person remanded for mental examination must be returned to the magistrate within 30 days.

Crown counsel F. L. Wilson said charges still were outstanding against Fawcett. Police allege he chased two tax assessors from his property at gunpoint and fired at their car.

A Toronto psychiatrist testified Wednesday that, not only is Mr. Fawcett sane, but he is of above-average intelligence.

The Ontario department of health was required Wednesday to answer a writ of habeas corpus requested by Fawcett's lawyer demanding it show cause why he should be detained in the mental hospital.

Psychiatrist Dr. Allen G. Crisp told the court that after four examinations of Fawcett he concluded the farmer was a "pleasant, likeable person."

Dr. Crisp said: "He is sane, and no sane person should be detained."

Mr. Fawcett contends that because his farm was a Crown grant — passed on to his father paid £80 for it in 1865 — he should not have to pay taxes. The case is continuing.

SHOWS BLACK CHRIST

LONDON (Reuters) — The controversial painting Black Crucifixion, banned in South Africa, was exhibited in St. Paul's Cathedral here Wednesday. The painting, by colored artist Ronald Harrison, shows a Negro Christ, said to resemble Nelson Mandela, Pan-Africanist Luthuli of South Africa. Two white Roman soldiers in the picture are said to resemble South African Premier Verwoerd and Justice Minister Vorster.

Convicted Gambler Says His Powers Imaginary

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP)—The reputed one-time king of upstate New York gambling said Wednesday he had called the former first deputy police chief to a midnight meeting to congratulate the officer on a promotion that records show was not made until three months later.

Convicted gambler Percy Harris told the state investigation commission in Buffalo P. H. he used in a telephone conversation with Francis Ryan, the former deputy chief, was a ploy for police headquarters.

The commission is investigating alleged links between police and racketeers in this central New York city.

Commission Chairman Jacob Crumet asked whether Harris' statement meant that the gambler was a "source of power" at police headquarters.

"Maybe in some peoples' minds," Harris said, adding that his power was imaginary.

The testimony, at the fifth session of a public hearing, came as the commission chairman produced what he said was a transcript of a telephone conversation between Ryan and Harris in February, 1960.

ONE OF SEVERAL

The transcript was one of several the commission said it made of wiretaps of phone conversations between Harris and Syracuse policemen.

Ryan, who resigned Monday, said he had known the gambler since 1937.

Ryan's resignation followed that of Police Chief Harold F. Kelly, who relinquished his post amid allegations of police corruption that were given at the hearing, which ends today.

A three - man commission headed by Mayor William F. Walsh temporarily has taken control of police activities.

In another development Wednesday, veteran Syracuse patrolman John Mostack submitted his resignation. Mostack testified last week that he had contributed his "share of business" in New York City in 1950.

Earlier, Harris acknowledged he had been a man of influence in Syracuse and a visitor to police headquarters. He said his visits to headquarters had ended when he was told not to come "on account of reporters." He did not say who made the request.

NEWSPAPERS STRIKE

ROME (Reuters)—Italy was without newspapers today as newspaper men throughout the country began an eight-day strike. Reporters and editors working for daily newspapers and news agencies walked out, of their offices after contract talks broke down.

Say Witnesses Would Have Acted Same Way

HULL, Que. (CP)—Two defence witnesses testified Wednesday that they probably would have acted in the same manner as Hull, Que., doctor charged with criminal negligence in the death of a baby, had they been placed in the same circumstances at the delivery.

Testimony to this effect was given by Dr. Jacques Gagnon, obstetrics specialist at Misericorde Hospital, Montreal, and Dr. Lise Fortier, 37, professor of gynecology at the University of Montreal, in the Quebec Court of Queen's Bench trial of Dr. J. Conrad Simard, 49.

Dr. Simard was charged with criminal negligence in the Feb. 26 death of Jean Bussiere, born three days previously to Geralda Bussiere, 27, an unwed woman from Ottawa.

The defence called the last of its four witnesses at Wednesday's sessions. The trial was expected to end today.

'HYPOTHETICAL CASE'

Defence counsel Raymond Daoust of Montreal asked both Dr. Gagnon and Dr. Fortier how they would have acted in a hypothetical case with circumstances similar to that of the delivery in which Dr. Simard participated. Dr. Simard was not mentioned by name in the question.

Dr. Fortier, who said she had delivered more than 1,000 babies, said she probably would have done the same if placed in the same circumstances.

She said it now was normal to use forceps in a delivery if no progress is being made after an interval of about an hour.

She said there was a risk of brain hemorrhage when forceps are used, but on the other hand if they are not, the baby might die.

In earlier testimony, Dr. Pierre Fournier, pathologist in charge of the autopsy, said death was due to pneumonia brought about by compression on the brain by use of forceps.

Dr. Gagnon said he did not think a doctor would be committing criminal negligence if he behaved in the manner outlined in Mr. Daoust's hypothetical case.

He, too, probably would have acted the same way. The use of forceps was not dangerous as long as the instruments were employed by a doctor who knew how to use them.

Sean O'Casey, Ireland's Great Dramatist, Will Not Show Plays in Country

TORQUAY, England (CP)—Sean O'Casey's misty eyes searched for an ashtray but finally his wife had to guide his hand—a hand that had gripped both picks and pens.

O'Casey was born in a Dublin slum 82 years ago. In those 82 years he went from poverty to a comfortable income, from obscurity to fame as one of Ireland's greatest dramatists.

"Bloody near time," the frail man said a bit grumpily from inside layers of sweaters and mufflers as he sat in front of an electric heater. "The money might have come earlier."

He brushed back wisps of white hair trickling from beneath his little felt cap and puffed his pipe.

"My eyes have got worse in the last six months," O'Casey said sadly in an interview in his apartment in this Devon resort town.' "I have to expect it I suppose. I don't really mind except that I can't read. Eileen has to be my eyes now.

"But I have to keep on working. I don't want to be a dead thing walking around, useless."

BANNED IN DUBLIN

The strange thing about O'Casey, as an Irish dramatist, is that although his plays deal sympathetically with the Irish people, since 1958 he has not be allowed his work to be performed professionally in Ireland.

That year the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Dublin objected to The Drums of Father Ned, a play he regarded as anti-clerical in his attacks on bigotry, materialism and phoney piety.

The archbishop publicly announced he wouldn't permit any priest in his diocese to say a votive mass for the festival that was to produce the play if any work by O'Casey or James Joyce were performed.

"That started all the pious people protesting," O'Casey said. "All the religious societies got up on their hind legs and demanded the play be rejected. The committee took fright and worked in such a way that I decided to withdraw the play."

The aged playwright waited for Dublin to protest against the archbishop's stand.

"It was an impudent and an uncalled-for thing to ban a play written by me, one of my best plays, and a play that was hopeful and joyous and gay, with nothing in it that anybody could possibly object to."

AUDIENCE RIOTED

He twisted his all-but-useless glasses in his hand. The perfectly round, old - fashioned lenses swung slowly to and fro as he recalled his disappointment that the Irish people had remained silent. The Archbishop had won, so O'Casey decided to ban all his plays in Ireland forever.

Conflict in Dublin over an O'Casey play was not new. The audience had rioted at the first production of The Plough and the Stars 35 years before.

"Rowdy, clenching, but well-groomed hands reached up to drag down the fading black and gold front curtain," O'Casey recalled. "Others, snarling curiously, tried to tug up the very chairs from their roots in the auditorium, while some, in a frenzy, pushed at the stout walls to force them down.

"And in the midst of the fume, the stench, the shouting, Yeats the poet, as mad as the maddest there, pranced on the stage, shouted out his scorn, his contempt, his long hair waving, confronting all those who cursed and cried out shame and vengeance on the theatre."

And all this because O'Casey had dared to suggest that the cause of the Irish rebels was not 100 per cent right; because he wrote about an Irish girl who was not 100 per cent pure; and because he showed the Republican flag inside a pub.

TB AFFECTED EYES

There is no violence in him now. He lives quietly here with his wife, writing articles and talking to occasional visitors. His 32-year-old daughter studies drama in London. His son died of leukemia.

O'Casey sat there in the hot room and his pale, egg-white eyes that can see only colors peered through blue pipe-smoke as his thoughts went way back to beginnings.

He was the last of 13 children. Environment killed eight at an early age, and young Sean caught tuberculosis that lodged in his eyes.

"There was one happy result of that, though," he chuckled. "There are very few evils that haven't got some kernel of good in them, and the kernel of good in that one was that I couldn't go to school. I was saved that terrible oppression."

Left to roam alone, O'Casey, unable to see properly, developed other senses.

"There must have been at that time the first inception of things seen and things heard within myself because I had nobody to interpret them for me but myself," he said. "I had to form my own opinions about everything when I was only six or seven years old and I had to make my own amusements."

BECAME LABORER

His father died about that time. His brother kept the family going, and at the age of 16 O'Casey became a laborer. This did him good. He was able to buy enough food, for the first time, with his earnings and the fresh air and exercise left him a "vigorous, gay, healthy, songsinging young man."

He joined an amateur dramatic society, wrote many short stories and plays, and then there began his association with the Abbey Theatre of Dublin, with William Butler Yeats and Lady Gregory, the key figures in the Irish literary renaissance.

His first major play to be accepted by the Abbey Theatre was The Shadow of a Gunman, a realistic drama concerning what, O'Casey usually refers to as his Dublin brogue as "d' troobles in Oirland."

"They accepted that to my delight because I thought that I was going to become a rich man and could give up work immediately." But the financial returns were small.

"I found that I'd have to go to work at six o'clock in the morning just the same as if I'd never written a play."

While he helped build cattle sidings he thought about his plays, jotted down notes and worked on handwritten drafts at home. "And this took years."

Habits of observation learned in his youth stayed with him and helped produce such masterpieces as The Plough and the Stars and Juno and the Paycock.

"I was interested in everything around me. My sight was poor but I still had a keen sense of observation and I watched carefully for the little foibles, gestures and eccentricities of that individual or the other individual, and I never forgot them once I saw them.

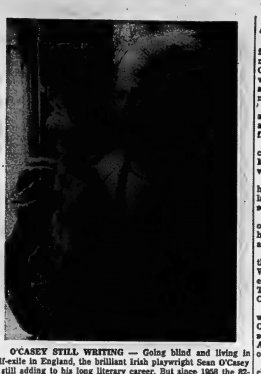
"I had a very acute ear for any little phrase that interested me. It remained in my mind. I usually added to it, or wove another completely different phrase from it, to suit my own fanciful idea of what a character might say in a play.

"It's a never-ending work. You must never separate yourself from real life if you're going to write a play. You must be ready to hear anything at everything, because you never know when a person may use an extraordinary and interesting remark that may be witty — unconsciously in most cases, but consciously to you—and you store it up, and you may use it years afterwards."

The heroine of Juno and the Paycock is a proud, courageous woman intent on being a blind ing force in her family. Such a character reappears in many O'Casey plays and critics trace this repetition to O'Casey's feelings about his own mother.

WON'T GO HOME

"There are thousands of Junos in the Irish slums, he said. "The Irish people are kind, generous and self-sacrificing — the working classes I mean. Juno is not an uncommon thing among the slums, and my own mother was a typical example of what a Juno could be, and was.



"I knew hundreds of them, and always had a profound respect and regard for them, toiling through life under tremendous difficulties and keeping a bright heart among it all."

O'Casey's plays now are on university courses. His plays have "classical status" and when London's Mermaid Theatre produced three of them this summer it was as if they had been taken from the shelves for a periodic airing. Many people were surprised to find that O'Casey is still alive and is still writing.

He has lived in England for 36 years. He says he will never go home. The control of the Roman Catholic church over Ireland is too much for him.

"At least nine-tenths of the English people are completely indifferent to religion and consequently can live in peace here," he said. "The English don't ask you what you are, or who you are, or what you believe. They don't care."

The great Irishmen are passing on. Yeats, Joyce and Shaw have gone. Now only the blind O'Casey, self, - exiled genius, shrouded in his dreams to remind Ireland of her golden age of modern literature.

O'CASEY STILL WRITING — Going blind and living in self-exile in England, the brilliant Irish playwright Sean O'Casey is still adding to his long literary career. But since 1958 the 82-year-old Dublin-born dramatist has refused to allow any of his work to be performed professionally in Ireland because of a running conflict with Roman Catholic clerics in his homeland. Fish-Killing Lamprey Eel Still Active

OTTAWA (CP)—Despite advances in the fight to eliminate the sea lamprey from the Great Lakes, the fish-killing eel caused another 50-per-cent decrease in Canada's catch of lake trout from Lake Superior last year.

The annual report of the fisheries research board, tabled Tuesday in the Commons, reported a 1961 catch of 44,000 pounds of lake trout from Lake Superior compared with 107,000 pounds in the previous year. Ten years ago the catch was 1,389,000 pounds. Lake trout are the lamprey's favorite prey.

The report said counts taken on 20 Canadian streams indicated a drop of 25 per cent in the number of eels coming up to spawn. "Unfortunately, this encouraging indication was counterbalanced by an increase in the lamprey stocks of United States streams by 80 per cent."

The lamprey, unknown in the Great Lakes until 1921, has eliminated commercial fishing in four of the Great Lakes and have almost eliminated fish from Lake Superior, the last profitable trout-fishing ground.

Spicy Food, Cigars, Rum Fail at 115

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Mrs. Josefina Encarnacion, a tiny woman who loved cigars and children almost equally, is dead.

She was either 112, 114 or 115 years old, no one knew for sure, not even Mrs. Encarnacion.

"Too many years have gone by for me to remember," she once said.

Mrs. Encarnacion was a small woman — about four feet 10 inches and 90 pounds. In her native Puerto Rico she reared about 30 adopted children, swearing by "spicy food, a good cigar and good drink of strong rum" as the sustaining forces in her incredibly healthy life.

She died Tuesday in a nursing home where she had lived since April.

You Are An Oldtimer If You Can Remember When

NEW YORK (AP)—Are you an old-timer?

An old-timer is a person who enjoys using the present as a reminiscent springboard back into the past.

You are probably an old-timer yourself if you can remember when:

Your first learned to make music by humming through a piece of tissue paper on a pocket comb.

Folks feared the first family that started cooking with gas would blow up the whole neighborhood.

No baby had got off to a proper start in life until its fond parents had had it photographed, sans diaper, lying tummy down on a cloth of plush.

Johnny not only could read —but could also write legibly and work out problems in arithmetic.

Few schoolboards would hire a married schoolmarm, because a married woman's place was in the home.

The liniment for men and horses came out of the same bottle.

You could cure most ailments either by drinking a solution of epsom salts—or by taking a bath in it.

Foods were fried in lard, and nobody had even heard of poly-unsaturated fats.

TAUGHT MUSIC

Every well-brought-up girl learned to sing and play the piano, and a father, sitting on the front porch on a summer night, could feel his eyes water in pride as he listened to his daughter perform The End of a Perfect Day.

If you left a waitress more than a dime tip, she knew for sure you were from out of town.

You told which way the wind blew by sticking your finger in your mouth and then holding it up in the air.

It was part of growing up to take a correspondence course in how to be either a ventriloquist or a private detective.

There was no such thing as a joint family bank account. If a wife wanted a new bonnet, rather than ask her husband for the money she'd save it up from her household allowance.

Yes, that's how it used to be. Remember, old-timer?

Centenary

CENTENARY — Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hancock were recent Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Edmondson and family in Napanee.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. R. Postma on the arrival of a baby son.

Mr. and Mrs. Reg Edmondson were supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Archibald on Friday evening.

The December meeting of the Centenary AOTS Club was held in the church hall Monday evening with Harold V. Houting as guest speaker.

Shadow of Gen. de Gaulle Broods More Massively Than Ever Over European Scene

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON (CP)—Larger than life-size, the shadow of Gen. de Gaulle broods more massively than ever over the European scene.

Fortified by a secure majority of loyal supporters in the newly elected Parliament, the 72-year-old chief of state goes into the last three years of his seven-year term with powerful new backing for controversial policies based on the willpower of a single individual.

(De Gaulle appears certain to press forward with his plan for a nuclear force and to resist, perhaps even more strongly than in the past, Britain's bid to join the European Common Market.

The French president's enhanced authority thus ensures complications for the new European.

From the British standpoint it is felt that de Gaulle's policies frequently rest on a narrow and exclusive view of French national interest, incompatible with the move towards European togetherness. Similarly there are doubts about the wholesomeness of democratic values in the German Federal Republic, caused by the Bonn government's action in imprisoning members of the staff of the Hamburg publication Der Spiegel.

In the French elections, conducted in two rounds Nov. 18 and Nov. 25, voters gave an unexpectedly powerful blessing to candidates carrying the Gaullist banner.

Out-and-out de Gaulle supporters and their allies won 260 of the 482 seats in the National Assembly, the first time in French history that a single political group has won an absolute majority.

The Gaullist triumph shattered the multi-party system, biggest losses being suffered by the independents, representatives of the traditional right.

Communists and Socialists emerged somewhat stronger, partly because of electoral pacts involving a pooling of forces against the Gaullists. Socialist Leader Guy Mollet, who owed his re - election to Communist support though often critical of the extreme Left, saw the link-up as a temporary expedient. But some feared the emergence of a Popular Front, the old bogy of pre-war days.

Certainly the opposition to de Gaulle has moved sharply to the left. If the ultimate result proved to be another Popular Front, most observers would place the blame on de Gaulle's determination to get rid of the old political system.

It was felt that de Gaulle's clear-cut triumph would stiffen his resolve to exact the biggest possible price for British entry into Europe. De Gaulle has always been jealous of the close relationship between what he calls the "Anglo-Saxons," Britain and the United States, and fearful that Britain would change the nature of the new Europe.

The biggest event affecting France was the advent in July of peace to an independent Algeria. After nearly eight years of bitter fighting between French and Arab and a war-within-a-war by diehard supporters of a "French Algeria," French and rebel negotiating teams reached peace accords at Evian in Switzerland, leading to the Moslem takeover in mid-summer.

The transition was accomplished with remarkably little bloodshed, despite a struggle for power among both the Moslem leadership and some of the rebel military groups.

Victory in the power struggle finally went to Ben Brlla at the expense of moderate - minded Ben Khedda, who had headed the provisional government in exile, and Belkacem Krim, one of the Evian negotiators.

Algeria faces a hard future. Gravely weakened by the long-drawn war and the loss of more than half of its European population, it has to try to build a new state against a background of unemployment, economic strains and shortages of trained workers of nearly every category. The leaders of the new Algeria have vaguely socialist aspirations and want to construct an Arabo-Islamic nation, but ideology seems likely to give way to pragmatism at least in the early months.

ECM SPLIT WIDENS — Key figures in negotiations for Britain's entry into the European Common Market are Prime Minister Macmillan and Gen. Charles de Gaulle, who met this year for talks near Paris. Listening to the statesmen is Mr. Macmillan's wife, Dorothy. Gen. de Gaulle's sweeping victory in recent elections is expected to strengthen resistance to Britain's ECM bid. (CP from UKIO)

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Bud Vandervoort, sports editor of the Syracuse Herald Journal, has a problem. He sits at his desk huddled over a map of the northern United States and Ontario, closes his eyes, and pinpoints places with a small ice-pick.

He hopes, he says, by this method to accidentally hit upon the possible future home of the Syracuse Chiefs, his city's entry in the Eastern Professional League.

Apparently his latest "stab" landed squarely on a city near the mouth of the Moira River. Somewhere, to be exact, between the Federal Building and the Bay Bridge.

Just to test his method, he grabbed the telephone and called the sports department of this newspaper.

"Is it true?" he asked, with a slight tremor in his voice, "that the Syracuse Chiefs are moving to Belleville?"

Since his newspaper was paying the Bell tab, I told him to hold it. I rushed out to Highway 401 and discovered the United Nations Mahal has yet to pass through the sod-breaking calisthenics.

I checked Memorial Arena and was told so far no plans for enlarging the seating capacity to 4,000 had been considered.

I looked over Zwick's Island with its potential 100,000 capacity football stadium, and discovered that the foundation of the dream home of the future Belleville Blue Bombers has not been scratched.

The sad news was relayed to Bud who sighed and mentioned something about "back to the drawing board."

"Seriously," the Syracuse sports editor said, "we have been getting rumors of the Chiefs moving for the past two or three weeks. The latest, which has persisted, is that the team is locating in Belleville. That is the reason for this call."

Everything, Vandervoort said, is hush-hush and tape secret around the Chiefs administrative wigwam. Even the lesser braves refuse to pow-wow when approached. As Munkby Glasberg was wont to say, "Nobody knows nuttin'."

He did say that informative sources reveal the fact that the Chiefs' brass inside the club will stay in Syracuse —but the "move" rumors still persist.

Regular Eastern Professional Hockey League games draw between 700 and 800 fans, Vandervoort said. This in comparison to thousands that used to patronize the city's entry in the American Hockey League before it withdrew.

"The opinion of hockey men here," Bud said, "is that the Eastern Pro calibre hockey is well below that of the American League type as it was played here, and this is given as the reason for the decrease in fan support."

"On the other hand," Vandervoort said, "we have an amateur club called the Syracuse Stars, who play in another arena—in fact their own. They outdraw the Chiefs at least three to one. In fact one night when both clubs were playing here the Stars' box office take was $1,800 as compared to $700 of the Chiefs."

SOCIAL NOTE

One of the top social events of city and district sportsmen is slated for the Club Canara on January 15th, starting 6.30 p.m. It is the annual banquet and ladies' night of the Belleville District Fish and Game Association, and this year's party promises to be the best in the history of the function.

Director Bruce Kerr tells me the committee has a delicious dinner ordered. The guest speaker is Mr. Ralph Bice, woodsman, outdoors man, naturalist and writer from Kearney, Ont. Tickets are now available from directors and they are limited. Better get that pair right away.

And the night is the night of the presentation of prises of the Fishing Contest. It is not too late for that entry. It could win.

White Sox Set Record

BOSTON (AP) — Chicago White Sox established a major league record while taking American League fielding honors in 1962, the official averages showed Wednesday.

The White Sox compiled the highest collective mark, .982, and had four individual pace-setters in first baseman Joe Cunningham, second baseman Nellie Fox, short-stop Luis Aparicio and pitcher Ray Herbert.

Chicago did not make an error in 89 of its 162 games, breaking the record of 81 errorless tilts set by Cincinnati and Detroit in 154-game schedules in 1958.

Minnesota Twins and Baltimore Orioles tied for second in the club fielding at .980. Then came New York, Boston and Kansas City with .979 each.

Hay Fires Winner In Third ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Hawks Nudge Blues In 4-3 Squeaker

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ranger goalie Gump Worsley proved Wednesday night he didn't lose any form during a three-game layoff with a shoulder injury.

But the fifth-place Rangers showed they haven't improved any during his absence, losing 4-3 to first-place Chicago Black Hawks in the only NHL game Wednesday night.

Chicago outshot the Rangers 42-20 and needed two unanswered goals in the third period to come from behind for the win.

Black Hawk centre Bill (Red) Hay beat the roly-poly Worsley midway through the third period with the winning goal. Hay returned a week ago after missing four games with a charley-horse.

The win was the Hawks' sixth in the six meetings between the two teams this year. It boosted their hold in first place in the league standings to four points over the Detroit Red Wings.

DETROIT PLAYS HARD

Detroit and fourth-place Montreal Canadiens, who are seven points behind the Hawks, both play at home tonight, Boston visits Montreal and New York plays in Detroit.

Chicago and the third place Toronto Maple Leafs, six points behind the Hawks, are both idle.

In Chicago Wednesday night, the Rangers built up a 2-2 lead after two periods of play in which they were outshot 27-17.

The Hawks monopolized play in the final period, outshooting the Rangers 15-3.

The Hawks' flying Scooter Line tied it up 3-3 after two and a half minutes of bombarding Worsley. Right winger Ken Wharram scored from line-mates Stan Mikita and Ab McDonald. Seven minutes later Hay fired the winner.

Defenceman Pierre Pilote gave Chicago a 1-0 lead early in the first period when he stick-handled through the Ranger defence and beat Worsley. Dean Prentice of New York tied the score 22 seconds later when he scored from a goal - mouth scramble.

BATHGATE EVENS SCORE

Mikita put Chicago out in front again early in the second period, but Rangers' Andy Bathgate beat Chicago goalie Glenn Hall with a 20-foot drive just 23 seconds later to tie things up again.

Rangers' veteran centre Bronco Horvath tipped in a blueline drive by Doug Harvey midway through the second period for New York's last goal of the night.

Mikita's goal and assist increased his league-leading scoring lead to 28 points. McDonald and Bathgate remain tied for second spot with 26 points adding a point each in the game.

Mikita also moved out of a three-way tie to take the league lead in assists with 18. Bathgate and Detroit's Alex Delvecchio are tied behind Mikita with 17 assists.

Canadiens will be playing without veteran defenceman Tom Johnson when they meet the Bruins tonight. The club announced the 34-year-old rearguard will probably miss Canadiens' next three games with a wrist injury.

Detroit goalie Terry Sawchuk will be playing his first full game tonight against New York since suffering a shoulder injury 10 days ago.

Sawchuk was hurried into his equipment midway through the second period of the Wings' game against Detroit Sunday night when his substitute Denis Riggin tore a groin muscle attempting to stop Toronto's Dave Keon on a breakaway. Wings won 4-3.

What They Saw of It

Americans Liked Our Football

TORONTO (CP) — Ken Brown, publicity director of Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference, said Wednesday the Grey Cup game telecast carried on the American Broadcasting Company television network in the United States "was the greatest promotion Canadian football ever had."

Brown, just returned from a recruiting trip to the southern U.S., said the impact of the Grey Cup telecast there eased the conversational path to players and coaches.

"Other years I've talked to people down there and the first thing they'd say was 'Canada?' as if they can't figure we'd play football up here.

"But this trip as soon as I'd mention Canada, the reaction was, 'I saw that game —how did it come out?' So even the fog that forced a two-day game had its talking point."

Brown did not give any details of the Argonauts recruiting program.

Jim Taylor Tops In NFL

NEW YORK (AP)—Jim Taylor, in the shadow of Cleveland Browns' great Jimmy Brown for the last five seasons, stepped into the limelight today as he was named 1962 player of the year in the National Football League.

Taylor, Green Bay Packers' crashing fullback, edged quarterback Y. A. Tittle of the New York Giants in a poll conducted by The Associated Press.

Terry Baker, Oregon State's outstanding quarterback who already has an armful of pro and professional offers, was named top back in United States college ranks in another AP poll.

Taylor, 27-year-old former Louisiana State ace in his fifth year of pro ball, grabbed the award won last year by Paul Hornung, the Packers' glamorous triple-threat halfback who has been crippled by a knee injury this season.

With one more game to play in the regular season, Taylor already has tied the NFL record by scoring 18 touchdowns, all on the ground, and leads the league in scoring with 108 points.

LIONS SIGN BACK

VANCOUVER (CP)—British Columbia Lions of the Western Football Conference announced the signing Wednesday of halfback Bill Munsey from the University of Minnesota. Munsey was drafted by New York in the American Football League and was the third choice of Cleveland Browns of the National League.

Red Wings Shake up Farm Clubs

EDMONTON (CP) — Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League are reported to have ordered their two top farm teams to carry out an eight-player trade.

Edmonton radio station CHED says Edmonton Flyers of the Western League were told to send forwards Chuck Holmes and Warren Hynes and defencemen Keith (Kosiby) Walsh and Lou Marcon to Pittsburgh Hornets of the American League.

The Hornets would ship forwards Ray Ross and Norm Corcoran and defencemen Jack Price and John Mizuk to Edmonton. Mizuk played with Flyers' WHL champions last year.

Detroit also has called up rookie netminder Harrison Gray to back up regular Terry Sawchuk in case of injury. Dennis Riggin, Detroit's regular second-line netminder, was injured Sunday in a game at Detroit and was expected to be lost to Red Wings for two or three weeks.

Second for Giants Mentor

Sherman Coach of Year

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP) — Allie Sherman, of New York Giants, was voted coach of the year Wednesday in the National Football League for the second straight year.

The Associated Press ballot-ing by a committee of sports writers and broadcasters from the 14 league cities, was a scramble among five coaches.

Sherman, coach of Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Football Conference in 1954-56, shaded Washington's Bill Mc-Peak by three votes. Vince Lombardi of Green Bay Packers and Tom Landry of Dallas Cowboys were close behind, followed by George Wilson of Detroit Lions.

One member of the 42-man panel did not cast a vote in this category. Sherman received 13 votes, McPeak 10, Lombardi and Landry seven each and Wilson four. Sherman won last year when he led the Giants to the Eastern Conference title as a rookie coach. He repeated by winning the Eastern crown again.

"I am very grateful for this honor," said Sherman when informed of the results. "I didn't know anybody ever repeated in this balloting."

City Hockey League

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

Trudeau Motors remained undefeated and the Pepsi's climbed into second place in a pair of City Hockey League games played before a small crowd at Memorial Arena last night.

Trudeaus chalked up a 5-1 victory over the hapless Joyce-Rollins Combines, while Pepsi's snapped a second-place deadlock with Welbanks Motors by downing them 4-2.

Goalies Claude Carr, of Pepsi's, and Don Barclay of Trudeau's, appeared to be on their way to the loop's first shutouts but the losers scored in the dying minutes to ruin the goose-eggs in both instances.

PEPSI'S 4 - WELBANKS 2

The Pepsi's led 2-0 after one heat and 4-0 after two frames against a Welbanks squad that couldn't seem to get untracked. And when they did Claude Carr was unbeatable in the Pepsi's nets.

Eleven of the game's 12 penalties came in the third period, four of them miscondcuts to over-talkative players, and it was while Welbanks were playing four men to five at 15.29 that "Weiner" Brown took Stu Muirhead's passout and rulned Carr's shutout bid.

Norm Richards, with Muirhead and Brown assisting, cut the lead to 4-2 at 17.29 of the spirited third period but Welbanks were unable to get any closer, even by using six attackers for the final 45 seconds.

"Weiner" Waite scored the winners' initial marker on Jacklin's perfect pass at 17.42 of the first. Meanwhile Carr stole goals from Buck Ethier and Brown before McGuire beat a busy Bob Green on Baker's passout at 19.40.

Baker fooled Green with a soft backhander early in the second and Maracle sank another backhand shot at 6.48 to make it 4-0. Carr protected that lead first Muirhead and Brown, then Ethier again.

Billy McGuire and Ron Ruffert livened matters with a brisk battle midway through the final period but only received roughing minors. Baker with two, Ethier and Murray, later received misconducts for arguing with referee Tim Williams.

Pat Maracle led the Pepsi's point-getters with a goal and two assists while Bill McGuire and "Shaker" Baker got one apiece.

TRUDEAUS 5
JOYCE-ROLLINS 1

While Trudeaus were pecking away with a goal in each of the first two periods and three in the third, Barclay seemed almost assured of a shutout with the score 5-0 and just over a minute left in the game.

Bob Taylor, aided by Ronnie Hull, spoiled the "Turk's" bid at 18.43 with a close-in high shot to the corner. Earlier in the game Barclay had robbed Taylor and Hull in all alone.

The Pepsi's big line of Gary Goyer, "Pug" Kellar and "Nobber" Day again sparked the attack. Kellar fired two goals, Goyer had one goal and two assists and Day helped on a trio. Terry Fox and Eddie Martin also added goals on third-period breakaways against an unprotected Gordie Parker.

A running feud between the losers' Hyalie Bryant and Trudeaus' Jerry Mann threatened to erupt tarroughout and at one point Big Bob Taylor dropped his gloves and stick and invited Mann to settle the argument with him.

Kellar scored his first goal early to open the scoring and Goyer took a return pass from Day to make it 2-0 in the second.

The Combines were a man short when Kellar made it 3-0 prior to goals by Fox and Marineau.

Referees Williams and Lou Swerke handed out 10 penalties in all, six to the losers including a misconduct to Doug Hull. Mann and Bryant each drew three minors.

TRUDEAUS: Barclay, Gelsthorpe, Plata, Marineau, Kellar, G. Goyer, D. Day, Petrie, Fox, R. Hughes Allen, Jr. Day, G. Jones, Mann, Gilman.

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — Eddie Machen, top - ranked heavyweight boxing contender, was detained in a mental hospital today after a policeman said he found him apparently contemplating suicide.

The policeman said Machen told him he planned to kill himself because he was broke, couldn't get any more fights and "everything was all wrong."

The 30-year-old boxer was admitted to Napa State Hospital for observation.

Patrolman Bill McCluskey said he found Machen parked off a highway near Vallejo, Calif., with "a loaded gun next to him on the seat. He was writing a farewell letter."

A doctor at the hospital said Wednesday night Machen was in "satisfactory condition and has no apparent injuries." He said Machen would be examined today.

ADMITS IDENTITY

Patrolman Joe White, who took Machen from Vallejo to the hospital, gave this account:

"Officer McCluskey said Machen admitted right away who he was. Machen had fired the .32-calibre pistol three times into the mud. The farewell note was addressed to his wife in Portland, Ore.

"When we drove him to the hospital he said he felt so bad he might jump out of the car. But he was no trouble. Dressed neat - raincoat, slacks, sports coat. Trimmed mustache. But looked very tired. All worn out. Really feeling blue.

"To tell the truth, I felt sorry for the guy."

Police declined to disclose contents of the farewell note.

TO PROTECT HIM

Judge Philip Lynch issued a detaining order that sent Machen to the hospital "for his own protection."

Ranked No. 1 by the World Boxing Association and No. 2 behind former champion Floyd Patterson by Ring magazine, Machen has won 42 fights, lost four, had two draws and has scored 34 knockouts.

He has been mentioned as a possible opponent for heavyweight champion Sonny Liston and an imminent opponent for fast-rising Cassius Clay.

The Big Seven

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Stan Mikita, the five-foot-nine centre regarded by coach Rudy Pilous as the sparkplug of the Chicago Black Hawks, scored a goal and an assist in Wednesday night's game against New York for a two-point lead in the National Hockey League's individual points race.	Hull, Chicago	8 15 23
	Delvecchio, Detroit	6 17 23

Mikita now has 10 goals and 18 assists for 28 points.

Teammate Ab McDonald and New York's Andy Bathgate each gained a single point in the game to share second place with 26.

Rangers' Dean Prentice increased his 23 points to 25 with a goal and an assist, and moved into sole possession of fourth spot.

Fifth is Johnny Bucyk of Boston, idle Wednesday.

Five Players are tied for sixth with 23 each. They are Bernie Geoffrion, Montreal; Murray Oliver, Boston; Gordie Howe, Detroit; Bobby Hull, Chicago; and Alex Delvecchio, Detroit.

The leaders:

Calls For Arbitration

JFK Spanks Sports Bodies

NEW YORK (AP)—Spanked by President Kennedy for "continued bickering" that threatened United States participation in the Olympics, the Amateur Athletic Union and the new college-dominated U.S. Track and Field Federation have agreed to submit their differences to an arbitration panel.

The president called for such arbitration at his press conference in Washington Wednesday "on behalf of the country and on behalf of sports."

Kennedy warned that if the organizations refused, "we will not have an Olympic team in 1964."

"We will submit to the panel suggested by the president," said Col. Don Hull, executive director of the AAU.

"I think the president is absolutely right," said Chick Werner, head of the federation and track coach at Penn State.

WILLING TO CONFER

"The federation has stood willing to work out a solution with the AAU and 1/4m sure federation officials continue to hold that position," said Walter Byers, executive director of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, which spawned the federation.

The dispute between the two organizations over the control of amateur sports in the U.S. has raged for 2½ years. Attorney-General Robert Kennedy, the president's brother, sat in on a meeting last month between the two groups in New York at which a solution apparently was reached.

But the agreement quickly fell apart.

The NCAA, through federations set up in track, gymnastics, basketball and baseball, has challenged the right of the AAU to certify athletes as eligible for international competition. The AAU holds the right under international rules.

As a result of the dispute, participation in the Olympics and the Pan-American Games in Brazil next year is threatened.

Hornets Win First in Ten Starts

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It took a while in both cases but Pittsburgh finally ended its winless streak and Cleveland player-coach Fred Glover got the 1,000th assist of his American Hockey League career in the same game.

The Hornets, last in the AHL's Western Division, grabbed their opportunity against the next-to-last-place Cleveland club and defeated the Barons 4-2 Wednday night for their first victory in 10 games. Glover registered assist No. 1,000 on Dick Van Impe's goal.

In the only other game scheduled, goalie Ed Chadwick turned aside 23 shots and turned in his second shutout as Hershey knocked off the Eastern Division leading Quebec Aces 3-0.

Lowell McDonald, Eddie Joyal, Howie Menard and Earl Balfour got the job done for Pittsburgh. Van Impe and John Mikol tallied for Cleveland.

Les Duff put Hershey ahead 1-0 at 5:10 of the opening period, and 71 seconds later Jerry Yanoski made it 2-0. Willie Marshall scored the Bears' final goal with less than 2 minutes left in the game.

Dick Tiger Fighter Of the Year

NEW YORK (AP)—Dick Tiger, rugged middleweight champion from Nigeria, was named the 1962 winner of the Edward J. Neil Award as Fighter of the Year Wednesday.

The 33-year-old boxer-puncher was selected by the Boxing Writers Association to receive the Neil plaque at the association's annual dinner Jan. 13.

Tiger, who has won eight straight fights in the last two years, captured the world boxing association's middleweight crown with a decisive victory in 15 rounds over defender Gene Fullmer, of West Jordan, Utah, at San Francisco last Oct. 23.

The Neil Trophy is named in honor of a former Associated Press sports writer killed while reporting the Spanish Civil War. The trophy is awarded for boxing ability, character and sportsmanship.

Skowron May Quit Baseball

CINCINNATI (AP) — First baseman Moose Skowron, traded recently by New York Yankees to Los Agneles Dodgers for pitcher Stan Williams, is reported planning to quit baseball and take a 10-year contract to coach baseball at Purdue Universilty.

The Cincinnati Enquirer quotes "an authoritative source" and says Skowron is unhappy over the manner in which Yankee general manager Roy Hamey informed him of the trade.

Skowron was not available for comment on the report, but his wife said he had made no decision about the Purdue post.

Special Holiday For Howes

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—This Christmas will be a special one for Gordie Howe, the Detroit Red Wings' star right-winger.

For the first time in 19 years, he will be able to celebrate the holiday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Howe of Saskatoon. They arrived here by plane late Wednesday.

Howe, who was waiting with two of his four children to meet them at Windsor Airport, explained that although his parents have come East many times, they have never been able to arrange their timetables to be together on Christmas Day.

Will Miss Dallas Game

NEW YORK (AP)—Del Shofner, all-star end with New York Giants of the National Football League, entered hospital Wednesday for treatment of an ulcer. He is expected to miss the Giants' final game of the regular season Sunday against Dallas Cowboys.

The 'Goose' Hangs High

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Lockhart, president of the Eastern Hockey League, said Wednesday night he has suspended George (Goose) Gosselin of Clinton Comets for refusing to report to New Haven Blades under the league's disaster plan.

Gosselin, a forward, was scheduled to play with New Haven in Nashville, Tenn., Wednesday night.

He and four other players were drafted by New Haven after 14 players from the team were injured in a bus accident Sunday.

Minor Hockey

The Red Wings shaded the Maple Leafs 3-2 in a lone Eastern hockey league game played last night.

B. Healy triggered two of the winners' goals with G. Lowe getting the other one, all on solo efforts.

B. Wickens and B. Tomaso had the Leaf markers, C. Wilson helping on one.

In an exhibition game, Belleville Peewee All-Stars defeated Wellington by a 7-3 score.

Cass scored two goals and assisted on two more for Belleville. Waite, Sero, Benson, Demers and Meagher also scored while Acquafredda drew two assists. Slapkauskaus, Lowen, Demers and Mulvihill one apiece.

Channel, Burt and Lavender potted the Wellington goals.

Sports in Brief

PLANS EXHIBITION TOUR

WINNIPEG (CP)—The Canadian junior cricket team will make an exhibition tour of England next year and in 1965, the cricket board of control announced Wednesday following a weekend meeting here.

A press release said the tours by the Colts are to help promote cricket at the junior level in Canada.

Arrangements are also being made to bring a top-ranked overseas club to Canada for a 1965 exhibition tour.

LEAGUE MAY SHUFFLE

TORONTO (CP)—At least two Montreal soccer teams are considering playing in the Eastern Canada Professional Soccer League next season, it was learned Wednesday night. They are Montreal Cantalia, EXPSL winner in 1961, and Montreal Ukrainians. Five teams—Italia, Roma, Toronto City, Hamilton Steelers and Buffalo White Eagles—played in the league this year, but the Eagles may be dropped next year because of a lack of fan support.

Western Hockey

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Edmonton Flyers poured 40 shots at goaltender Gilles Villemure Wednesday night and scored on six of them to dump Vancouver Canucks 6-4 in a Western Hockey League game.

In the Southern Division, San Francisco Seals defeated Spokane Comets 5-2 at Spokane.

The Flyers got their goals from Warren Hynes, Neil Forth, Sid Finney, Bo Elik, Jack McIntyre and Barclay Plager.

Phil Maloney picked up one Canuck goal and assisted on others by Dave Duke and defencemen Al Lebrun. Trent Beatty also scored.

San Francisco scorers were Danny Belisle, Duke Edmundston, Orland Kurtenbach, Camille Bedard and Nick Mickoski. Comeau marksmen were Ray Brunel and Bev Bell.

Special OAS Report May Bear On Whether Canada Joins Group

By JACK BEST
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A report prepared for the Organization of American States may turn out to have an important bearing on the lingering issue of whether Canada is to join the hemispheric association.

It was produced by a four-man working group of the OAS legal committee appointed to study what rules and procedures should be established for admitting new members.

Canadian officials are eager to see what action is taken on the report, tabled in Washington several weeks ago and now under study by the legal committee. A special OAS conference may be called to deal with the question.

No matter how the question is disposed of, it is likely to have implications for Canada.

The OAS at present comprises the United States and 20 Latin American republics — though the government of Cuba has been excluded from its activities.

MEMBERSHIP CONSIDERED

Canada and the newly-independent Caribbean states of Jamaica and Trinidad - Tobago are the only western hemisphere states that do not belong. However, the Canadian government has long had the idea of joining under consideration.

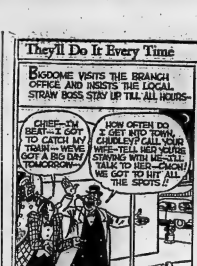
The OAS charter, signed by representatives of the 21 republics in 1948 at Bogota, Colombia, is vague on just what would be required for membership by other countries in the hemisphere. Article 2 says "all American states that ratify the present charter are members of the organization."

The main hurdle to clarify the issue of new admissions was instigated some months ago by Guatemala, and related to possible membership applications from "new states." This would not include Canada which, it has always been assumed here, could get in simply by ratifying the charter and notifying OAS.

However, in carrying out its assignment, the working group dealt in terms of "new members" generally. The expression appeared several times in its report. Apparently, it pertains to Canada as well as other prospective new members.

The working group was composed of representatives of Guatemala, Colombia, Brazil and the United States.

One suggestion that caught the eye of Canadian authorities was that a new member, besides ratifying the OAS charter, should also be required to ratify the Rio Treaty of reciprocal assistance.



Under this treaty, OAS members act jointly to deal with aggression against any of their number, whether it originates inside or outside the hemisphere.

Canadians who advocate their country's joining OAS often argue that Canada could take out membership without at the same time subscribing to the Rio pact. There is a current of feeling in Canada that association with the pact would mean involvement in conflicts that periodically arise among Latin American countries.

Another suggestion of the working group was that a prospective new member "should not have ties or obligations towards extra-continental powers which would be incompatible with its status as a member."

The question being asked here is whether extra - continental powers might conceivably be interpreted by some OAS members to include the Commonwealth.

As for OAS voting on new members, the Guatemalan representative held that applications should require unanimous approval. Colombia and the U.S. suggested a two-thirds majority, and Brazil said admission should be by simple majority vote.

Frontenacs Defeat Chiefs 3-1

KINGSTON (CP) — Kingston Frontenacs defeated Syracuse Braves 3-1 Wednesday to extend their home unbeaten streak to 16 games.

Dick Cherry set up Terry Valt, a Grade 12 student from Oshawa Generals of the Metro Junior A League, for the final goal at 16:45 of the third period.

Don Blackburn fired the winner at 10:04 of the same period, bulling through the Braves' defence to fire a backhand drive after a beautiful play by Wayne Connelly that pulled goaltender Roger Crozier out of the Syracuse net.

Bruce Gamble was spectacular in the Kingston nets as he turned aside 36 shots. Crozier made 24 saves.

ADMITS NEGROES

—NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Tulane University admitted two Negro women Wednesday. They will become the university's first known Negro students.

NOT TO BLAME

NEW YORK (AP)—Whatever it is that litters streets, it apparently isn't newspapers. Sanitation Commissioner Frank J. Lucia said Wednesday his department's waste collection has been reduced by scarcely five per cent since a newspaper strike Saturday shut off the city's 3,500,000 copies daily.

WANTS U.S. OUT

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—The Soviet Union told the United Nations Wednesday that Korean unification is impossible until United States troops withdraw from South Korea. Valerian Zorin, chief Soviet delegate, told the 110-nation political committee, "the necessary condition for all-Korean elections will be the removal of all foreign interference."

Christmas carols were sung and the concert ended with prayer by the superintendent, Jack Spencer.

Santa Claus arrived and distributed gifts, and candy was handed out to all the children.

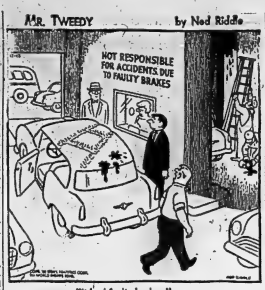
APPROVE SALE

DELHI, Ont. (CP) — Voters Wednesday approved the sale of liquor in cocktail and dining lounges.

McNaughton Not Pleased With Power Project

OTTAWA (CP) — The British Columbia government has "down - graded" the Columbia River project to divert attention from the higher power costs of its pet Peace River scheme in the North, Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton suggested Wednesday night.

"I can't prove it but looked at logically, that is what happened," he told a group of senators and members of parliament.



The general, 75, was Canadian chairman of the International Joint Commission until his retirement in April—and thus vitally involved in steps leading up to final negotiations for the treaty signed in Washington nearly two years ago but still not ratified by Canada.

"The sooner the treaty is decisively rejected the better for all concerned including the United States," he told the group of about 30 legislators. He had been invited to give them his views on the treaty.

The treaty was so embarrassingly one-sided in favor of the Americans that a good many of them were "red-faced about this bare-faced deal."

He reiterated his allegation that the fine print of the complicated treaty gives the U.S. authority forever to tell Canada how to regulate proposed B.C. storage dams for maximum U.S. hydro and flood control benefit and contrary to the best Canadian use of the water.

B.C. and the federal government are still at odds on power disposal on the Columbia while Premier Bennett is pushing ahead with the Peace River project roughly 600 miles from Vancouver.

Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD — The Masonic Temple was gaily decorated on Saturday, December 8th, by Teen Town group on the occasion of the Campbellford Memorial Hospital Auxiliary bazaar. Tea was served to the many visitors who dropped in following the Santa Claus parade.

The Senior Citizens had a 'touch and take' table, Seymour West Women's Institute had a variety of bake goods and sewing; English line U.C.W. had a bake table, the Red Cross, a candy table; Seymour East Women's Institute a variety table; the IODE a table of home baking and the Auxiliary had a table of knitted and sewn articles as well as Christmas decorations and a 'pantry shelf.'

A free draw was won by Mrs. Margaret Little, the draw for $50 won by Mrs. P. E. Allen, who kindly donated $25 to the Auxiliary. Two blankets were won by Mrs. Clair Irwin and Miss Florence McNabb.

Town Deputy Reeve Wants A County Road Commission

PICTON — "Why cannot we have a county road commission instead of having each township do all their own work," asked Deputy Reeve Randolph Clapp of Picton at County Council on Tuesday.

"Surely it would be more economical and we would experience no problem when there is difference of opinion as to which municipality should pave certain parts. With a county commission, the county would do it automatically," he observed.

Deputy Reeve Arthur Miller of Ameliasburg, said, "I agree with Mr. Clapp that it would be more economical," but observed that if the county took over all the roads, those townships which send the best orators to county council might get the most attention."

The discussion was sparked by a request by Vernon Stirker, representing Prince Edward Fruit Growers Co-op, who requested the county to take over as county road the short section of road leading from Highway 14 to the plant. "A lot of heavy traffic uses the road and we have spent a lot of money to keep it in the present good condition, but are not sure how long it will remain that way. We pay $4,000 in taxes on the building and feel that the county should maintain the road," Mr. Stirker said.

Reeve of Hallowell, Warden John Fox, and Deputy Reeve Del Huff felt the county is better equipped to look after such a road than the township.

DOES NOT CONNECT

District municipal engineer Bud Calahan noted that the road does not connect with another and thus is not a connecting link. If it were the county would take over. There is a move on to get rid of these so-called stump bits of road. Inasmuch as this road forms the boundary line between the town of Picton and Hallowell township, perhaps these two municipalities should look after it, he commented.

"If the town received the taxes from the Co-op and Sharpe Motors, we would start working on the road tomorrow," Picton Reeve B. Hepburn said.

County engineer Ron Thomson noted that Picton will have to extend its boundaries and it is conceivable that in the near future the town will annex this part of the township.

Had the road not been a boundary it is likely the county would have taken it over. It does lead to an industrial area, he observed.

Warden Fox suggested that the request be put through the proper channels to have specifications, etc., obtained and have the road committee investigate and bring in a report and recommendations at the January meeting.

Mr. Striker observed, in closing that "there is a large tract of land there very suitable for location of industry, and if someone does not do something about this road, they are holding up the promotion of industry."

Salvation Army Cheer Pots Well Patronized

PICTON — Jingling bells and the sound of Christmas music help draw attention to the Salvation Army cheer pots, which are located on Main St. Members are in attendance and report that the spirit of giving, magnified during this season, is in evidence in generous measure.

The Salvation Army co-operate with Children's Aid Society in distributing Christmas cheer and it is largely through their county-wide contacts that many deserving are remembered.

Pre-Christmas Party Held By Rebekahs

PICTON — An enjoyable annual event was the pre-Christmas party held by members of Macdpelah Rebekah Lodge No. 144 in the Odd Fellows' Hall, Tuesday night.

More than 100 sat down to a delectable turkey supper which was served at long tables covered with holiday cloths and centred with candles and other emblems of the season.

Noble Grand Mrs. Elsie Hicks expressed appreciation to the food committee headed by Mrs. Gerry Dulmage, and to members who had presided the great variety of "trimmings."

Following lodge, there was a short program convened by Mrs. Coral Gardiner. Carols were sung and a timely sound film shown. Four members of the Robinson family, dressed as angels, sang a group of carols as part of a tableau in which Joseph, Mary and the Babe, the King and a shepherd were represented.

An impressive rendition of "Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus," was given by Mrs. Rita Francis. She also read an appeal that members remember older Rebekahs and shut-ins at Christmas time.

CREATED MUCH FUN

Santa, accompanied by an elf, arrived to create much fun and to help distribute the pile of gifts from beneath a gaily decorated tree. On this occasion "secret pals" were revealed and a draw made for the new year, birthdays, anniversaries and special occasions to be remembered.

In the midst of giving among themselves, the Rebekahs did not forget those less fortunate and contributed a large quantity of food, clothing and toys which will be distributed by the C.P. and T. Committee.

Barn, Contents Gutted by Fire

PICTON—Picton fire department was called to Washburn St. at 2.30 Wednesday morning when fire was discovered in a barn at the rear of Ross Weaver's home. Mr. Weaver collects waste paper and bales it there. The paper, and other items were lost in the outbreak which gutted the building.

Hastings County Warden Brings Year's Greetings

PICTON — Two wardens present at county council on Tuesday was an unusual occurrence, according to members. Warden of Hastings County, Harold Ward brought greetings from the neighboring municipalities and extended season's greetings to Prince Edward people. He remarked that in Hastings County "several of us oldtimers, who have a total of 150 years of service are retiring.

Prince Edward Warden John Fox welcomed the Hastings Warden and mentioned the co-operation which exists between them.

HOODED MEN ROB HOME

MONTREAL (CP)—Mrs. W. Stanley Haggert wife of the president of Bristol Aeroplane Company of Canada, Wednesday told police four armed men wearing hoods invaded the family's home and fled with $5,200 in furs and a sports car parked outside. She said she was alone in the house at the time.

Eugene O'Neill's Classic Called 'Truly Great Film'

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — That Katharine Hepburn wanted to talk was not unusual. That she would talk for publication was extraordinary, since she has been elusive for reporters in recent years.

The reason for talking was to help along Long Day's Journey into Night, the much-heralded film from Eugene O'Neill's autobiographical play.

"I think it deserves a hearing," she said. "It's a fine piece of work, a truly great play. I think it's encouraging that such a serious film can be done at a reasonable figure and that its commercial prospects are good.

"I was delighted to do it. It was a real challenge, making use of a range of dramatics that I have never shown on the screen before. O'Neill had a depth that is simply marvelous. Several years ago George Cukor and I wanted to do Mourning Becomes Electra with Garbo and me. But Roalind Russell got to it first."

The actress lives in a curious serie amid the high-rent district in upper Beverly Hills. It is a cliff-hanging apartment... adjacent to an estate.

"It used to be Jack Barrymore's," She explained. "Dear Jack, he was so kind to me. I did my first picture with him—Bill of Divorcement. The lower part of this place used to be his projection room."

She showed a stained-glass door leading to what now is her bedroom. Pictured in it were Barrymore and his second wife, Dolores Costello.

Melrose

MELROSE — A large crowd attended the dedication service at Melrose United Church on Sunday, December 9th, 1962.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Hollinger accompanied by Mrs. John Weese, Fuxboro, spent last Sunday supper hour with Mr. and Mrs. Clare Weese.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Hubble, accompanied by Miss Dora Cook, of Foxboro, were guests Sunday last of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Weese.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Weese of Toronto were last weekend guests of their parents, here.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Scarlett, Toronto, were weekend guests of Mrs. A. English and Billie.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Bertrand, Mrs. C. Holmes and Mrs. H. Murphy, also Mr. and Mrs. George Cole and family, all of Belleville, were last Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jack English. Mr. and Mrs. Stevasson of Oshawa were other guests at the same home.

The dedication supper held in the church basement on Saturday evening was a great success. Visitors enjoyed the meal as well as viewing the interior of the recently-completed auditorium. The congregation of the church is grateful to all who attended this event, thereby adding a goodly sum to the building fund of the church.

The Masons and friends of Craig Lodge, Deseronto, attended the body, the divine service in Melrose United Church on Sunday afternoon, Student minister, Mr. Douglas Steven, conducted the service, and Lodge Master, Mr. Earl Badgley, read the Scripture. The pianist and choir provided special music.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Allison, Carmel, spent Sunday evening with Mrs. A. English and Billie.

Eldorado

ELDORADO — Miss Joy Cotton of Belleville, spent the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cotton.

Mr. Bert McCoy has moved into his cottage in Eldorado.

Mr. and Mrs. Herb Kennedy of Edmonton and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carman of Belleville, were callers on Saturday at the homes of Mr. and Mrs. George McCann and Mrs. C. D. McCann.

Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Holgate of Canniffton, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Holgate and Mr. and Mrs. Lee Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. Elgin Post returned home from Toronto on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton McCann and boys of Peterborough were Sunday guests of Mrs. C. D. McCann.

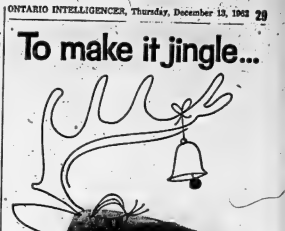
Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Babcock left on Monday for a motor trip to California.

Sympathy is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Elgin Post on the death of Mrs. Manley Post, in Toronto, on Tuesday morning.

Says Husband Gave Her Choice Of Way to Die

LONDON (Reuters) — Mrs. Hilary Clarry jumped out of a second-storey window after her husband gave her a choice of three ways to die, a divorce court judge said Wednesday.

The judge said her husband, Norman Clarry, locked her in the living room, squeezed her throat and gave her the choice of being strangled, gassing her self or falling on a carving knife.



According to the judge, the husband told her she had only two hours to live and said: "I am going to play with you as a cat does with a mouse, and you know what happens to the mouse in the end."

Mrs. Clarry jumped out the window an hour later while her husband was engrossed in a boxing match on television, the judge said.

She fractured a bone in her back.

The court granted Mrs. Clarry, who admitted adultery with another man, a decree nisi, which is normally valid in three months, on the ground of cruelty.

New Zealand Not Spellbound By Native Magic Medicine, Witch Doctors Are Banned

By J.C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

AUCKLAND (CP)—As part of its campaign to remove racial distinctions, New Zealand has repealed a 50-year-old act banning tohungas, Maori witch doctors.

This does not mean that tohungas are extinct. Unofficially and within limited fields, some still practise and at times are consulted even by Maoris of New Zealand's native race who normally deny that they are superstitious.

But their power is only a shadow of what it once was. The senior Maori Anglican priest, Bishop W. P. Fanapa, said some time ago: "Tohungas are fading away—They are no cause for worry."

The government believes that adequate protection now can be given against any remaining harmful influences of tohungas under general legislation which applies to both Maoris and white people, such as laws against fortune tellers and medical quacks.

HAD WIDE DUTIES

In ancient times tohungas played a vital part in the Maori community. Next to the chiefs they were the most important persons in the tribe, and in some aspects were more important than the chiefs.

Their duties were fantastically comprehensive. Strictly speaking, a tohunga meant any skilled person. The tohunga was the village or tribal wise man, priest and technical authority rolled into one.

He was village doctor, herbalist, astrologer, teacher, historian, poet, oracle. He advised on house construction, tattooing, carving and other arts. He knew by heart the tribal genealogy running back for hundreds of years. He was in charge of ceremonial and was consulted before planting crops, felling trees or undertaking sea journeys.

CAST SPELLS

But perhaps his most widely respected function was in casting spells and communication with the spirit world to work supernatural occurrences. The fear of spells arising to death, or makutu as it was known to the Maoris, is fully authenticated. Many cases are known of Maoris having spells cast on them and dying exactly at the predicted time.

With the coming of western culture many of the functions of tohungas declined. But belief in their supernatural powers persisted.

Surviving tohungas are mostly old men living in the past.

The government believes that the Maoris no longer need special protection against them and that most Maoris are no longer any more credulous than white people who pay to have their teacups read or for fake remedies dispensed by unqualified medical men.

Astrological Forecast

For December 14

By SYDNEY OMARR

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Kind of day in which you "work hard" to relax. Certainly this is a paradox. Comes from trying to please others, to make "perfect" arrangements. Better to let things happen naturally!

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20) Others may see you as a "problem" rather than real person. Put across your own image. Realize that actually you first represent yourself. Be natural. Others then respond with more enthusiasm.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) Good lunar aspect today encourages social activity. Get out and around. Visit. Share knowledge, joy, questions and answers. Much progress today from stimulating discussion.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21) Could be some deception in form of "white lie." Romantic involvement can be pleasant tonight. But don't take statements too literally! Practice moderation ... especially with pocketbook.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): Cycle reaching high point. Means your personality shines. You come up with original, stimulating ideas. You should, however, be wary of arousing jealousy. Be gracious, kind, considerate.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Extend hand of friendship. End foolish disputes. Hold no grudges. The happier you make others, the more you aid yourself. Watch out for trick words, especially in legal documents.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Inducements to careless action may be hard to resist. But remember you must face yourself tomorrow. Remember those who love you. Entertaining at home would bring much pleasure.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Face practical issues early. This enables you to relax tonight. Begin list of those to be remembered during holiday season. Avoid loud parties. Keep promises made to younger persons.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Realization of certain basic truths makes this day of illumination. Tonight favors theatre, entertainment, recreation. Sum up recent past. Make plans for future.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Avoid tendency to worry over minor matters. Friends contribute opportunity for relief from tension. Accept invitations. Share interests. Like Aries, go with the tide. Don't buck it!

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be on time for appointments. Give others benefit of any doubt. Show strength by willingness to co-operate. Delay important legal agreements, if practical.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Day and evening of glamour, romance, excitement. Be vital, alert, alluring. Fine evening for attention to new friends. Creative ideas should be followed up. Open your heart!

If today is your birthday ... you are "alive" to new ideas. You want to investigate, travel, read, gain knowledge. Coming year promising for greater personal happiness.

General Tendencies: Glamor of Space Age highlights day. Cycle up for Cancer, Leo and Virgo. Special word to Aquarius: Patience key to ultimate achievement.

Prison Keeper Says Stabbings Quite Frequent

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP)—A keeper from the Prince Albert Penitentiary testified Wednesday that there have been stabbings in the institution before and after the fatal stabbing there Aug. 16 of Russell (Tex) Maconnville.

Harold Taggart, who said he has been employed at the prison for 14 years, was one of three witnesses heard during the preliminary hearing of Cecil John Lavery, 20, of Winnipeg, and Gerald William Haynes, 24, of Edmonton. They are jointly charged with the capital murder of Maconnville, a fellow prisoner at the penitentiary.

The hearing continues.

"Jest a Second"

"But, honestly, it never went off before."

In another trial, three other prisoners were remanded to Dec. 19 on a charge of wounding another prisoner.

Kinney Cameron Reid, 23, of Athabasca, Alta., was stabbed Nov. 6. Charged are Henry Cyr, 34, of Qu'Appelle, Sask., James Scott, 20, of Medicine Hat and Desmond Lawrence, 22, of Cochrane, Ont.

Shot Wife, Inlaws, Self--'Very Sorry'

VAN NUYS, Calif. (AP)—Police today said they found a note written by a young father in which he confessed slaying his wife and her parents Tuesday at Kingman, Ariz., and added:

"By the time you read this, I'll either be dead or the police will have taken me."

The note was signed by Raymond J. Hudgens, 22, believed to be the man who telephoned police here that three persons were dead in a cabin near Kingman, along with "a tiny baby which would not have been fed for 24 hours, but should still be alive."

Sheriff's officers from Kingman went to the cabin. In it were the bodies of Grace Mary Hudgens, 20, her father, Myron Young, 67, his wife, Dorothy, 55 —and the baby, unharmed.

The baby was believed to be Hudgens' 16 months old son.

Police cars hunted the San Fernando Valley — a suburban area northwest of Los Angeles —for traces of Hudgens.

The note was found at a side porch of Hudgens' sister in Reseda.

Officers termed it "a suicide note." It said he "was very sorry" for the slayings and "knew it was unforgivable," officers said.

STORM BRINGS RECORD TRAFFIC SNARL

3 To 5 Inches Of Snow Tangles Ontario Traffic

Biting Cold Wave Grips Central, East. Canada

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Biting cold gripped Central and Eastern Canada today in the aftermath of a wintry blast that spread zero conditions from the Arctic to the U.S. boundary.

Only along the Pacific Coast and in Southern Alberta, where a warm Chinook wind shot temperatures to the 50s was there a warming trend. The belated touch of Indian summer sent the mercury to 56 at Calgary, a record high.

The weather office in Toronto said it's all because of a huge high pressure system with northerly winds from its eastern edge and a southerly flow to the west.

Toronto had snow with the cold. Three to five inches fell on wide sections of the province but the storm curiously missed the populous area near Toronto, Hamilton, London, Byrnie and Oshawa.

The weather office expected the warm weather to stay Saturday only in Alberta under a cloud cover.

Winnipeg and Edmundston, Que., were expected to be the cold spots. The forecast low at Winnipeg was 10 below zero and at Edmundston four below. At the west coast, temperatures of 40 to 48 degrees were the order of the day.

CLOSE SCHOOLS

The wind was a major factor in Ontario, drifting the heavy snowfall into city streets. Some schools in the Leamington district were ordered closed at noon Thursday because of drifting roads. Police warned motorists to stay off the highways.

The Ontario storm covered an area from Windsor in the southwest to Northern Bay in the north and to Kingston in the east.

Snowflurries were forecast for most Ontario areas today. "Quite a few places are going to get another heavy load of snow," the forecast said.

The 30-mile-an-hour northwest wind in most of the province Thursday made the 10 to 15-degree temperatures even more bitter. However, the weather office was predicting only a 15-mile-an-hour wind today.

The Maritimes also were suffering from the cold. The weather office said the cold spell should ease from the west would be followed by up to three inches of snow today.

EARLY ELECTION NOT THOUGHT OF SAYS P.M.

Opposition May Force One Soon

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker's statement Thursday night that the government does not intend to call an early general election electrified political observers in Ottawa. Opposition party spokesmen remained sceptical, however.

Mr. Diefenbaker, apparently taking note of growing speculation that the government might dissolve Parliament during the Christmas recess, denied the rumors by saying the government has no thought of any election.

Reports circulating in parliamentary corridors were that the government might dissolve Parliament and call an election for early spring if some of the basic measures in its legislative program passed the Commons and Senate before Christmas.

The Progressive Conservative party's national general meeting is scheduled to open here Jan. 17, and Mr. Diefenbaker is expected to address it Jan. 19. Parliament is to resume Jan. 21.

It was rumored, however, that the government might terminate the session and call an election for March, claiming that obstruction by the opposition makes a new vote necessary.

Opposition party spokesmen said Mr. Diefenbaker's words referred only to the government's intention of calling a general election.

It left open, they pointed out, the possibility of a government defeat in the Commons by the combined forces of the opposition on a non-confidence motion.

NATO SPENDING UP

PARIS (Reuters) — Defence spending by NATO allies this year will total a record $52,000,000,000 to NATO estimates issued here Thursday. This is $6,760,000,000 more than the 1961 total of $45,240,000,000.

Two Officers Are Shot Down In Fatal Montreal Gunfight

MONTREAL (CP)—Two suburban St. Laurent policemen were reported killed and two others injured today in a gunfire exchange with bandits who tried to rob a northend Cote de Liesse branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

One of four armed bandits was reported to have been dressed as Santa Claus while the others wore masks.

Two were said to have escaped by car heading west on Cote de Liesse towards Dorval. A location of Montreal International Airport.

A third escaped on foot and the fourth was not accounted for by police.

None of the bandits was reported hit by police fire.

Police immediately set up road blocks and scoured possible hiding places in their search.

Traffic in the area near the bank — just off the northend east-west expressway — was tied up as police checked vehicles for the escaped bandits. Bridges on the west end of Montreal Island were blocked by provincial police.

The bandits appeared at the bank about an hour after the 9 a.m. EST opening. The burglar-alarm system was set off immediately and the bandits mowed down the four policemen when they appeared on the scene in two patrol cars.

One of the robbers remained outside the bank as a sentry while the other three went inside for the apparently abortive robbery.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Weather conditions were variable across Canada early this morning. Many areas in the North were clear, while heavy, drifting snow was reported on the southern and eastern shores of Lake Huron and Georgian Bay. Elsewhere over the province, generally cloudy skies and a few snowflurries were occurring. Temperatures were continuing below normal for this time of year. Little change is expected today or Saturday.

GOVT. MEMBER ASKS CHANGE IN MARGARINE LAW

Colored Product Is Requested

TORONTO (CP)—The throne speech debate in the Ontario legislature became the occasion Thursday for a government backbencher to criticize Ontario's margarine laws and for an opposition member to call for reorganization of the province's municipal administration.

Bev Lewis (PC—York Humber) termed Ontario's ban on colored margarine "an insult to our intelligence." Butter sales were the only ones not dropping if the ban were lifted.

He said Ontario consumers "have the right to expect freedom of choice in the marketplace . . . and do not believe in the perpetuation of obsolescent laws . . ."

Reg Gisborn (NDP — Wentworth East) said regional governments should be established in the province "to prevent urban sprawl, and land use and all other evils that arise from conflicting and overlapping jurisdictions."

AS LARGE AS COUNTY

He said the regional jurisdictions would be at least as large as a county "and in some cases even the counties should be combined."

"Cities, however, should not be separated from the regions in which they form the nucleus. Each regional government should have revenues from both areas and a government for the development of the entire region."

Vernon Singer (L—York Centre) called for a greater effort by the province in treatment of

Surprise Proposal Is Made By Rusk for Multi-Lateral NATO Nuclear Naval Force

CP from Reuters-AP

PARIS—U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk today proposed to the NATO ministerial council the creation of a multi - lateral NATO seaborne nuclear force, council sources said.

Rusk said the force would be set up if the European members of NATO wanted it.

His proposal came as the 15-nation ministerial council turned to military matters and defence ministers began taking a hard look at the alliance's state of conventional and nuclear preparedness.

The sources said Rusk made his proposal in a surprise intervention during the council's military debate.

Speaking before U.S. Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara he made it clear he was thinking in terms of a NATO force with American participation.

Rusk said that while the U.S. was ready to consider creating such a force if the other NATO members wanted it, there were two big problems:

1. The European members would have to work out the political and military control of such a force;

2. The expense would have to be shared, and Rusk said the force would be "very expensive."

The concept of a medium-range multi-lateral nuclear force was first proposed by the Eisenhower administration at a NATO meeting in December, 1960.

Frantic Efforts Under Way To Salvage Florida Crops

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Harvest hands abandoned winter - killed Florida vegetable farms and streamed into the citrus groves today in a frantic effort to salvage something from the state's worst freeze since 1893.

Their hope lay in a quick harvest of some of the oranges and grapefruit to convert to juice before relaxation of the cold - wave deteriorated the frozen fruit.

Temperatures were expected to go as low as 17 degrees today, with a warming forecast tomorrow.

State Agriculture Commissioner E. Conner said ice had formed as thick as 1½ inches on citrus in Florida except at Fort Pierce, Stuart and the lower east coast.

Governor Farris Bryant told a Boca Raton meeting of travel agents that if the vegetable crop is spents Thursday night: "It wiped out for now."

Gasoline Price War Spreads To Every City in Ontario

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The gasoline price war in Ontario has spread to every major population centre in the province, with a low of 29.9 cents a gallon reached for regular gasoline in Brantford.

The war, which began Sept. 11 when Imperial Oil Limited moved against mass merchandizers and private-brand distributors such as Canadian Tire Corporation, has brought about changes at a rapid pace.

Many major oil companies are now being forced to be charged by their service stations.

Imperial dropped its price to 39.9 cents from 43.9 two weeks ago and added a five-per-cent cash discount. Shell and Sunbury, Ernest Bunka, operator of the Regent Fina service station in Sudbury, hanged his Imperial opponent in effigy along with a sign announcing a similar new low price.

While most areas were taking part in the struggle, the price cutting was not universal throughout the province.

In Sarnia the two Imperial stations attached a five-per-cent discount for cash sales on their 39.9-cent price. Another Imperial outlet in the area distributing were at 33.9 and Canadian Tire was at 33.9 plus a 10-per-cent coupon.

In London major oil companies were at 34.9. Imperial dropped eight locations to 34.9 plus five per cent for cash sale and Canadian Tire offered a net price of 32.1. One private outlet registered a low of 31.4 cents a gallon of regular gasoline.

Imperial stations in Metropolitan Toronto varied from 34.9 to 37.9 in a move against Canadian Tire, City Parking Limited, Flash Petroleum Limited and a number of other independent brand outlets. Other major combines in the area offered prices from 32.2 to 33.9, some offering a 10-per-cent coupon.

Texaco, Fina and Supertest outlets in Brantford registered the Ontario low of 29.9 with 12 Imperial outlets advertising a price of 31.9—two with a five-per-cent coupon offered and a independent-brand station offered a one-cent stamp with 30.9 cents a gallon sale.

HEAVY ATTACK ON TWO FRONTS AGAINST GOVT. AND CREDIT

Supply Motions, Treaty Under Fire

OTTAWA (CP)—The minority Conservative government came under heavy fire on two separate fronts Thursday in the Commons, but Prime Minister Diefenbaker gave pretty strong indication he will attempt to weather the storm.

The prime minister told reporters outside the House that speculation about a spring election has no basis in fact. He had "no thought of any election."

There were other indications, however, that opposition parties might tighten the reins as their members barked away at the government for continuing to bring in interim supply motions without tabling estimates, and for its handling of the Columbia River treaty.

Spokesmen from all three opposition parties hinted they may withhold future co-operation on supply motions.

THREATENS OVERTHROW

A spokesman for the Social Credit party, which has supported the government on non-confidence motions, said the party will move to overthrow the Liberals" from overthrowing the government unless certain legislation is passed.

H. A. Olson (SC—Medicine Hat) said he was authorized by his party to warn the government that the present interim supply motion—making funds available by the end of January —would be the last to receive his party's support unless demands are met.

Escaped Con May Head Belleville Way

KINGSTON (CP)—Police and prison guards here today set up roadblocks and organized a search for Kingston Penitentiary prisoner, Neil D. Morrison, 24, of Toronto, who escaped the Kingston Rehabilitation centre near the jail.

Police believe he may be in a car stolen shortly after the break from nearby Queens' University.

Morrison, admitted to the penitentiary in October, 1961, was serving eight years for armed robbery, car theft and possession of offensive weapons.

Morrison's escape is the 21st from the penitentiary this year.

Provincial police in the Belleville area were on the alert after possibilities arose Morrison might head towards Toronto. Up to press time they reported finding no trace of the man in the district.

Blame Traded By Motorists And Officials

Stalled Cars on Hills Main Cause of Chaos

Who needs atom bombs?

A couple of inches of fat snowflakes, falling like a woolly blanket, are all that is needed to turn Belleville's streets into funnels of frustration.

Thursday afternoon's rush-hour traffic snarl has never been duplicated here.

This morning, after tempers had subsided somewhat, there was general agreement amongst most motorists as to the cause.

They blamed the works department. Sand and foresight, they felt, would have prevented the whole schmozzle.

But city officials differed. Some said everything possible had been done and sanding had been carried out. Others blamed mistakes by motorists for causing the tangle.

Traffic snarls were caused by stalled cars, chiefly at inclines, on hills and curves. Railway crossings were prominent bottlenecks. In most cases the trouble started when a motorist found that his car skidding on the slippery snow. Adequately sanded streets would have been easier to crawl around stalled cars had the traction been good.

Twelve hours after the storm finally abated, at least one major traffic hazard still existed in the city. North Front Street, main artery into Belleville from Highway 401, was glazed, with crushed snow from the highway's cloverleaves down to College Street. Motorists took it

No Help

A panel-truck, its rear wheels spinning dizzily, started on the western incline to the lower overpass bridge shortly after five o'clock.

Traffic was lined behind as far as an eye-witness could see. It was likely there.

DOAKTOWN, N.B. (CP) — A 17-year-old baby-sitter and four children she tried to rescue died Thursday in flames that destroyed a lonely house in nearby Bettsburg, a tiny central New Brunswick community without fire protection.

A fifth child, rescued from the flaming home by his brother, died a few hours later from burns over 75 per cent of his body. All five were from the same family—that of Mr. and Mrs. Glenwood Parker—and the baby-sitter was an aunt of the youngsters.

New Communications Satellite Has Canadian Electronic Heart

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla., (CP-AP) — A new communications satellite with a Canadian-designed electronic heart soared through space today awaiting a call that would put it to work as a versatile link among countries of the Western world.

A Thor - Delta rocket lifted the 172-pound communications satellite named Relay into the heavens Thursday night. It was the 14th straight successful mission for Thor-Delta.

The Canadian team was led by Bruce MacKimmie, head of the company's technical division and assistant to the project manager.

Other electrical technicians contributed three components to the satellite: The receiver - transmitter, the beacon and the satellite stimulator. Canadian engineers also did many of the overall engineering studies and analyses that helped to determine the technical requirements.

Three Alternatives Said Offered Britain

Can Make Skybolt Itself or Get Polaris

LONDON (Reuters)—The Skybolt missile debate takes top place in newspaper comment again today, with the big story reports from Paris that the United States had offered the British take over development of the missile alone.

Authoritative sources in Paris said Thursday night U.S. Defence Secretary Robert McNamara told the British they could go it alone on development of the costly missile or take delivery of Polaris submarine missiles or Hound Dog medium-range missiles instead.

London newspapers print a host of predictions on British response to the American alternatives.

The outcome will have a crucial effect on the existence and form of any British independent nuclear deterrent, which for the last two years has been keyed to the Skybolt air-launched missile.

"The Skybolt fiasco (contd.) . . . we don't want it, you can have it . . . go it alone, says U.S." is the six-column front page banner in The Daily Herald.

"Skybolt — Kennedy's man puts it bluntly to Thorneycroft —make it yourself," says The Daily Express in a seven-column headline.

Chapman Pincher, the newspaper's defence correspondent, says McNamara "has staked his position as U.S. defence secretary on the recommendation to scrap Skybolt."

Pincher says "President Kennedy is 100 per cent behind McNamara on this issue."

He says the Skybolt cancellation was "political" and declares the U.S. has been working on the project since he disclosed its existence.

The exact path of relay will be known after a careful study of telemetry data, some time today, he said. But a nominal—or planned—orbit called for a speed of 17,000 miles an hour, a near circular path ranging from 600 miles to 4,500 miles high, and one complete trip around the world every three hours and four minutes.

Winter Driving No Fun, So Take It Seriously!

After a frustrating trip home last night, and a frightening return to the office this morning, an Ontario Intelligencer reporter phoned the Ontario Department of Transport's driver examination centre in Belleville this morning. He asked J. A. Seymour, Senior Examiner at the centre, for some tips on winter driving.

Getting started is the first problem, Mr. Seymour agreed, but getting stopped was more important. Drivers should remember that they can't stop fast, and they should leave extra space between them and the car ahead.

When you have to stop on snow or ice, the Department of Transport recommends pumping your brakes to avoid skidding. For slowing down, the safest and fastest way is to shift into a lower gear and take your foot off the gas. If you have to stop but can't, remember that a snowdrift is the softest thing to hit; but there may be a child playing in it.

EASY ON GAS

To get your car moving, the most important thing is to be easy on the gas. If your wheels start spinning, it often helps to start in second gear instead of first. With less power, the wheels may not spin. If you're stuck in a drift, shift from forward to reverse and back again to "rock" the car.

Turning corners on snow can be hard, too. Plan the turn well ahead of time, slow down and shift into second gear before you start turning. Apply a little gas as you pull out. If the car starts to skid, steer into the skid and don't panic.

But the most important thing to remember is caution. When you pull out in front of another car, remember that he can't stop and you can't accelerate very fast, so you must leave lots of space. And when following another car, leave even more space. You may think he can't stop any faster than you can, but if he hits something he will. More important, if he knows he is going to stop, and shifts into second gear to slow down, he probably can stop faster than you. If that happens, it's just too bad, for you.

MRS. ELIZABETH SLAVIN

In failing health for the past six years, Mrs. Elizabeth Slavin, 40 Strachan Street, died at St. Mary-of-the-Lake Hospital on Thursday.

Daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Dunlay, she was born at Hastings, Ont., and had been a patient at St. Mary-of-the-Lake for the past two years. She was a member of St. Michael's Church, and belonged to the Catholic Women's League and the League of the Sacred Heart. Her husband, Robert C. Slavin, pre-deceased her.

She is survived by two sisters, Mrs. John Frawley and Mrs. J. A. Perrault, both of Belleville.

Resting at the Funeral Residence of George F. O'Brien; the funeral notice appears elsewhere in this edition.

JOSEPH DOYLE
Marmora

Suffering a heart attack at his home in Marmora, Joseph Doyle, a lifelong resident of the village, died suddenly during the night. He was born in Marmora 71 years ago, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Doyle, and had lived his entire life in the community, where he was well known and highly respected by all walks of life.

After his early education he entered into business and for many years he conducted the general store in Deseronto. Smelting and Refining Company and the Bethlehem Steel Company for the residents who lived in Marmora and worked in the plants. In connection with the bus line Mr. Doyle had a taxi service and he served the community faithfully and well for many years. He was a member of Sacred Heart Church in Marmora and was a member of the Holy Name Society.

Surviving are his wife, the former Susan Elizabeth Brown, whom he married in Marmora, two daughters, Mrs. Leo (Dora) Quinlan, Mrs. Eugene (Marguerite) Philips, both of Marmora, Mrs. John (Vera) Finnigan of Port Hope, Mrs. Ilene Lummiss of Belleville, Mrs. John (Marion) Weaver of Peterborough, and one son, Harry Doyle, of Marmora. Also surviving are four brothers and three sisters.

The funeral arrangements have not been completed.

LEWIS CLEMENT

The funeral of Lewis Clement was held from the Thompson Funeral Chapel on Thursday afternoon with Rev. Everett Smith officiating.

The pallbearers were: David Blackburn, Gus Parker, Garfield Little, Earl MacDonald, Fred Jackson and Ross Copley.

Interment was in Belleville cemetery.

ROBERT HOLSEY MARSH

Robert Holsey Marsh of 245 MacDonald Ave., died at the Belleville General Hospital on Thursday, in his 29th year. He had been in poor health for one year.

Born in Belleville, a son of Mrs. Bessie Loretta Marsh and the late John Edward Marsh, he lived in this community for his entire life. A member of Bridge Street United Church, Mr. Marsh was very active in the young people's work when health permitted.

A gunsmith by vocation, he was a member of the Ontario Arms Collectors' Association, the American Arms Collectors' Association and the Quinte Marksmen Club.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Bessie Loretta Marsh of Belleville, and a brother, Dr. John Marsh of Toronto.

Resting at the John R. Bush Funeral Home, 80 Highland Ave., funeral arrangements appear elsewhere in this edition.

Cheese Prices On Exchange Holding Well

Sharply decreased offerings particularly of square cheese, was noticeable on the Belleville Cheese Exchange this week.

Only 235 boxes of square cheese were offered. There were 1,406 specials, and a total of 6,814 regular, including 4,500 first grade white, and 563 first grade colored.

The average price for white cheese was 36½ cents and for colored 36¾ cents. Cheese squares sold at 36¾ cents per lb.

Authority Votes to Take Over Skootamatta Lake Dam to Aid River Flow

An increased summer flow in the lower reaches of the Moira River could result next year if plans of the Moira River Conservation Authority are realized.

Yesterday at Canniffon Authority members voted to take over operation of the Skootamatta Lake Dam in Anglesea township and will apply for permission to the Ontario Department of Public Works for transfer of control and maintenance to their hands.

The dam currently is operated to maintain the summer level of Skootamatta Lake mainly for the benefit of cottage owners in the area, but Authority members feel its operation could complement the Lingham Lake dam in improving downstream flow during the summer and early autumn.

The idea would be to increase discharge from the Lingham Lake dam during the summer months and then utilize flow from Skootamatta Lake following Labor Day after cottagers have left.

WOULD COST $3,600

The end result would be an overall increased down river flow during the low flow period of the summer and early autumn.

If the Department of Public Works agrees to the Authority taking over the dam modifications to prepare it for Authority operation would cost an estimated $3,600.

Water Advisory Board Chairman Graham Bell of Marmora, and staff Scientist of the Skootamatta Dam at the above cost would give the Authority vastly increased water storage in the upper reaches of the watershed at a comparatively low cost.

He estimated it would cost 20 times as much to provide for equivalent storage if a new dam had to be constructed.

Reeve Earl Sager of Madoc township objected to the proposed operation of the Lingham Lake dam if this would see a greatly reduced volume of water being discharged during the early fall.

NOT THE CASE

He was assured by Field Officer Michael Mitchell that this would not be the case.

The Authority also approved of a recommendation by request, the Conservation Branch of the Ontario Lands and Forests to conduct a survey of the upper reaches of the Moira in Tudor Township to determine if there were water storage areas available for development.

At the present time there is no provision for water storage on the Moira above Moira Lake and during the dry period of late summer the flow diminished almost to the vanishing point.

Simplification of regulations respecting the dumping of fill below the high water mark in the Moira River and its tributaries was approved by the Authority members with regulatory powers being given to the Conservation Officer.

QUESTION ASKED

City Planning Engineer Charles Mott asked whether the "high water mark" referred to mean the "normal high water mark or the flood level.

This, according to Field Officer Mike Chubb, was the moot point. Wherever possible, however, he said that flood levels were to be taken, although fill regulations like building regulations in practice had to be taken as a guide.

Assurance was given that the Authority would not object to improvements planned by owners.

The meeting also saw discussion on construction of a possible "temporary" water control dam for the fool of Moira Lake at Downey's Rapids.

NO AGREEMENT

This project has seen considerable previous discussion but no agreement has so far been reached.

Cottage owners on the lake would like to dam to control the lake level at a higher height, but such a structure could not be expected to reduce naturally high spring levels which farmers in the area object to.

It was claimed, however, that a structure such as the proposed "temporary" dam should not cause higher flood levels in the spring.

City Council May Take Tour Of Watershed

Members of Belleville city council next summer may be afforded a trip around the Moira River watershed to learn at first hand of the various projects being undertaken by the Moira Conservation Authority.

This was suggested yesterday at the final meeting of the Authority held at Canniffon.

Publicity committee chairman Gerald Irvine of Sidney township apologized to the meeting for not arranging a trip around the watershed this year for Authority members and suggested that this not be overlooked next year.

Authority vice - president George Wishart, one of the city members on the Authority membership, suggested that the Belleville city council be included in the tour.

"Belleville has been very cooperative in the work of the Authority," Alderman Wishart noted, "and of course everyone realizes that the city contributes approximately one-half of the Authority's budget each year."

The idea of such tours is to acquaint Authority members with the many projects being undertaken. Included are visits to reforestation areas, conservation areas and wherever possible to dams and other water control projects.

Mr. Irvine said his committee's main project for the year had been the publication of a booklet setting out the Authority's progress and achievements from the date of its organization back in 1947.

J. H. Sprackett At Every Meet For 15 Year

Named as member from Tudor and Cashel township to the Moira River Conservation Authority at the time of its inception in 1947, Mr. J. Howard H. Sprackett has never missed a regular meeting of the Authority in 15 years.

And yesterday's final meeting of the Authority for this year proved no exception. Mr. Sprackett was one of the first members on hand for the meeting held at Canniffon township hall.

"The people of my township appointed me to the Authority and I feel it is my duty to attend the meetings," he said.

And Mr. Sprackett took the same attitude towards attendance to public affairs when he was a member of his township council.

Until his retirement from municipal life two years ago he had served on his council for 45 years. He was 30 years a member of the council and was warden in 1955.

WAS MILL SAWYER

A lumber merchant and sawmill operator for most of his life, Mr. Sprackett at one time was his own mill sawyer.

But he always felt that the affairs of the municipality came first and on council days his business was closed down to allow him to attend.

Yesterday at the Canniffon meeting authority chairman Cecil Ketcheson paid tribute to Mr. Sprackett for his interest in conservation and expressed the hope that he would be able to continue his interest for many years.

Tribute was also paid at the meeting to the late Carman Kleinsteuber of Elzevir township for his long interest in the authority. Mr. Kleinsteuber died suddenly a few weeks ago.

IN MEMORIAM

CLARE — In loving memory of a dear father, Arthur Clare, who passed away December 14th, 1957.

His memory is as dear today,
As in the days he passed away.
—Remembered always by son, Malcolm and family.

CHRISTOPHER — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Margaret Lucy Christopher, who passed away December 14th, 1954.

Deep in the heart lies a picture,
Of a loved one laid to rest,
In memory's frame we shall keep it,
Because she was one of the best.
—Ever remembered by husband Harry and family.

CHRISTOPHER — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, and Grammie, Margaret Lucy Christopher, who died December 14th, 1954.

A silent thought, a secret tear,
Keeps her memory ever dear.
—Ever remembered by daughter Mill, son-in-law Jim and grand-daughter Linda.

CHRISTOPHER — In loving memory of a dear mother, Margaret Lucy Christopher, who passed away December 14th, 1954.

—Sadly missed and always remembered by son, daughter-in-law Phyllis and granddaughter Doug.

CLARE — In loving memory of a dear husband, Arthur Clare, who passed away December 14, 1957.

I little knew when I awoke that morn,
The sorrow the day would bring.
For the rail was sudden, the news was sad,
That took my love one from me.

To-day as we think of you dear one, type car" he said, "and it took him half an hour to get from Front St. to Pinnacle, along Market St. The car overheated and broke down.
Memories are remembered and mingled by wife Bessie.

"The jam was just in the downtown section, he said. The police did their best, of course, but there wasn't much they could do with no sanders. I know a lot of the police officers were held up going off duty, too."

Bruce Hicks, a resident of the north end of the city, had similar thoughts. "They weren't out cleaning the streets soon enough." he said. "The bigger cities have their street cleaning down to a system. I give this city credit, when they get going, they really get going; they took me an hour to get from James St. to Bleecer Ave."

Mrs. Madeline Mabley was caught in the traffic also. "I couldn't make out what the tieup was all about," she commented. "I think the one-way streets slow things down a lot, with so many traffic lights. It was an hour and three-quarters getting to Station St."

DOES CITY HAVE PLOWS

Mr. A. D. Warren, who has also lived in Toronto, Montreal and Kingston, said, "The roads here are in disgusting shape with the snow. Sanding roads at 5 p.m. doesn't help, plowing is better. The plows should have come out as soon as the snow started to fall, and they should have stayed on the job all night. That stuff was let lie. My only question is: does the city have any plows? And if so, why weren't they used."

Mr. V. McKnight, a pedestrian, summed up the situation for drivers and pedestrians. "Well," he said, "the walking was all right."

There were other points of view, of course. Tom Lewis, a west-end resident, said, "It has nothing to do with the city; it is the people. We've lived here all our lives and we still don't know how to drive in the winter. We have the wrong tires, we don't have enough gas in our tanks, and we start out before the car is warmed up big and with the windows all frosted. I finally got out, but I did it by myself."

Perhaps the most philosophical point of view polled was Carl Roluf's. "What traffic tieup?" he asked. "When you get weather like this, what do you expect—July road conditions?"

BLAMES MOTORISTS

Alderman George Wishart, senior member of the public works committee, commented this morning on "the stupidity of motorists" as being a major factor in the extended traffic jam in the downtown area.

Alderman Wishart left the Town Hall at Camilton at 4.45 p.m., following a meeting of the Moira River Conservation Authority, and drove back to the city along Canniton Road, Station Street, Front Street and Dundas Street to his way home. He arrived home at 6.15 p.m.

"I have never been held up so long—it didn't seem to be the case that traffic was any slow with cars tied up in every direction. I didn't see any policemen until the corner of Campbell and Front Streets," he said. Alderman Wishart thought some of the tie-up possibly due to slippery streets, but added he didn't feel there was a single spot in the city which could not have been driven at 15 to 20 miles an hour.

"I don't think that any blame could be placed on the public works people for the traffic conditions—caused by the stupidity of motorists trying to get into traffic where they had no opportunity," commented Alderman Wishart and cited a few instances where two cars held up traffic at the Victoria and Front intersection for a considerable time even though there was an open traffic lane available to them.

Commenting on how people might feel about the situation he admitted being "pretty hot and bothered myself sitting there in my car." He had received no complaints about the road conditions, either last night or this morning.

Gas Heater Is Blamed For Fatality

A 32-year-old Thomasburg garage mechanic died from carbon-monoxide poisoning as he worked in a closed building next to his house trailer.

That's the result of the police investigation concluded today into the death of Frederick Gray.

Provincial police from Madoc, who were called to the trailer yesterday, blamed an improperly ventilated gas heater for the fatal incident.

They say the residual carbon-monoxide leaked back into the trailer as Gray sat watching his televising set. He was found still sitting in front of the set Thursday morning by his employer, Earl Morton, operator of Morton's Garage at Thomasburg. The TV was still switched on.

Gray, say police, was married and leaves a five-year-old girl.

Jack Ireland stated that he had received no complaints about traffic yesterday. The streets had been sanded before the snowfall, he stated, and he had been told by ladies of the Harmony Group of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. The festive luncheon of the hall added to the enjoyment of the banquet. Mrs. C. W. Coleman described the decorations of the hall and the tables as well as the Scotch pine Christmas tree in the centrepiece of large Christmas candles at one end of the hall.

Following the banquet, the Master of Ceremonies, Mr. E. Ireland, introduced the chairman of the Hastings County Advisory Board, Mr. Norstand Gorsline, who welcomed the Blind people and their friends and extended to them season's greetings. He also expressed the thanks of those present to Mrs. H. Hollins for her organization of the banquet as well as for her work with the White Cane Club.

ACKNOWLEDGES THANKS

Mr. N. Thompson as a representative of the Rotary Club acknowledged the thanks of the chairman and spoke of the pleasure of the Club and its members in sponsoring and attending the banquet. Dr. A. Timmins, Kingston District Field Secretary, brought Christmas greetings from the Canadian Institute for the Blind for all the Blind of this area and their friends. He also spoke of changes in the staff of the Kingston District. His former assistant, Mr. D. R. Ferguson, has gone to the Barrie District to take up the position of Field Secretary, while Miss V. Philpott has left for Chicago. The new Home Teacher, Miss M. Vipond, was introduced and expressed her pleasure in meeting the people under such happy circumstances as a Christmas banquet. Miss Pat Baverstock of the White Cane Club thanked the Rotary Club and the Advisory Board for the banquet and wished everyone a Merry Christmas.

VARIED PROGRAM

Mr. Bruce Sills entertained the group with a variety of his both Christmas and popular songs played on a piano accordion. These gave welcomed opportunity for group singing. Later Mr. Sills displayed another of his many talents by playing several songs, including the Merry Widow Waltz, on a hand saw with a fiddle and bow. The technique was described and aroused considerable interest. Mrs. T. Colden gave an excellent recitation entitled "The Woolly Lamb of God." This happy story told the Christmas message in a way that touched not only to the younger people, but also to the adults. Both entertainers were thanked for their contribution to the evening's activities.

Several prizes were distributed. Misses Gail (3 years old) and Darleen (5 years) Elliott of West Huntingdon, who attended with their parents, each won a box of chocolates as the youngest blind persons at the banquet. Mrs. Zachariah won a prize in a contest to estimate accurately the length and width of a piece of wood.

Mr. Fairman closed the evening with Christmas greetings to one and all. Following the banquet there was a social hour for the blind and their friends.

Rotary Club Banquet for Blind Enjoyed

The twelfth annual Christmas banquet for the Blind people of Belleville and district was held on Tuesday evening, in the hall of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. The Belleville Rotary Club, as it has in the past, sponsored the banquet and provided transportation for the blind people and their escorts. The Hastings County Advisory Board of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind organized the banquet and acted as hosts.

Over thirty blind people and their friends enjoyed the traditional Christmas fare of turkey and the trimmings. This delicious meal was prepared and served by ladies of the Harmony Group of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. The festive decorations of the hall added to the enjoyment of the banquet. Mrs. C. W. Coleman described the decorations of the hall and the tables as well as the Scotch pine Christmas tree in the centrepiece of large Christmas candles at one end of the hall.

Following the banquet, the Master of Ceremonies, Mr. E. Stirling Man Fined $75 for Impaired Driving

Held for police by an airforce sergeant and a civilian who became suspicious of his condition, an elderly Stirling man today was fined $75 for impaired driving in Belleville magistrate's court.

Robert Faulkner pleaded guilty to the charge laid November 24 after city police were called to Highland Avenue.

Inspector J. B. McLauchlan said Faulkner's car almost forced a vehicle driven by airforce sergeant Maurice Cyr off the road in the west end of Belleville. The sergeant turned his car around and gave chase. He got Mr. Faulkner stopped and, with a Belleville resident, called in police.

"He is a veteran and his only source of income is his pension," magistrate T. Y Wills was told.

He gave Mr. Faulkner time to pay the fine.

Police Assoc. Elects Officers

The annual dinner of No. 9 district's Ontario Provincial Police Association in Belleville last night, inaugurated a new executive for the organization.

The new officers, sworn in by crown attorney John Pringle were: Peter Taylor, Kingston, president; Arnold Bestman, Picton, vice-president; Bruce Shaw, Madoc, treasurer; William Scott, Kingston, secretary; Harry Byers, Gene McLean, Belleville, Earl Graves, Picton, directors.

Heading the guest list for the event, at the Shrine Club, was District Inspector Alec McDougall.

The police district extends from Picton to Bancroft and east to Kingston.

City Bus Takes 24 Minutes to Go Two Blocks

It took one city bus 24 minutes to get from the Four Corners intersection (Front and Bridge Streets) east on Bridge St. through Church and Bridge intersection two blocks away, reported Miss Muriel Johnson, office manager of the Belleville Transit Commission this morning.

Buses ran up to one hour late on some routes yesterday due to the traffic congestion "None got stuck," advised Miss Johnson, "and the small Metro-type buses weathered the conditions very well."

Several buses experienced frozen doors in their braking systems and these were hauled into the shops with their routes being taken over by spare buses.

On the traffic congestion in the [illegible] away there were no other problems except for poor visibility due to the heavy snowfall, advised Miss Johnson, and the buses continued on with their regular routes up to 11:30 p.m.

Ont. Municipal Board Reserves Decision After Hearing on Annexation

TRENTON — The Ontario Municipal Board has again reserved decision on an application by Trenton to annex part of a surrounding municipality. Last October the board reserved decision on the town's bid to annex 500 acres of Murray township. And yesterday, the board representatives, H. E. Roberts and A. L. McRae decided they would need more time to study the town's request for 188 acres of Sidney township.

The main issues as they emerged at the hearing were these:

Does Trenton need annexation more than residents in the proposed area, or vice versa?

Do residents in the area and in the rest of the township desire annexation?

Would the area require services other than water (now supplied by Trenton) in the foreseeable future? If so, who would best supply them, Trenton or Sidney?

What about the 29 children in the area who now go to school in Trenton?

And should 103 acres of the land, which is Department of National Defence property used by the RCAF, be included in the proposed annexation?

First to speak at yesterday's hearing was John Weir, counsel for the town, who said Trenton, like many other Eastern Ontario municipalities, had grown steadily, but not spectacularly, during the past few years. He mentioned figures to show that a 10 per cent assessment of about $10,000,000 in 1952, the town had grown until it now has about thirteen thousand persons and a $14,000,000 assessment.

This sort of urban growth, said Mr. Weir, requires planning for adequate water, sewage disposal, police and fire-fighting services, and such planning cannot be undertaken properly without considering areas near the town which might be annexed in the future.

The Toronto lawyer contended that the proposed area, separated from the rest of Sidney by the RCAF Station, was a "little enclave," financially and physically dependent on the town, and should "logically" be annexed.

"Residents living in the area have come to be satisfied by decisions made by the town, whether they come in now or

Coin Box In Phone Booth Is Robbed

Thieves last night made a call on a phone booth at a service station just west of Belleville on Highway 2.

They smashed its coin box and made off with an unknown amount of small change.

Provincial police from Belleville are investigating the theft —at Tebworth's service station.

Key Clubbers Entertained by Kiwanis Club

TRENTON — Trenton's youngest service club — the Trenton High School Key Club —was entertained by the members of the sponsoring club, Trenton Kiwanis, at a dinner meeting in the Gilbert Hotel last night.

Belleville Key Clubbers, invited to the event, were kept home by weather. Two Key Clubbers from Peterborough, Fred Hamblin and Peter Horton, made it, although they confessed that it hadn't been snowing in Peterborough when they started out.

Fred, a past vice-president of Key Clubbers International, outlined a program of service work to the new club members. Ted is the present lieutenant-governor of Division 4.

Past lieutenant-governor of division 4a and Trenton chairman of Key Club activities, Al Weaver, told the junior club members of the aims and principles of their recently-formed club and reminded them that they must serve their school and community if they expected to live up to the ideals of the organization.

Special guests at last night's meeting were the high school principal John Garrett and high school science teacher, G. A. Mr. Mr. Mac Hicks, known throughout the Trenton area for his work with air cadets, was agreed to serve as liaison officer between the Trenton Kiwanis Club and the high school Key Club.

The club now has 22 members, President is Jim Aziz, the son of Bernard Aziz, Trenton Kiwanis president. Vice-president is Robert Harris; secretary, Art Hills; treasurer, Bert Garrett, and directors, Greg Scott, Gary Woodward and Barry Thompson.

3-Car Crash At Intersection Of Highway 30

TRENTON — Trenton police report only minor accidents occurred during yesterday's snowstorm.

Near Brighton, a three-car crash at the height of the storm, resulted in damages assessed at more than $1,000. Drivers of the cars involved were Lt.-Leonard Dunelyk of Toronto, Dr. J. S. Stock of Belleville and Cpl. Rickell of West Hill, were not injured. Police at the accident was Highway 401 at the junction with Highway 30.

Collision between cars driven by Henry Booth of Willowdale and Jessie Campsell of Harlington, on the east, resulted in damages estimated at $125, but no injuries to the drivers.

Mr. Parker, employed by the New Brunswick Forest Service, was at work in nearby woods and apparently was the first outside the house to learn of the fire. He found the house ablaze when he returned home but was unable to get in. He rushed to inform RCMP.

Trenton firemen managed to contain the blaze to one end of the building. The fire was well underway when it was reported by a Gardenville resident.

Trade Crusade Criticized

Frederick Erroll, president of the British Board of Trade, is severely critical of Ontario's trade crusade. He says it is not only aimed at increasing exports but also at reducing imports. The British Board of Trade, despite its name, has no similarity to the Canadian Chamber of Commerce. It is a branch of the government. Erroll's criticism, therefore, is an official rebuke, by a high member of the British Government, to Hon. Robert W. Macaulay, Ontario's minister of economics and development, and others associated with him in this trade drive.

The Ontario Intelligencer has on more than one occasion in the past—notably at the time when the Canadian Manufacturers' Association was sponsoring a "Buy Canadian" campaign—warned that trade is not a one-way street. If we wish to export, we must be willing to import, in order to provide our customers with the wherewithal to pay for the products they buy from us.

Nevertheless, we think that Erroll is judging the Ontario trade crusade too severely and we suggest that this severity may be, at least partly, the result of a misunderstanding.

Erroll seems to overlook the high volume of Canadian imports, much higher per capita than those of most other countries, including the wealthiest country of all, the U.S.

There is no inconsistency in urging a reduction of this excessively high volume of imports and at the same time encouraging that we cannot sell abroad if we refuse to provide a market for the goods of other countries.

Secondly, it seems to us, from observing various phases of the Ontario crusade, that the latter is particularly aimed at increasing imports from the U.S. Now such a policy is easily defensible, because the U.S. does not buy from us anything like the volume of goods which it sells to us. This is no more than an effort to bring home to the U.S. the same fact which Erroll is calling to our attention—that trade must flow two ways.

If the Ontario trade crusade has had the effect of reducing our imports from Britain, this is unfortunate. We already sell more to Britain than Britain sells to us, and should not endeavor to widen the gap.

At the same time, Erroll must be realistic enough to admit that, in our circumstances, with out great dependence on the U.S. in a wide variety of ways, we could hardly launch a "trade crusade" which frankly admitted it was aimed solely at reducing imports from the U.S. There are too many American-owned high places who would call for a policy of "massive retaliation."

Perhaps what is needed is a Canadian-sponsored crusade to increase the proportion of our income we spend on Canadian-made goods and on goods from those countries which now buy more from us than we buy from them. This drive, if successful, would inevitably reduce the amount of money we had available to spend on imports from other countries, which now sell us more than they buy from us—but it would do it in a way which would make retaliatory measures much less easy to justify.

Misfire?

According to an AP report, a U.S. Nike Zeus anti-missile missile failed in a test recently, and fell into the Pacific Ocean. At first glance, this looks bad for the North American defence setup, but there is still hope.

The current plan is for the U.S. to send up anti-missile missiles when and if the Russians fire missiles against this continent. But because the Yanks will send up their anti-missile missiles, the Russians will obviously send along anti anti-missile missiles to clear the way for the Russian missiles. But if the U.S. anti-missile missiles don't work, perhaps the Russian anti anti-missile missiles, searching for a target, will destroy the Russian missiles.

Of course if the anti-missile missiles work and the Russian anti anti-missile missiles don't —or is it the other way round? In either case, with missile technology in its present state, we can always hope the original missiles don't work.

New Noah's Ark Needed

Sault Ste. Marie Star

Some 250 species of animals and birds face extinction through the "sheer callousness of mankind", ironically, the bald eagle, native symbol of the bald eagle, national symbol of the United States, leads the list.

That warning from Prince Phillip appears in the November issue of National Geographic which is bound to alarm animal lovers and sportsmen everywhere to support the World Wildlife Fund and help save threatened species. Philip, Duke of Edinburgh, is head of the fund drive in Great Britain.

Since the Christian Era began, Prince Phillip says, about 100 animals and the same number of birds — species that took at least thousands of million years to develop—have been wiped out forever.

"Let me remind you", he adds, in emphasis "that the passenger pigeon which used to darken the skies of North America was exterminated — not as a pest, but for sale and fun—in one generation!"

Writing in a typically blunt manner, Prince Phillip tells why some of the 250 species are under the sentence of death.

"The gallant wild fowl of North America is being chased and killed by people in light airplanes who seem to think that it is smart to have its feathers and claws", he says.

Ivory and rare rhinos ite fate to "sheer idiocy": "Some Arabs believe they must prove their courage by killing a rhinoceros so that they will inherit its legendary courage and virility".

Prince Phillip lists the reasons why wild animals are in danger.

1. Physical conditions are changing; human population is increasing, crowding out the animals. In 1700 New York City ing, Washington 5, D.C. The British address is 2 Caxton Street, Westminster, London, S.W. 1.

2. The means of combatting creatures regarded as pests have become so powerful that they are no longer means of control but of extermination.

3. Poachers and killers for profit. For example, Prince Philip says, in Africa, they are rapidly getting rid of the rhino because illegal dealers want its horn for sale in certain areas of the Orient where, for some incomprehensible reason, they seem to think that it acts as an aphrodisiac. I should have thought that the population statistics alone would have convinced anyone that those things were quite obviously unnecessary.

• • •

4. Status killers, like the boastful chasers of eagle and orys.

5. Inadequate game and conservation laws — and enforcement methods.

• • •

"The moral reasons for conservation must be obvious," Prince Philip says. "After all, we quite rightly collect vast sums of money and go to endless trouble to preserve manmade treasures, most of which serve no practical purpose. Surely then, we should devote some attention to the living God-made treasures of the world which have a beauty as well as an aesthetic value."

In his impassioned plea for the preservation of the World Wildlife Fund, Prince Philip likened it to a "Noah's Ark," built by men and women and children throughout the world to give (the earth's creatures) a chance to survive the thoughtless actions of mankind.

The World Wildlife Fund campaign began in the United States in June, 1962, and its address is 709 Wire Build-

Napoleon's Giant Awake

Ottawa Journal

"Let China sleep," Napoleon said. "When she awakes the world will be sorry."

Whether the world wishes it or not, China is fast awakening. Dr. Wilder Penfield, fust back from a month in Red China, told the Ottawa Canadian Club last week that the Chinese Republic has already some of the arms the government "has passed rapidly from adolescence to manhood." The giant, he said, is growing stronger all the time."

There are many symptoms of that strength, but two are particulars for comfort. The attack against India is now clearly a full-scale war, not a border dispute. The Communists are securing more than a few miles of Himalayan mountains in the process of real strategic importance are now falling into Chinese hands.

Yet in the long run the most significant sign of Communist China's power is not what her armies are doing on the Indian border but what her leaders are saying to and hearing from the Kremlin.

A roused China is just as much the concern of Russia as it is the West.

It would be wrong to over emphasize the differences between Moscow and Peking. First of all what we don't know about the relations between the two countries make what we do know not much more than a flickering candle in the overwhelming dark. The larger conflict between non-Communist and the Communist worlds now more than anything else should keep Russia and China from flying apart.

But when the Soviet Communist Party takes a full page in Pravda to defend Russian policy against the "unlimited disorder" of critics within the Communist bloc, the internal debate can't be ignored.

Clearly a struggle for primacy has developed in which Moscow is going on. The Chinese attack on India may be an attempt to displace Russia as the guardian of Asian communism. In Stalin's time there was no such struggle and because Russia was any stronger than it is now, but because China was so much weaker.

Though the rush hardly seems to suit him, Premier Khrushchev emerges as the prudent, temperate statesman beside the hard-line policies advocated by China. Mr. Khrushchev of course still believes as Mao Tse-Tung has said, "Political power grows out of the barrel of a gun." But he seems quicker to realise that he is not the only one with a gun. He knows too that Russia with all her economic and scientific advances would have much to lose in the event of an all-out war.

However, the open rivalry within the Communist bloc is not something over which we should rejoice. The conflict is not one over ultimate goals, only over tactics. If Mr. Khrushchev is not the master of the Communist movement, the West will be doubly tried. Mr. Khrushchev's troubles with the new China may be nothing beside ours.

Sell Lenses To Germany

Ulster Commentary

Anglo-American co-operation has given an important part in the build-up at Lurgan, County Armagh, of Europe's largest ophthalmic lens manufacturing plant. The company, belongs to the United Kingdom Optical Holdings group, which has a marketing and technical information arrangement with the American optical company, Bausch and Lomb Optical Co.

The introduction in the United Kingdom of a state health scheme created a heavy demand for spectacles in the short period 1948-50 and the early 1950s a considerable part of the Lurgan production was for the home market. In more recent years the group has concentrated on export and with remarkable success. Much of this can be attributed to the link with Bausch and Lomb in 1956.

Last year, for instance, the group's export business increased by 30 per cent and its products are now being widely distributed, mainly in the world, including Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, India and most of the European countries.

One vital development of recent times has been the opening of a firm foothold in the Common Market. In Western Germany, for example, the group has, in only 18 months' operation, secured a "sizable share" of the market in the ophthalmic lenses. Exports to Germany are still increasing.

Only recently 12 major wholesalers formed a group to handle Britain Kingdom Optical products in West Germany. This is a remarkable achievement when it is remembered that Germany was regarded as the home of lens manufacture and the Group's products have an import duty placed on them.

The Group is confident that Britain's entry into the Common Market, with a consequent lowering of tariffs, would further increase their European business.

Is Confusion In Nouns Of Multitude

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

What grammarians call "the nouns of multitude" are most puzzling to foreigners when trying to learn a new language. A German maid I know returned from shopping and told her mistress she had found it impossible to buy "a group of bananas."

Why should bananas be a "bunch"? There is no reasonable explanation for the nouns of multitude, because language was invented long before logic. I remember, in an old book about the oddities of language, the tale of a foreigner looking at a picture of a number of vessels, and saying, "Look at that flock of ships."

He was told (the book went on) that a flock of ships was called a fleet, and that a fleet of sheep was called a flock. And it was added that a flock of girls is called a bevy, a bevy of wolves is called a pack, a pack of thieves is called a gang, a gang of angels is called a host, a host of porpoises is called a shoal, and a shoal of bullaloes is called a herd.

To further enlighten him in the intricacies of the English language, he was informed that a herd of children is called a troop, a troop of partridges is called a covey, a covey of beauties is called a galaxy, and a galaxy of ruffians is called a horde.

To confound this confusion even more, he was told that a horde of rubbish is called a heap, a heap of oxen is called a drove, a drove of children is called a mob, a mob of whales is called a school, a school of worshippers is called a congregation, a congregation of engineers is called a corps, a corps of robbers is called a band, a band of locusts is called a swarm, and a swarm of people is called a crowd.

In the animal world alone, we have a different word to designate nearly every different species as a group, from a brace or team of horses to a colony of ants and a pride of lions. And, of course, in the realm of semantics, we know how skillfully we change the group names when we are dealing with objects we like or dislike — as, for instance, "a company of money-makers," which includes us, becomes "a gang of drunkards" when the party is held in the apartment just above us.

Many nouns of multitude have been introduced into the language by etymologists, like Eric Partridge, the distinguished British lexicographer, who was given us some delightful and whimsical terms for bishops, judges, and other special categories. Only the other day, in fact, I heard about two such men discussing what a group of prostitutes should be called. "A jam of tarts," volunteered one. "No," said the other, "an anthology of pros."

Birth of Baby Endangered By Placenta Previa

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please explain the cause and what danger exists for the baby at birth if the placenta starts to come first. — Mrs. H.L.R.

This is called placenta previa. If you keep in mind the purpose of the placenta, the danger is readily understood.

The placenta is a pad-like organ something like a large pancake, perhaps an inch thick and eight inches across, which forms on the wall of the uterus in pregnancy.

The mother's blood stream circulates through it. So does that of the fetus or baby. The two streams do not actually touch, but they run very close together through the maze of blood vessels in the placenta.

The fetus, of course, cannot breathe or eat food. It must obtain its nourishment from the mother's blood. It must, in the same way, get rid of the wastes which accumulate in the blood.

Such exchange takes place in the placenta. The baby can transfer ocurs through the tissues even though the two blood vessels in the placenta.

The fetus, of course, cannot breathe or eat food. It must obtain its nourishment from the mother's blood. It must, in the same way, get rid of the wastes which accumulate in the blood.

Such exchange takes place in the placenta. The baby can transfer ocurs through the tissues even though the two blood vessels in the placenta.

Another marvel of nature's skill is that most diseases and other dangerous elements are unable to pass this "placental barrier." There are exceptions. German measles is one of several diseases. Poisons and some drugs also can at times pass this barrier.

However, in general the placenta does a triple service of nourishing the fetus, removing wastes, and protecting the unborn child.

Once the baby is born, the curious action of hormones, plus the contractions of the uterus, loosens the placenta and then expels it. (This is known as the "afterbirth.")

If the placenta separates too soon, then the intricate circulation interchange is disrupted and the baby's life is endangered because the supply of fresh oxygen (in the blood) is shut off.

It is, as you can understand, a touch-and-go emergency unless the baby is born quickly and starts breathing.

The principal cause is faulty position of the placenta. If it is higher in the uterus or lower-than-usual level, it can be torn loose by the stresses of labor. What causes this faulty positioning is not known. It is the sort of condition against which a doctor must always be on guard. Bleeding after the seventh month of pregnancy is a symptom to be heeded.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it possible for a man of 49 to have measles and not feel sick? My husband has quite a few red marks around his upper legs, groin and waist. They haven't bothered him at all, except to irritate him in the country by any yardstick.

Mrs. B.F.

Usually when an adult has one of the so-called "children's diseases," mumps, measles, etc., he is very ill. Fever tends to run high; a measles rash spreads over the entire body, and the patient is thoroughly miserable. For that reason I suspect it would be better to look for some other cause: local irritation, allergy, etc.

Dear Dr. Molner: Do all forms of smoking cause lung cancer? If not, which form is safest? — Mrs. E.S.

To simplify a much-discussed argument, we do not know that smoking causes lung cancer. We do know, however, that cigarette smokers are far more likely to get it than nonsmokers, and the more smoking, the higher the risk. Pipe-smoking, on the other hand, has been blamed for some cancer of the lip and tongue. The evidence, I believe, is that any form of smoking carries some risk.

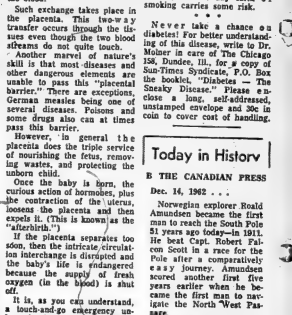
By GREGORY CLARK

The minute you set wheel on one of the big four lane highways, you lose your identity, your individuality, your freedom. You become automatically possessed of a motor. You are the steel-bound prisoner of the concrete on the pavement, of cold brief sightseeing on the shoulder, of overhead and blinking lights ordering your every thought and move in what is called in other literature straight line production.

No matter what speed you might wish to travel at, you find yourself controlled, inexorably controlled, by the powerful forces of the highway so that you travel at the highest speed your temperament or your will power.



You can't go where you want to go. You can go only where you are ordered to go.

You have been calmly and smoothly deprived of your individuality and become an automaton. You defy these overwhelming forces at the risk of your life.

It is little by little, subtly, inch by inch, that we are being converted into another form of life than the one nature intended us to be. So has nature, in the ing of us, decided to let us be ants by our own choice!

Quinte District Digging Out Of Worst Storm of Season, Rash of Mishaps Reported

The Quinte district this morning was still digging out from under the worst snow-storm of the season that swept across Southern Ontario yesterday. In Prince Edward county, the blast cut off rural mail.

Nearly six inches fell in the Belleville area, causing a serious traffic snarl as the storm reached its height during the evening rush-hour. At one point, traffic was brought to a complete standstill in the downtown area.

During the night heavy drifting was the big menace on provincial highways, county and country roads. Heaviest hit was probably the Wellington area of Prince Edward county, where the storm continued through the night. About 11 inches of snow is estimated to have fallen on the Lake Ontario village.

The storm left a string of accidents in its wake that sent several people to hospital throughout the area. None of them was seriously injured.

On highway 2 car reserved out of control near the Bay of Quinte country club and struck a tree broadside. The driver, Mrs. Olda Galloway, of Trenton, was treated for bruises. Damage to the car was $500.

East of Belleville, a transport trailer ran into the back of an automobile operated by Desneston man, John Meagher, in hospital with head cuts.

The storm struck at the district through Prince Edward county, blowing in off Lake Ontario about 10.30 a.m. Shortly after noon, it spread across the Trenton-Belleville area.

AREAS CROWDED

The storm struck both communities as their downtown areas were crowded with Christmas shoppers. It reached its peak in early evening as the traffic rush of home-bound workers started. The blizzard brought some weird reports from motorists.

One driver, caught in the snarl that brought traffic to a standstill on the Front-Pinnacle streets one-way system, said it took him an hour to drive from city hall to the Bridge-Pinnacle intersection. Another claimed he was 90 minutes driving from Goldale Road to a service station just west of the Lower Bridge.

Hardest hit was the Prince Edward county area. In Picton' about 10 inches of snow fell throughout the day-long storm. Several rural communities were reported shut off as the fallout blocked country roads. This morning, however, snow plows were digging out the areas.

The storm brought slight relief from the cold spell that gripped the area since mid-week. In Belleville, the official overnight low was several degrees higher at 10 above.

ANOTHER COLD ONE

However, the cold outrain is expected to drop again tonight with an official low of five above predicted for the Belleville-Trenton area.

The storm petered out just north of the Belleville area. Tweed, where the overnight ow was six above, only a half-ach of snow was recorded. At Bancroft, with a low of three below, a quarter-inch fell.

At least one pedestrian was hurt in the storm. Belleville during the storm. Mrs. Lila Adams, a Madoc woman, was admitted to Belleville General Hospital with leg injuries when she slipped and fell on the sidewalk at Front and Campbell streets.

Addressing the Canadian Parliament in Ottawa in May, 1961, President Kennedy announced the commitment of five and subsequently more Polaris atomic missiles to NATO.

He said the U.S. was looking forward to the possibility of establishing a NATO seaborne force "truly international in ownership and control" if the NATO allies wanted it.

Observers have noted, however, NATO seems as far away as ever from any agreement on how such a force would be controlled or financed. Britain and France have strong reservations about the idea.

Private comment before the session showed the depth of emotion and resentment aroused by the unconcealed wish of the United States that Britain and France quit the nuclear league.

President Kennedy's administration believes the scattering of nuclear weapon power among national forces as a world danger and is advocating a combined NATO nuclear force as a war deterrent.

"If Great Britain gives up her independent nuclear deterrent," one British official said, "she will sink to the status of a third-rate power. We are therefore at a turning-point in our history."

British sensitivities have been rubbed raw by U.S. Defence Secretary Robert McNamara's proposal to junk the Skybolt, the air-launched American missile on which Britain pinned plans to keep herself an independent nuclear power.

But in London Daily Mail said Prime Minister Macmillan has agreed to give up the Skybolt and to accept McNamara's offer of Polaris missiles instead. The Mail said a $700,000,000 Polaris submarine would be launched in British shipyards to build a fleet of nuclear submarines for the American missiles. Britain will supply the warheads, as she planned to do for the Skybolt.

Senior Citizens To Hold Banquet On December 19

The Belleville Senior Citizens club will hold their annual Christmas banquet on Dec. 19 this year, according to the Belleville Recreation Commission. More than 100 of the 170 club members are expected to turn out for the party, to be held at the Knights of Columbus Hall.

The program will include entertainment by an organist and a soloist, and an address by the Right Rev. J. P. Sullivan. Prizes will be drawn for, and a dance is planned for the evening.

Other holiday events planned in the city include the Quinte Twirlers planned New Year's Dance, Dec. 31 at Tobe's County Gardens and the Club 39 New Year's Dance, at 9 p.m. Dec. 31, at the Engineers' Hall. The Club 39 dance is for the benefit of members only.

Dismiss Charge Of Car Racing

Driving in Belleville at times is a racy business—a fact which drew a magistrate's comment today.

"It certainly feel that some of the conduct observed by youthful drivers in this city here and other cities might properly support a charge of racing," said Magistrate T. .Y. Wills.

He made the observation in dismissing a charge of racing against two Belleville youths—Thomas Parkhurst and Vernon Sergeant. They were charged after police followed their automobiles on Canniton Road, Dec. 14.

The magistrate ruled the evidence insufficient to support the charge.

Moira River Reforestation Project Largest in Ontario

Although much younger in years than many other similar organizations in the province, the Moira River Conservation Authority has the largest reforestation area of any authority in Ontario.

This was stated Thursday at Canniffon by Clarence T. Grasham, chairman of the Moira Authority's reforestation committee.

Mr. Grasham stated the Moira Authority now had more than 12,000 acres of reforestation area with options for the purchase of another 748 acres. The Authority has reforestation areas in 11 of its 17 member municipalities, the big bulk of the acreage being in Hungerford and Elzevir townships.

Well over a million trees have been planted on Authority reforestation areas with additional trees being planted at the rate of a quarter of a million a year.

Authority forests are under the direction of the Department of Lands and Forests.

One of the reasons that the bulk of the Authority reforestation acreage is in Hungerford township is that this township turned over its municipal forest area to the Authority.

Mr. Graham noted that reforestation was "big business" with the Authority and was one activity of the organization from which results were readily visible.

Department of Lands and Forsts representative L. E. Fiegurl of Tweed said his department was devoting more and more time to the Authority forest area as the acreage and timber value grew.

Of the over 12,000 acres of Authority reforestation area 5,703 are in Hungerford and 2,460 are in Elzevir township.

Conservation Areas See Big Increase in Attendance

Attendance at the Col. Rocoe Vanderwater Conservation Area at Thomasburg during the past summer showed an increase of 4,000 persons over a year ago.

This was the attendance picture given yesterday by Bruce H. Smith, Conservation Areas committee chairman, for the Thomasburg recreation area which grows in popularity each year. Mr. Smith made the report at the final Authority meeting for 1962 at Canniffon.

He noted that the picnic areas at the Vanderwater area had been increased for last summer's activities with boating and swimming facilities being provided.

A demonstration farm pond had been built and the road through the area greatly extended.

Also a new road had been provided into the O'Hara Mill Conservation Area northwest of Madoc and the waterwheel for operation of the sawmill was being preserved to conserve water usage.

Attendance at the Price Conservation Area at Actinolite and at the O'Hara Mill area both had seen increases during the past year.

Police Say Boy Dashed In Front of Car

A 7-year-old Belleville schoolboy was still under hospital care today after he was hit by a car in the city's northwest suburbs yesterday.

Robert Massey, 63 Furdy Street, suffered cuts and bruises in the accident near Our Lady of Fatima separate school.

Police say the boy dashed into the path of a car driven by Joan Gibson, 32 Charlotte St.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mrs. J.T. — Her Leona is forever tattling to me about my children.

Mrs. E.Y. — Someone has to tell her when her kids are breaking things.

Mrs. J.T. — I wish Mrs. Y. would tell her Leona to mind her own business. This is a 10-year old snoop who comes running to my back door with the latest bulletins on who's hitting my kids or who they're punching. And if one of them so much as throws a leaf at her, she bellows for me to come out and make them stop "fighting" with her.

Well, I'm not interested. In case Leona thinks she's a heroine for keeping me posted, I want her to know I'm not handing out medals to tattletales. She just has no friends, nothing to do, so she keeps busy spying on what the other kids do and then tells on them. Maybe the kids would like her more if she joined in, instead of finding so much fault.

Mrs. E.Y.—It's not tatting to give important information. Mrs. T. can't play ostrich and pretend her sons are just sitting still on a bench and watching the sunset! She figures what she doesn't know won't hurt her. Well, it hurts others and we'll tell her. It's her duty to make them play right.

The other day those kids almost started a fire. They made a tent of a wool blanket and set up lighted candles in their garage. When Leona ran over to tell their mother she became angry and yelled, "Go back and blow them out!" We live next door and Leona can't help noticing the dangerous things those children do. Mrs. Y. should be grateful.

• • •

The Council: Tattletales, informers, tale-bearers are a sad but ugly lot. Mother Goose disposed of them summarily in the old childhood jibe:

"Tell tale tit,
Your tongue shall be slit,
And all the dogs in town
Shall have a little bit."

But Mrs. T. must distinguish between tattling for the sake of stirring up trouble, and honest reporting of vital information which she'd rather not know seem to fall into the latter category. Mrs. T. merely resents not being able to say she didn't know, when trouble or damage ensue!

On the other hand, Mrs. Y. must help her daughter distinguish between a "public service bulletin" — to prevent disaster — and a spoilsport exaggeration to call attention to "goodie-goodie little me" and "awful-awful them."

The child who snitches should always be listened to. Sometimes, as with Leona, the telling is legitimate and should be acted upon promptly. You wouldn't call Paul Revere a tattletale, would you, for his earnest spreading of the word? But sometimes the tell-tailing reveals a troubled child — lonely and feeling "out of things." Mrs. Y. must ask herself whether Leona pounces on complaints about Mrs. T.'s children, as a way of getting even for being left out of their games. Her tactics make her even more unpopular. Can she be helped to understand and accept some of the games played by the neighbor children?

These mothers can ease the situation. Mrs. Y. can help her daughter find enough satisfying activities not to mind being left out of the next-door excitement. At the same time, Mrs. T. can explain to her children that Leona isn't a stool pigeon, but a good citizen who knows when to sound an alert. And she can thank her for same.

What are you looking for when you buy your stereo or television? For over half a century, Electrohome has felt the answer lies in three important areas. You want performance. Sound and picture reproduction that are as near perfect as is possible.

You want reliability. When you buy any good set, you are investing an appreciable amount of money. You expect your investment to pay you a dividend of pleasure for many years.

You want beauty. Your stereo or television is part of your furniture. You want to be able to display it proudly, even when it is silent.

The Electrohome engineering laboratories are among the largest and most modern in North America. But it isn't their size that's important. What matters is the people who staff them. They regard Electrohome's high quality standard as something to be surpassed. To them, research into improvement is an exciting challenge. Performance and reliability are in their safe keeping.

Beauty is Dellcraft. Artists and craftsmen, dedicated to the time honoured art of creating beauty from wood. Did you know that all Dellcraft cabinets are hand-finished? There isn't a machine anywhere that can match the loving care of skilled hands.

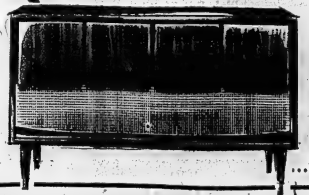
ELECTROHOME ● VALUE

A. The Montego B. The Castanet MK II D. The Conway



Discerning television viewers want much more than adequate picture and sound. They demand a sharper, clearer picture and a high fidelity sound system worthy of the concerts and drama they enjoy. And because they want true noise, they demand built-in dependability, too. Last but not least, they select television that will live in beautiful harmony with their other furniture. For all these reasons, more and more quality-conscious viewers are choosing Electrohome. In every price range, here truly is television with the difference!

The drama of traditional Spanish design is reflected in the striking MONTEGO, while the CASTANET MK II is in today's tradition of elegant simplicity. Each is a masterpiece of Dellcraft furniture styling-crafted with meticulous care in selected hardwoods and protected by mar-resisting Duradell finish. Performance equals their outward perfection. Precision 20-watt hand-crafted chassis have 12-tubes and 2 silicon rectifiers for 19-tube functions. Equipped with Multiplex, they have 2 additional tubes and 2 dual diodes for 25-tube functions. The Montego has 2-10", 2-6" and 2-4" speakers and Garrard type "A" changer with weighted turntable and diamond stylus. "The 8 pushbutton control panel includes Satellite switching and AFC.

The Castanet MK II has 2-10" and 2-4" speakers and Garrard "AT6" changer with diamond stylus.

The CONWAY is truly contemporary in its simplicity and flawless good taste. It features a tranformer-powered chassis that performs 15-tube functions and delivers a big 20 watts. Stereo radio is optional. The Garrard "Austostim" changer is renowned for its smooth dependability. Balanced speaker system has 2-10" and 2-4" speakers. Warn Students Not to Make Cuban Visit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The state department Thursday warned U.S. college students it said are being encouraged to visit Cuba that such a trip could make them liable to fines or prison sentences when they get back.

The department advised students who may be planning to visit Cuba during the Christmas holidays that such a visit without a properly validated passport is a violation of the U.S. travel control law.

The statement was issued after reports circulated this week that students at a number of eastern universities were being invited to go to Cuba.

B. Stewart (L — Antigonish-Guysborough) didn't think his party could "tolerate much longer" interim supply motions without the full estimates. And the New Democratic Party leader, T. C. Douglas, suggested at the end of the night's sitting that Justice Minister Fleming reply today to a question of alleged RCMP investigations into the political activities of university students if the government is to expect co-operation on this interim supply motion.

Despite the indications of storm signals over interim supply, it was the Columbia River issue that took the spotlight for the second straight day, with H. W. Herridge (NDP—Kootenay West) leading the way.

ATTACKS TREATY

The present treaty is the result of "a complete lack of planning and lack of knowledge of the facts," he charged, and he went to say that when Prime Minister Diefenbaker announced the signing of the treaty he "did not really understand what the terms of the treaty meant."

Like all the members who followed, he called for renegotiation of the treaty, suggesting the terms originally proposed by Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, former head of the Canadian section of the International Joint Commission.

Tom Berger (NDP—Vancouver Burrard) said the present treaty forfeits Canada's rights to divert the waters of three rivers—the Kootenay, Columbia and Fraser—and he, too, called for a new agreement based on the McNaughton plan.

Mr. Diefenbaker told the Commons that no deadline has been set for ratification of the treaty.

retarded children.

Speaking during second reading of a bill enabling the province to make grants toward construction and operation of retarded children's homes, he said the action did not go far enough.

He said the proposed financing principle, under which the province would pay no more than 50 per cent of the construction and operational costs, places an inordinate burden on the children's parents, who were almost "in the position of perpetual beggars of alms."

NDP Leader Donald C. MacDonald said he agreed with Mr. Singer that the financing principle placed too much of the burden on the parents.

Can You Remember Names of Reindeer?

By JACK HUTTON

So you all know about Christmas, do you? How many teenagers — or their parents — can answer all of the questions below.

Try it as a family project and make sure you don't peek in advance at the answers.

1— We take for granted the tradition that people kiss below the green mistletoe. When did this start?

2—You've heard the story of the Wise Men who went to Bethlehem for the birth of Christ. How many of them made the journey?

3—Where did Boxing Day get its name?

4—Have you ever seen someone hastily get rid of holly and mistletoe on New Year's Day? What is the tradition behind that?

5—You've sung the Christmas carol "Good King Wenceslas" ever since you can remember. Who was he?

6—Santa Claus must be a fellow with a fine memory if he can always remember the names of his eight reindeer. What are they called?

7—Where did the name "Christmas" come from, and why is it celebrated on December 25th? Pat yourself on the back if you know both these answers.

8—What started the tradition of decorating a Christmas tree? Did settlers decrate Christmas trees in the early days of Canada's settlement?

9—There is another title for Christmas Day. Do you know it?

10—There is, believe it or not, a town called Santa Claus in the world. Which country is it in . . . Portugal, the United States, Canada or Poland?

Rather tricky, weren't they? Lift up your chin if you guessed five out of 10 questions correct. If you guessed eight or more questions correctly you've obviously all set for the festive season.

1— The ancient Druids, who thought mistletoe had some magical quality (and doesn't it?), believed that a newly-married couple who kissed under the mistletoe were assured of a fine marriage.

2 — We figure three made the journey because the Bible mentions three gifts, gold, frankincense and myrrh — but nobody can be sure.

4 — Servants in the Middle Ages used to open their boxes into which their masters and others had poured gifts of money. The day became known as "Boxing Day."

4 — It's supposed to be bad luck to leave holly or mistletoe in the house after midnight on New Year's Day.

5 — He was a king in Bohemia who was known for helping the people of his kingdom.

6— Dasher, Dancer, Prancer, Vixen, Comet, Cupid, Donner and Blitzen.

7 — Pope Julius I, in the Fourth Century decreed that December 25th would from then on be observed as "Christ's Mass" day. Hence the name "Christmas."

8 — This may surprise you, but the first Christmas trees weren't decorated in North America until about 1840. Historians differ about who originated the Christmas tree, but most agree it was the Germans.

9 — The Feast of the Nativity of Our Lord.

10 — The town is in the United States, in Indiana.

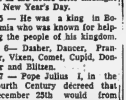
YULE GIFTS

Terry Griffiths, 17, fired us his seasonal problem from Vancouver, B.C. I couldn't even attempt to answer his questions, but you might sympathize with them.

"If you're thinking of writing a Christmas column," he wrote, "be sure not to leave out one problem of male teenagers. Why should we be saddled with a task of buying a girl friend a Christmas present every year?"

"I'm not objecting to buying the present. That's fine. What I object to is the subtle competition which girls are able to whip up starting about the beginning of December.

"You know what I mean — the girl who casually mentions that Bob is going to buy Lois a nice pair of earrings, and isn't that nice of him. Or she's heard that George wants to find a cashmere sweater to match the color of Helen's hair.



"Before you know it, you're afraid to think of the original present which would have matched the weekly allowance. You're afraid that Bob or George will think you're a small fish.

"And then you find that Bob and George are getting the same treatment. I say we should either cut out this competition, or else cut out girlfriends' presents altogether.

SALISBURY — PITT

Bronze chrysanthemums and white gladioli formed a lovely setting in Hazards United Church for the wedding on Saturday, November 10, at 2:30 p.m., of Beatrice Eileen Pitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald F. Pitt, Madoc, to Roger Norman Salisbury, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Salisbury, R.R. 7, Belleville. The Rev Ambury of Queensboro officiated.

Mrs. Philo Harris provided the traditional music and accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Ross Moorcroft, in her renditions of "The Wedding Prayer," previous to the ceremony, and "O Perfect Love," during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiantly lovely in a full length bridal gown of Chantilly lace over satin taffeta, featuring a fitted bodice adorned with swirls of iridescent sequins, a bateau neckline and long "V"-pointed sleeves. The full skirt was accented by tiers of matching Chantilly lace. Her shoulder-length veil of tulle illusion and Chantilly lace was held by a pillbox hat executed with sequins and seed pearls. She carried a heart-shaped bouquet of happiness roses interspersed with stephanotis and white satin streamers.

Mrs. Gordon Crosby of Belleville was matron of honor and wore a street-length dress of old gold peau de soie fashioned with a bell-shaped skirt and featuring a fitted bodice and elbow-length sleeves. Her headdress was a velvet bow with circular veil. She carried a heart-shaped bouquet of white carnations and bronze 'mums.

Mr. Wallace F. Pitt of Madoc was groomsman, while Messrs. James Salisbury, Belleville, brother of the bridegroom, and Clare Treverton, of Plainfield, were the ushers.

The reception was held in the I.O.O.F. Hall, Madoc where the bridal table was prettily appointed with white damask cloth, centred with a three-tier all white wedding cake topped with miniature bride and bridegroom beneath an arch of white roses and misted about the base with white tulle and flanked by silver candelabra holding white tapers.

The bride's mother received the guests wearing a gown of brown and gold of pure silk in sheath style with matching jacket, beige and black accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. The bridegroom's mother assisted dressed in green and egg shell silk sheath with matching jacket, Persian lamb hat, brown accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

For the honeymoon to Niagara Falls and New York State the bride chose a forest and light green three-piece double knit ensemble, beige velvet hat, long beige gloves, dark brown shoes and purse and a corsage of bronze 'mums.

Guests were present from Madoc; Belleville; Peterborough; Plainfield and St. Catharines.

The bride was honored previous to her marriage at a miscellaneous shower by the community at the home of Helen Chambers with Mrs. Marie McGowan as co-hostesses, and at Chambers and Mrs. Hilda McGowann as co-hostesses, and at a miscellaneous shower held by the girls of American Optical, with Miss Margaret Pennell as hostess. She was also presented with a crystal pitcher and juice glasses by the office staff of American Optical. The bridegroom was presented with two table lamps by his co-workers at Amplifone Can. Limited.

Mr. and Mrs. Salisbury are residing at Belleville R.R. 7.

U.C.W Meetings

COLLEGE HILL U.C.W.

On Wednesday, the afternoon Unit of College Hill United Church Women held their monthly meeting at the church.

The president, Mrs. A. Dickens was in charge of the meeting, which opened with the singing of the theme hymn.

A short business period followed when reports were given and cent-a-day and birthday money was handed in. Correspondence was read and words of appreciation were expressed from two members who had been remembered when ill.

The devotional period opened with prayer by Mrs. Dickens. A piano selection of Christmas carols was played by Mrs. C. Bailey, and a reading "Keeping Christmas" by Mrs. K. Belcourt.

From the study book, "The Islim of East Asia," the chapter on Taiwan was presented by Mrs. R. Vessey, Mrs. A. Dickens and Mrs. R. Neal. Mrs. Vessey told something of the history and present conditions on the island. From 1895 until 1945 the Japanese controlled Taiwan, despite a hundred or more local uprisings. They introduced improvements, but the Taiwan economy was made to serve Japanese interests. Since 1945 the Chinese have assumed control and much aid is received from the U.S. government. Interesting facts were learned about the people themselves, their language, their attitudes and education. Four different tribes inhabit the small island.

Religions are showing new life as they are stimulated by the growth of the Christian churches. Hospitals and medical and dental clinics are run by Christian workers. The welfare of these Taiwanese people and the degree of democracy that can be realized depends largely on the support of Americans and the United Nations and those who face these responsibilities need understanding and prayer.

An interesting question and discussion period followed the study of this chapter.

Dainty refreshments, in keeping with the Christmas season, were served by Mrs. H. Clarke and Mrs. G. White.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Samuel Pointer are shown cutting the wedding cake following their recent marriage in St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, Belleville. The bride is the former Gloria Ruth Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Johnson, Belleville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Pointer, Belleville.

POINTER—JOHNSON

A lovely double-ring wedding was solemnized in St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, Belleville, on Saturday, November 17, by the Rev. Father Buckley, when Gloria Ruth Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Johnson of Belleville, was united in marriage to Ronald Samuel Pointer son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Pointer, of Belleville.

Beautiful gladioli and white and turquoise tinted chrysanthemums adorned the altar and white satin bows designated the guest pews.

Traditional wedding music was rendered by Sister Mary Rosaria who presided at the organ and renditions included "The Wedding March" and "On This Day O Beautiful Mother."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiantly lovely in her floor-length bridal gown of flowered nylon sheer over peau de soie featuring a fitted bodice with rounded neckline and lily-point sleeves. Her bouffant veil was held by a crown of seed pearls and she carried a semi cascade bouquet of pink roses and trailing ivy. A single strand drop pearl necklace and white satin slippers completed her ensemble.

She was attended by Miss Dawn Woods, of Belleville as maid of honor and Miss Dianne Johnson, Belleville, cousin of the bride and Miss Barbara Pointer, sister of the bridegroom, as bridesmaids. All were similarly attired in turquoise nylon chiffon over taffets with fitted bodices and short knee-length bell shaped skirts. They wore matching headdresses and shoes and carried posegars of white and turquoise tinted mums with matching ribbons. Each wore a single strand of pearls and matching carrings, gifts from the bride. Miss Jan-lee Scholte of Port Hope was the sweet little flower girl dressed in white nylon with matching shoes and turquoise head band and carried a nosegay of turquoise and white mums. Master Herbie Pointer, brother of the bridegroom was the natty little ring bearer.

Mr. Hubert Pointer, brother of the bridegroom attended as groomsman, while Mr. Gerald Ethier, Belleville and Mr. Wayne Johnson, brother of the bride ushered the guests.

The reception and dinner for seventy-five guests was held in Club Canara with Mr. Jack Boyle, uncle of the bridegroom as toastmaster.

The bride's table was prettily appointed with white damask and centred by the traditional three-tier wedding cake topped with white oells bearing wedding rings beneath an arch of lily-of-the-valley, and misted about the base with clouds of white tulle and tiny pink rosebuds. Tall white candles in silver holders and the bridal bouquets dompleted the nuptial setting.

The guests were received by the bride's mother who wore a silk brocade dress in midnight blue with matching shoes and white accessories and a corsage of pink roses and white carnations. She was assisted by the mother of the bridegroom who wore a gold colored suit of imported wool trimmed with mink collar and dark brown cloche hat and brown accessories.

For the wedding trip to Rochester the bride chose a red wool suit, white hat and gloves, black shoes and bag and a corsage of, red and white carnations.

Guests attended from Port Hope, Toronto, Kingston, Port Elgin, Wellington, Trenton and Belleville.

Previous to her marriage the bride was honored at a miscellaneous shower held at the home of Mrs. Michael Sheehy as hostess with Mrs. Herb Pointer as co-hostess; also at a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. Gordon Woods, with Miss Dawn Woods, maid of honor as hostess, and at a cup and saucer shower at the home of Mrs. Ed. Ingrantham with Mrs. Ingrantham as hostess.

The young couple are residing at 302A Albert Street, Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Douglas Galvin, Brampton, are shown leaving the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, Belleville, following their recent marriage. The bride is the former Barbara Joan Chapelle, daughter of Mr. John Chapelle, Belleville, and the late Mrs. Chapelle. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Joseph Galvin, Peterborough and the late Mr. Galvin.

GALVIN — CHAPELLE

A lovely wedding was solemnized on Saturday, November 24, in the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, Belleville, by the Rev. Patrick Carty, when Barbara Joan, daughter of Mr. John Chapelle of Belleville and the late Mrs. Chapelle became the bride of Paul Douglas Galvin of Peterborough, son of Mrs. Joseph Galvin and the late Mr. Galvin.

Tall standards of white chrysanthemums and white pom pom 'mums with blue vigils adorned the altar.

The wedding music was rendered by Miss Dorothy Grant of Belleville who also accompanied the soloist, Mr. William Mann of Belleville, as he sang "The Wedding Prayer," "Ave Maria" and Ave Verum before and during the ceremony and "O God of Loveliness" and "On This Day O Beautiful Mother," during the signing of the register.

The bride given in marriage by her father was radiantly lovely in a gown of satin peau de soie with a becoming scooped neckline trimmed with applique of alencon lace and rhinestones shaped with a controlled skirt and chapel train, enchanced with a large self bow at the waistline and long sleeves. Her headdress was a crescent headpiece with bouffant silk illusion veiling trimmed with pearls and sequins and she carried a cascade bouquet of pink sweetheart roses mingled with white and pink feathered carnations.

The bride was attended by Miss Winnifred Maloney of Peterborough as maid of honor; and by Miss Rita Chapelle of Brantford, sister of the bride and Miss Maureen Farrell of Ottawa, as bridesmaids. The attendants were beautifully attired in royal blue pure silk sheath dresses with detachable bell shaped over skirts with matching velvet headpieces and shoes. They carried cascade bouquets of white 'mums mingled with pink and white feathered carnations.

The bridegroom was attended by Mr. Clare Galvin, brother of the bridegroom, of Peterborough, and the ushers were Dr. Grant Nadon of Toronto and Mr. Joseph Chapelle of Belleville, brother of the bride.

The reception was held at Club Canara, where the bride's table was appointed with a white linen cloth and centered by an all-white, three-tier wedding cake topped by lily-of-the-valley and two white doves holding wedding rings and misted about the base with whimsy tulle. Tapering white candles and bridal bouquets added to the beauty of the nuptial setting. Following the dinner orchestra music was enjoyed.

The bride's sister, Mrs. Tom Dolan, of Trenton, received the guests, attired in a magenta two-piece wool suit with a white fur hat, brown accessories and a corsage of white carnations. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, gowned in a gold and white brocaded ensemble with white accessories and a corsage of baby pink roses.

Mr. Tom Lally of Belleville was master of ceremonies at the reception.

For the wedding trip to Lake Placid and New York City, the bride chose a cream colored wool dress over which she wore a red boucle coat with beaver collar and cuffs and matching fur hat, brown accessories and a gerdenia corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. Galvin are residing at 31 Peel Avenue, Brampton, Ont., where the bridegroom is associated with the law firm of Davis, Davis and Webb.

Previous to the marriage the couple were entertained at several social functions: at a presentation by the Association of Teachers and Instructors of the Ontario School for the Deaf, where the bride was on the teaching staff; at a dinner and presentation by the Sodality of Our Lady; at a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. Morley Davidson, with Mrs. John Prudeau, Mrs. Ken Graham and Miss Winnifred Maloney as co-hostesses; at an electrical appliance shower at the home of Mrs. Edward Murphy in Peterborough; at a party at the home of Mrs. John Prudeau, assisted by Miss Winnifred Maloney; at a presentation by the staff of Davis, Davis and Webb in Brampton, and at a rehearsal party, given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Chapelle.

Guests were present from New York, London, Ottawa, Guelph, Brantford, Cornwall, Toronto, Beaverton, Peterborough, Sunderland, Tilsonburg, Perth, Morrisburg, Oakwood, Bedford, Marlbank, Marmora and Read.

Marital Cases Discussed By Minister

MONTREAL (CP) — Mrs. Claire Kirkland - Casgrain, newly-appointed minister without portfolio in the Quebec cabinet, said Thursday that legal remedies in marital disputes are antiquated and inefficient. She urged a constitutional amendment to provide for provincial marriage courts.

Mrs. Kirkland - Casgrain, a lawyer and mother of three children, told a service club that with marital cases being heard in criminal court, "any existing chance of reconciliation has been swept away."

"Questions of finance or non-support or infidelity are intricately examined and by the time the hearing is over the personal problems and lives of the litigants are what is commonly called 'open books'."

Mrs. Kirkland-Castrain, Quebec's first woman cabinet minister, told her all-male audience that she was personally in favor of a revised type of court, reserved exclusively for marital problems."

"This would require that before legal proceedings are instituted, the parties would be obliged to discuss their problems with competent, trained, court-appointed staffs. The public of course would be barred, no records would be kept and all proceedings would be secret. There would be a period of counselling over several months. . . .

"We should try to get away from the strict formality of the courts. I believe this procedure would be a step in the right direction in salvaging the most sacred of all legal contracts—the marriage contract."

Weddings

SEAMES — DANIELS

A lovely wedding was solemnized recently in Christ Church, Belleville when Margaret Rose Daniels, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ernest Daniels, R.R. 7 Belleville was united in marriage to Joseph Patrick Seames, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Patrick Seames, Belleville. The Rev. Everett P. Smith, officiated at the ceremony.

The church was decorated with an array of floral arrangements, and white satin bows designated the guest pews.

Traditional wedding music was rendered by the church organist, Mr. John Croyden Withers.

The bride, given in marriage by her father was lovely in a street-length bridal gown of Chantilly lace with tne back of the gown having a flowing scalloped-effect and featuring a rounded neckline and long lily-point sleeves. Her headdress was a semi halo enerlated with seed pearls and sequins holding in place a waist-length veil of tulle illusion. She carried a white Bible crested with sweetheart roses and tiny rosebuds on knotted streamers.

Mrs. Eugene Maybee, R.R. 2, Gosecon, sister of the bride as matron of honor was attired in a street-length dress of blue nylon over taffeta highlighted by a big bow at the back. She wore a blue satin hat with bow on top, white shoes and gloves and carried a cascade bouquet of yellow and white 'mums with rainbow colored streamers.

Mr. George Daniels, brother of the bride attended the bride groom.

The reception was held at the home of the bride which was decorated with white and pink bells and streamers and here the bridal table was most attractive with snow white cloth centred with the traditional three-tier wedding cake, flanked with tapering candles in silver candelabra.

The bride's mother received the guests wearing a coffee colored sheath, white accessories and a corsage of bronze 'mums and was assisted by the mother of the bridegroom who wore a light blue silk brocade dress, black accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

For the wedding trip to points in Northern Ontario the bride chose a blue wool dress, beige accessories and a corsage of red sweetheart roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Seames are residing in Belleville.

Guests were present from Belleville, Consecon, Canniffton, Shannonville, Rossmore, Trenton and Plainfield.

Previous to the marriage the bride was honored at a miscellaneous shower at the home of an aunt, Mrs. William Armstrong, Canniffton with Mrs. Eugene Maybee, the matron of honor as co-hostess, and at a kitchen shower held by the sisters-in-law of the bride at the home of Mrs. George Seames.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

WHAT'S YOUR E.Q.?

While manners and conduct among youthful contemporaries is more relaxed and informal, courtesy towards elders is still very much of the "old school." See if you can answer the following:

1. Should a woman rise when an older woman enters the room?

2. How is an older man or woman introduced?

3. Is it ever permissible to call an older person by his or her first name?

4. When should a young girl rise for her elders?

5. Should she offer an older man her hand?

6. How are a young matron and an elderly woman introduced?

7. How are a young man and a much older man introduced?

8. Should a young man offer his hand to an older man?

9. How is an elderly couple seated at table?

10. Should guests stay until the senior couple leave a gathering?

Answers:

1. Only if the woman is definitely much older. Otherwise she may remain seated.

2. A young couple may be introduced as "Bill and Jane Smith," but an older couple would be introduced as "Mr. and Mrs. Smith."

3. No. First names are used only if the older persons request it.

4. A teen-ager and other very young girls rise whenever adults, including their parents' friends, enter a room.

5. No. The offer to shake hands should come from the older person.

6. The young woman is presented to the older woman. She does not offer her hand, and shakes hands only if the older woman offers hers.

7. Again, the younger is introduced to the older.

8. No, he should wait until the older man offers to shake hands.

9. If there is no other guest of honor, the older man is seated to the right of the hostess and his wife to the right of the host.

10. If they had the honor places at table, then guests should leave after they've said good-night.

Latter Day Saints W.D. Holds Meet

The Women's Department of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints met at the home of Mrs. W. L. Cannift, 229 Dufferin Ave. on Wednesday evening for a special Christmas party and worship service.

A letter was read by Mrs. Jack McCurdy from Mrs. J. T. Westwood of the General Council of Women from Church headquarters at independence, Missouri regarding a change in place of the regional conferences for 1963. The members were reminded to prepare for true worship experiences at Christmas in memory of the birth of Jesus, the Christ.

Under the leadership of Mrs. W. L. Canniff fun games were played and prizes were won by Mrs. S. C. Else, Miss Carol Canniff, Mrs. L. Smith, Mrs. Jack McCurdy and Mrs. Ruby McIntosh.

Following the games the ladies wrapped the gifts to be given at the coming Christmas concert, to the children of the Sunday school.

Mrs. Canniff announced that a gift of jewelry had been purchased for Mrs. W. Harrison who has moved from the group.

A delicious luncheon, in keeping with the festive season was served by the hostess.

The ladies gathered for worship service. A reading, "Star Over Bethlehem," was read by Mrs. S. C. Else and Christmas solos and duets were rendered by the Misses Sandra and Diane Canniff.

Closing prayer was offered by the pastor of the church in Belleville, Elder W. L. Canniff.

QUESTION:

. . . I am giving a dinner for friends who are leaving for Spain . . . would you give recipes for a Spanish main dish and dessert . . . ? M. B.

ANSWER:

I have mailed to you the recipe for Spanish Bun. I have not tried the Picadillo below but it comes from a Tellow food editor who recommends it highly.

Dinner Menus

FRIDAY

Scallops a la Newburg on Fine Noodles; Brussels Sprouts; Tomato Aspic on Shredded Lettuce; Sour Cream Dressing; Orange Ambrosia; Macaroons; Coffee.

SUNDAY

Picadillo (see Friday); Fluffy Rice; Mixed Green and Yellow Beans; Waldorf Salad; Indian Pudding (see Saturday); 10% Cream Coffee.

PICADILLO (a ground beef Spanish special):

¼ cup butter or margarine, 1 garlic clove chopped, 1 large onion chopped, 1 green pepper chopped, 4 sprigs parsley chopped, 1½ lbs. good quality ground beef, ½ cup Sultana raisins, ¼ cup blanched almonds (whole), 2 tablespoons sliced stuffed olives, 1 tablespoon capers, 1 bay leaf crumbled, 2 teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ¼ cup tomato paste, ½ cup dry wine.

In a large frying pan melt butter or margarine and in it gently saute the garlic until golden. Skim out garlic and discard. Now gently saute onion, pepper, and parsley until limp but not brown. Add beef, stirring with fork to break up all lumps, and brown it until gold. Add all remaining ingredients and simmer covered, 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Serve over fluffy rice. Serves 6.

QUESTION:

I wonder if you could please give me the recipe for Hungarian Beef Goulash . . . Mrs. M. H.

ANSWER:

To the following Goulash recipe other vegetables such as carrots, turnips and green pepper may be added and stew may be more highly seasoned.

HUNGARIAN GOULASH:

2 lbs. lean stewing beef, cut in 1" cubes, ¼ cup flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 1-16 teaspoon pepper, ¼ cup shortening, 2 cloves garlic, chopped, 2 cups warm water, 1 cup tomatoes, canned or fresh, 1 bay leaf, crumbled, 1 or 2 tablespoons paprika, 1½ teaspoons salt (second amount), dash of cayenne pepper, 4 medium potatoes, diced, 4 medium onions, sliced, ¼ cup flour (second amount), ¼ cup cold water.

Dredge cubed meat in flour seasoned with the ½ teaspoon salt and pepper. Heat shortening in large frying pan with cover or Dutch oven and brown meat and garlic. When meat is brown on all sides, add water, tomatoes, bay leaf, paprika, salt and cayenne. Cover. Cook until boiling, then reduce heat to simmer. Cook 2 hours, or until meat is tender. Add diced potatoes and onions and cook 30 minutes longer. Blend the flour with water until mixture forms a smooth paste, then add to goulash and cook, stirring, until thickened. Serves 6.

Cake soap will last longer if unwrapped a few weeks before using, to allow evaporation.

Hair Style Fashions Highlight Coffee Party at Yacht Club

On Wednesday afternoon the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club was the scene of a dessert and coffee party. Receiving the guests in the lobby, gaily decorated for the festive season, were Mrs. Ted Roland, wife of the Commodore and Mrs. O. L. Pinkston, wife of the Vice Commodore.

Under the supervision of Vivian and Len Jewell and their assistants, Mr. Georgel, Mr. Bill and Mr. John, a delightful hair style fashion show was presented. It included high style hairdos, fashionable hair color and the rainbow colors for party wear.

To further enhance milady's beauty and assist her in being lovely at all times, Mr. Howard Crossett of Toronto Human Hair presented "The Wiggy".

Exquisite pieces of jewelry supplied by Mrs. Ron Keel and delicate facial make-up by Mrs. Bill Jenkins added greatly to the success of the show.

The hair fashion show was convened by Mrs. Lennox Smith and committee members, Mesdames, F. Vealland, O. Pinkston, R. Dulmage, W. Knudsen, Joe Raycroft and fashion coordinator Vivian Jewell.

The models included:- fashionable hair colors—Mesdames, Dave McDonald, Mrs. V. McLean, Jean Skidmore, Kay Keksh, M. Davison, Audrey Moorman, Cathie Kerr, Bert Ireland, and Misses Sandra Tatham, Margaret Fairbain, Janet Carr, party colors — Mesdames, George Haggis, George Hicks, G. Hales, I. Dickie and W. C. Tatham; wigs — Mesdames: Charles Taylor, W. Purdy, E. Colebourne, O. Pinkston and J. G. Tatham, and special styles—Mrs. Anna Parsons and Junior Misses—Lynn Jewell and Denise Jewell.

Moody Daughter May Break Engagement

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS—My daughter is letting her moods of inferiority and jealousy overcome her usual good judgment to the point of breaking off her engagement.

If you have any suggestions as to any literature which would shed some light on this problem, or any information as to counselling, etc., I would be very appreciative if you would forward same.— MOTHER MARY.

DEAR MOTHER—And your diagnosis says breaking off is wrong? While you haven't said so, jealousy suggests other girls. If these two are very young, maybe they are both unsure and should wait a while.

But if, as you say, it's her inferiority feelings that are muddying up her judgment, your young people should be talking things over. Engagements are constantly threatened by such tensions, intensified by youth's strong and unsatisfied urges for fulfilment.

Books and preparation-for-marriage courses can help lovers' quarrels. I am sending you the names of recent writings which are apropos.

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO MAX—I don't recommend returning violence for violence, but it must be maddening to your wife for you to remain unmoved when she claws at your face. There are times when an upset person needs to know she has come up against a normal, healthy reaction which will not stand for the abnormal abuse which is being handed out.

DEAR DORIS—To "Church-Goer" I say: Take instruction in this other faith, and then decide for yourself. You are under no compulsion to join.

I can say from my own experience that I have lost no faith in my God (by changing from Catholic to Protestant), but rather come to a better understanding of religion in general. There is no "exclusive" salvation for any denomination, we all belong to the Almighty. Prejudice, whether racial or religious, breeds hate and gross misunderstanding. — MRS. L. M.

DEAR MRS. L. M.—It is a part of our proud Canadian heritage that we are all entitled to our own religious freedom and belief.

DEAR DORIS—My problem is this: I have a very large, sharp nose, which embarrasses me no end. I would like to inquire if there are doctors who do plastic surgery?

Secondly, do you think I would be the laughing stock of everyone if I had such an operation, or should I tell people the operation is necessary for my health?—JUST WONDERING.

DEAR JUST—First be sure you are not making a mountain out of a molehill—as it were. If your nose is disfiguring, plastic surgery may be able to make it, and you, beautiful.

Folks won't laugh. They'll like the improvement. And they'll get used to the new you so soon you'll wonder who you waited.

DEAR DORIS—Mr. A., whom I met while summer vacationing in R. City, plans to visit me for a fortnight. I am looking forward to keeping him company during his visit, sight-seeing, dining, theatre-going, etc. Our culture demands that an escort take care of all the financial expenses for evening outings. However, when it is a matter of over a week, is it right for the girl to be on the receiving side all the time?

It is unlikely for me to invite him to dine at home, because I am boarding with a family. How can I, then, be a gracious hostess, if I entertain him in public premises?—BLONDIE.

DEAR BLONDIE—(This reply is strictly for the girls!) Hostessing in public can be done, but it takes some conspiracy. The maitre d'hotel or receptionist loves to co-operate.

Pick your spot, arrange your party, (one or more couples), discuss menu and all details with said Maitre d'Dee. Pay for before or after—never on the spot.

If you want a second spree on you, but theatre tickets in advance and invite him. The rest of that evening and of the week are his to finance. Don't overdo it.

ceives the weak signals from ground stations, amplifies them, and sends them back to earth. It also handles television and data-transmission signals.

The beacon sends out a continuous signal by which the ground stations locate and track the satellite.

RELAYS SIGNALS

It is geared to relay television, radio, teletype, telephone, and high speed data signals between Andover, Me., Goonhilly Downs, England, and Pleumeur-Boudou, France. A station at Fucino, Italy, not yet completed, also will be able to receive its signals.

Stations at Nutley, N.J., and Rio de Janeiro were designed to exchange voice and teletype tests, with the Brazilian station also passing along these tests to the Italian station.

The Saturday schedule calls for news items to be exchanged between the United States and Europe. Similar transmissions are planned Monday between the U.S. and South America.

And if all goes well, the public will witness an intercontinental Christmas program Wednesday televised through Relay. The program, carried on all three U.S. TV networks, will feature Yuletide preparations in 11 nations on the North American and European continents.

Halifax was expecting a low of 14 above.

Drifting ice in Lake Erie prevented a tug from evacuating two men on the southeast shoal lighthouse off Point Peelee. Stranded were Kenneth Wilson of Wheatley and Jack McLeod of Essex. They have sufficient food and fuel. Another attempt to get them will be made today.

SNOWBELT HIT

Hardest hit have been Bruce, Huron, Perth and Lambton counties in the snowbelt area affected by winds off Lake Huron, while winds driving in off Lake Erie have been skimming blinding snow over parts of Norfolk, Elgin, Kent and Essex counties.

Reduced visibility, cut to zero in some areas, and slippery roads have caused a rash of minor accidents.

Officials of the Essex County Auto Club described today as the worst day in its history. More than 2,000 calls for assistance were received before noon and were still coming in at the rate of 40 an hour after that.

Heavy drifting was reported in the Owen Sound-Bruce Peninsula area and the Trenton-Kingston area. Niagara Falls reported four inches of snow but little drifting. North Bay had five inches of snow and a 20-mile-an-hour wind piling it into drifts.

Many showed up at their jobs in mothball - fragrant, out - of - style overcoats, caps and gloves which they brought south with them and hadn't used since their arrival.

Hotels claimed they weren't losing guests because of the cold snap. Arriving travellers said airline seats to Miami were hard to get.

Question Will Be Referred To Committee

OTTAWA (CP) — Compensation for displaced railway personnel will be referred to a parliamentary committee after the Christmas recess, Transport Minister Balcer said Wednesday.

He replied to the fifth consecutive request on the subject by the national legislative committee of the International Railway Brotherhoods, making its annual submission to cabinet.

The brief noted that the organization, comprising the running railway trades, has sought revisions in the Railway Act for the last five years without success.

"We only wish to stress the urgency of the matter at this time," it said, noting that the royal commission on transportation "practically endorsed the abandonment of many thousands of miles of railway."

It said CNR President Donald Gordon was quoted as saying the publicly-owned line plans to drop some 1,600 agencies.

The issue is whether employees required to move because of railway renovations and line abandonments should be compensated, particularly since such moves often depreciate the value of houses owned by employees.

Some railway communities have become virtual ghost towns, committee chairman A. A. Hutchinzon of Ottawa told the cabinet representatives who included Prime Minister Diefenbaker—initially — and Labor Minister Starr.

Oh! to Be a Santa Claus Now That Yule Is Here!

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Remarks that make a street corner Santa Claus want to turn in his bell: :

"Here's a penny for you . . . and a penny for each of your dear little elves."

"I'm from the city licence department. If you don't have a licence to collect, I'll have to call the Black Maria and give you a free ride downtown."

"Oh, Grace, go ahead. I dare you to pull his beard off."

"I'm the inspector, McGillicuddy. Let me sniff your breath. If I smell liquor, you'll turn in that uniform this minute."

"Is it true that except during the Christmas season all you Santa Clauses hang out down on the Bowery?"

"Sure, I'm sure it's Uncle Jake. Nobody—not even Santa Claus—ever had a nose as big and red as Uncle Jake's."

"Uncle, mama said to tell you she didn't care whether or not it's against the rules for you to go shopping in your costume. She says that if you don't stop and pick up a couple of pounds of boiling beef on the way home, you won't get any dinner tonight."

"Stop ding - donging that bell, fellow. It's making my hangover worse."

"I'm from the fire department. I suppose you have a certificate guaranteeing that your beard is fireproof under ordinary wind conditions. That's what the regulations clearly state."

"Naw, standing out in the cold doesn't bother him. After all, he lives at the North Pole, doesn't he?"

"What're you doing going around in a red suit like that? You some kind of a Communist nut, or something?"

"I'm the inspector, McGillicuddy. The Santa Claus in the next block is collecting twice as much as you. Unless you do better, you might as well forget about hanging up your stocking on Christmas Eve."

"Frankly, in my opinion he's seen a lot more pink elephants in his life than he has reindeer."

"His nose was red when I passed him on the way to work this morning. Now it seems to be turning blue."

"All I can say is, daddy, if he's going to come down our chimney, we'd better start widening it right now."

"I'm the inspector, McGillicuddy. I know your feet hurt, but smile, man—look jolly. Maybe if you'd sing a chorus of Jingle Bells now and then, it might stir up a little more business."

RAWDON

AOTS Club Enjoys Pot-Luck Dinner, Program

RAWDON — The A.O.T.S. Men's Club of Rawdon charge convened at Bethel Church hall on Thursday evening for a pot-luck supper and program.

The pastor the Rev. W. G. Fletcher said grace and the president Hugh Lyons presided. Howard Wallace was sgt. at-arms and Edgar McKeown gave the fellowship report. Ross Hoard conducted the devotional based on "The Christmas Story". Gerald Taylor of Burnbrae was guest musician and contributed several piano selections and also accompanied Craig Watson with carol singing.

The program centred around seven brief addresses on occupations as follows: Robert Merrick, "Buying and Selling Cattle"; Robert H. Hoard, "Buying and Selling Pigs"; Craig Watson, "The Job of Salesmen"; Fred Beckett, "The Rawdon Creamery"; Hugh Lyons, "The Shoe Plant Manufacture"; Orno Sharp, "Production of Whole Milk" and Jim Pollock, "The Manufacture of Maple Syrup".

There were 23 in attendance and the pastor closed the meeting with prayer.

New Yorkers Miss Papers During Strike

NEW YORK (AP) — Take away 5,500,000 newspapers a day and life just isn't the same for New Yorkers.

It isn't only a matter of trying to keep up with local, national and world news during the newspaper shutdown because of the printers' strike, which started Saturday. It is the absence of other things taken for granted that leaves an unmet void.

The housewife has no newspaper advertisements to browse through in search of bargains or to compare prices as she plans her Christmas shopping.

The youngsters and adults miss television program listings and the comics.

The city's millions of commuters, without their usual papers, scrounge for any reading material available.

POSTPONE OPENING

Was the new show on Broadway a hit or miss? Or was there a new show? Hidden Stranger, a drama scheduled to open Dec. 27 put it off until an unspecified time in January "in hopes the newspaper strike will have settled by then."

Broadway fears that some shows on the thin edge may fold for lack of publicity and advertising if the strike is prolonged.

Stockholders hardly know whether they are winning or losing without their familiar financial pages and closing prices.

The radio and television stations have greatly expanded their news and advertising coverage, even to reading comics and presenting society items in some cases.

Stock brokerage houses issue mimeographed sheets listing prices of major stocks. Some keep an office open evenings to handle calls for information.

Some store owners post ads on subway car windows under a rental plan offered by the city. Some neighborhood and college newspapers have gone "big time" with expanded coverage and boosted circulations, and out-of-city newspapers are selling well.

FIRE LOSS HEAVY

QUEBEC (CP)—A two-alarm fire Thursday night levelled a two-storey woodworking shop in the industrial St. Malo district, causing damage estimated at $200,000. The shop, owned by Alphonse Gauvin, employed he added.

Divorce Bill Turned Down In Commons

OTTAWA (CP) — A divorce bill, up for second reading in the Commons Thursday was sent back to committee after New Democratic Party member said the case would not have passed through any competent court in Canada.

Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) said it was "shocking," in his opinion, peppered with interjections, chilly rulings and withdrawals, he reviewed the evidence presented to the Senate divorce committee in connection with the divorce petition of Mrs. Madeleine-Françoise Hankowski of Montreal.

He said the husband, Jan Paul Hankowski, was born in Poland, lived for a time in Montreal before moving to the United States and had originally contested the divorce before withdrawing his objections. Mr. Peters said the withdrawal was sworn to by the secretary of the lawyer who acted for Mrs. Hankowski.

Reid Scott (NDP—Danforth) said the procedures would never pass any court in Canada and if it arose, likely would be referred to the discipline committee of a provincial bar association.

Mr. Scott also contended that Mr. Hankowski's Montreal domicile did not exist legally, although he spent most weeks in Nesbitt (PC—Oxford) that Parliament can grant divorces for any reason. Mr. Nesbitt also said that parliamentary divorces are "a discrimination against people who are not restricted to people in Quebec and Newfoundland and who have thousands more.

"We'd better not publicize this," said Mr. Scott, "or we'd have thousands more."

150 Deaths Attributed to Cold Weather

CHICAGO (AP)—A prolonged siege of below-freezing cold and snowy weather in the eastern half of the United States appeared responsible for most areas today.

The abnormally cold weather persisted in Florida which has been hit by the coldest weather in more than 25 years, causing millions of dollars damage to fruit and vegetable crops.

Temperatures in Florida dropped below freezing in northern Florida and into the 30s as far south as Miami. Some of the readings were higher than Wednesday when the mercury dropped into the teens, marking the state's worst freeze since 1895.

The severe prewinter weather also has taken a heavy toll in human suffering — up to 150 in damage to property throughout the storm-cold belt was expected to run into the millions of dollars.

EXPECT MORE SNOW

More snow squalls swept areas in the northeast, already weary from more than a week of battling its wintry elements. The snow belt covered parts of Ohio, Indiana, lower Michigan and western sections of New York State and Pennsylvania. Snow also fell in western Maryland and northern West Virginia.

In Florida, harvest hands left the winter - killed vegetables and citrus fruits and set citrus groves in an attempt to salvage something from the heavy freeze. The fruit growers planned a quick harvest of most of the crops to convert to juice before rising temperatures deteriorated the frozen fruit.

The snow blanket in northeast Ohio, with falls continuing, measured up to 54 inches in the Ashtabula area. Highway crews were hampered in clearing high ways because of the blowing, drifting snow.

Five national guard units were sent into Western Michigan to assist snowbound communities .The areas from the Indiana border up the Lake Michigan shore to Traverse City was buried under a record snowfall

TO ISSUE WARNINGS

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Acting Police Chief Finlay Carroll Thursday said he instructed by the London Police Commission to have members of his force issue courtesy warning tickets to visitors from out of town for parking violations. Mayor Gordon Stronach says: "We are going all out to make London a tourist and shopping centre and I feel this will help."

Canadian Share of U.S. Jet Contract May Hinge on Acceptance of Nuclear Arms

OTTAWA (CP)—A big Canadian production share of the new United States jet fighter program may depend on Ottawa's willingness to accept American nuclear warheads, for the Bomarc missile and Voodoo interceptor, reliable sources here say.

They say there are indications in Washington that U.S. pressure on the nuclear issue is beginning to grow thin and that some form of retaliation against Canada can be considered likely if a "yes" decision isn't announced by Ottawa soon.

The most probable form of retaliation, they say, would be a drastic cutback in defence production in the number and value of U.S. defence contracts let in Canada. In 1961, defence work amount to some $200,000,000 for Canadian firms this year.

A huge jet fighter development contract has been awarded by the U.S. defence department to General Dynamics Corporation of New York of which Canadair Limited, Montreal, is a wholly-owned subsidiary.

Defence Production Minister Pearkes has said that Canada already spoken to General Dynamiucs about sub - contracting some of the Canadair program to Canadian companies.

But informants say Canada can't get Canadair divorces for any reason. Mr. Nesbitt also said that parliamentary divorces are "a discrimination against people who are not restricted to people in Quebec and Newfoundland and who have thousands more.

"We'd better not publicize this," said Mr. Scott, "or we'd have thousands more."

P. M. Is Quite Satisfied With Snowshoes

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker is quite satisfied with his new snowshoes and said in the Commons Thursday he doesn't need running shoes to beat the opposition.

The snowshoes were presented to him Wednesday by the Conservative party caucus to mark the sixth anniversary of his national leader of the Progressive Conservatives.

Opposition Liberal Leader Pearson congratulated him in the Commons Thursday on the gift, and asked "if a pair of running shoes might not have been more appropriate."

"On second thought I have been in competition with the opposition I have been able to out-run them," Mr. Diefenbaker replied. Conservative supporters pounded their desks in applause.

Heath Claims No Truth in Statement

LONDON (CP)—In a noisy House of Commons exchange Thursday night, Lord Privy Seal Edward Heath said there is "not one scrap of truth" in opposition charges that Britain is trying to dictate policies to the Commonwealth about the European Common Market.

Heath, Britain's chief market negotiator, said the British government had never given a pledge to maintain free entry for Commonwealth goods.

"The pledge is that we will safeguard the special interests of the Commonwealth," he shouted at Opposition Leader Hugh Gaitskell and Labor's foreign policy spokesman, Harold Wilson.

Heath's denial, amid cheers from Conservative backbenchers, ended a three-hour debate on the Common Market during which Heath reported on the progress of the Brussels talks on the recent ministerial meeting.

Heath left London by air after the House of Commons to participate in the latest stage of the Common Market talks, which have been conducted with more frequent ministerial meetings in an effort to hasten British entry.

Labor Strife Probe Moving Back to Brass

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal investigation of labor strife on the Great Lakes moves out of the ranks of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada next week and back to the brass.

Mr. Justice T. G. Norris, who has been making the investigation since August, said Thursday he would hear from more general evidence from rank - and - file SIU members later today. He has repeatedly described the parade of witnesses expressing loyalty and loyalty to their union as a waste of time.

The Vancouver jurist ordered SIU Executive Vice-President Leonard J. McLaughlin and Bernard Boulanger, administrator of the Canadian Seafarers' welfare plan, to be prepared to testify when proceedings next Monday. The two witnesses were ordered to stand down in the middle of cross-examination earlier this month so they could "inform themselves" on details raised in questions by opposing lawyers and by commission counsel Charles Dubin.

The SIU has called more than 30 sailors in the last two weeks to testify on behalf of the union.

Creamery Butter Make Down 6 Pct. in Nov.

OTTAWA (CP)—A production of process cheese from cheddar cheese base during November amounted to 6,156,353 pounds—up 10 per cent from the October output of 5,138,667 pounds and 34.7 per cent more than November 1961, bureau of statistics reported today.

Production in the January-November period advanced 11.3 per cent to 58,711,416 pounds from 52,824,035 in the same period last year.

Creamery butter production declined 6 per cent in November from the same month last year, but January - November output was three per cent higher than a year earlier.

Production in November amounted to 29,441,000 pounds compared with 21,658,000 in the corresponding month last year. The 11-month cumulative total was 343,914,000 pounds as against 334,585,000 pounds a year earlier.

U Thant Wary Of Tshombe's Katanga Offer

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—President Moise Tshombe of secessionist Katanga province notified UN Secretary-General U Thant Thursday that if certain conditions are met, he will share with the central Congolese government the rich foreign currency earnings of Katangan mines.

Thant indicated he was wary of the offer.

The conditions would guarantee Katanga a financial base of at least $60,000,000 of the $250,000,000 in foreign currency the copper mines annually draw into Katanga. Britain, Belgium and the United States would be asked to guarantee the arrangement.

But Thant, determined to achieve reunification of The Congo, took steps to put an economic squeeze on Katanga. And he told the 19-nation Congo advisory committee the United Nations will use every pressure short of arms to compel Katanga to join the central government—even if Katanga responds with military action.

U Thant has ordered UN forces, Thant told a closed meeting of the committee, "we will defend ourselves and we will hit back to the full extend of our capacity."

Thant told the committee Tshombe's letter appeared to represent "an encouraging development" but added that "in view of our past experiences with Mr. Tshombe we are not jumping to any hasty conclusions."

Testifies Why He Refused To Pay Taxes

TORONTO (CP) — Frederick Fawcett, an Owen Sound district farmer, being tried on the issue of his sanity, said Thursday he has written two letters to the Queen seeking help in obtaining his release from a mental hospital in which he has been confined for the last 14 months.

Fawcett, who farms 300 acres of former Crown land, has refused to pay property taxes on the land since 1956. He was committed to the Ontario Hospital at Penetanguishene in October, 1961, after a magistrate remanded him for mental examination on six criminal charges, including assault and pointing a firearm at a tax assessor.

Fawcett said Thursday in Ontario Supreme Court that because his land was granted by the Crown he has a claim to it, grandfather, he considered it unjustified taxation by Euphrasia Township where the farm is located.

He said he considered assessors as trespassers and that he had told tax assessors to stay away from his property until a court action on the taxation issue was decided.

CONSIDERED TRESPASSERS

He also testified that he considered provincial police officers trespassers if they stepped on his land without a warrant.

He told the court he had denied the letters from the Queen that were sent to the Queen. Crown Counsel F. L. Wilson said the letters reached the Queen's private secretary's office and had been sent to Governor-General Vanier.

Fawcett said he decided not to pay taxes after Euphrasia Township council failed to give him an exit for him from the back of his farm, although the land had been promised to two other farmers.

He said that if the courts rule against him on the taxation case he will have to pay taxes.

The case is continuing.

SIX MINERS KILLED

BIESSEN, Germany (AP)—Six miners were killed Thursday within the depths of West Germany's deepest coal mine—the Sazony—killing six miners and seriously injuring five. Another five working the same shaft escaped unscathed. Officials said the cave-in at the Saxony—one of the Ruhr's better known mines—occurred at a depth of 3,769 feet. Its cause was not known.

Official British History Of War Says Monty Right In Conflict With Eisenhower

LONDON (AP)—An official British history of the Second World War today reviewed Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery's historic conflict of opinion with his fellow generals on strategy in the Normandy campaign and decided that Monty was right.

Montgomery's opposition to spliting the allied advance through France into two prongs — one plan advocated by U.S. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower — was completely justified, it said.

The 600 - page volume published today is called Victory in the West. It covers the three months of the Normandy campaign immediately after the D-Day landings and continues a series of official histories covering every aspect of the war.

"On Montgomery's relations with Eisenhower, the supreme allied commander, the work is less dramatic than Montgomery himself. Monty wrote in his memoirs:

"Ike and I were poles apart when it came to conduct of the war."

NOT UNDERSTOOD

But the history does say:

"It is doubtful whether Gen Eisenhower ever fully understood Montgomery's intentions."

The time of this misunderstanding, it said, was when the Americans were on the right flank of the allied line. The British on the left were pushing through northern France toward the Belgian frontier.

On July 18 began the battle of Caen,code-named Goodwood. The Americans on the right flank were impatient because Montgomery apparently was stalled.

In fact, says the official war history, his plan was to engage and hold the great bulk of the German Army and so give U.S. forces a clean run to the right.

The aim, it said, was clearly shown by Montgomery's previous instructions to his subordinate commanders.

The book discloses that for months in 1944 the allies kept a ghost army on a fake alert in Scotland.

The aim was to convince the German high command that it would invade Norway. The army in fact consisted of nothing but a few radio stations broadcasting spurious messages to be picked up by the German monitoring system.

Police Probing Possible Arson In Two Fires

TORONTO (CP)—Police are investigating possible arson in fires Thursday night in two apartment buildings in the west end of each other in suburban North York. Both were extinguished.

No one was injured and those evacuated from the buildings without injury but a fireman was briefly overcome by smoke. Firemen said the two fires were reported within minutes of each other and that the blazes started in a basement.

Hull Doctor Guilty Of Negligence

HULL, Que. (CP)—A Court of Queen's Bench jury Thursday found Dr. J. Conrad Simard, 40, guilty of criminal negligence in the death of a three-day-old child last Feb. 26.

Judge Jacques Boucher said he will pronounce sentence Dec. 20.

The jury rendered its verdict after deliberating an hour and 25 minutes at the conclusion of a four-day trial.

Defence counsel Raymond d'Aoust announced he will appeal the conviction.

Dr. Simard was found to have been negligent in delivering an infant born to an unwed Ottawa mother at a private clinic in nearby Aylmer, Que.

An obstetrician at Ottawa General Hospital, to which the baby was admitted at the request of Dr. Simard, testified that the hospital had received a note from Dr. Simard stating the infant was suffering from cyanosis—blue discoloration.

The note also said Dr. Simard suspected there was brain damage subsequent to the use of forceps.

OPINIONS DIFFER

Other doctors testified that forceps should not have been used for delivery of the premature child. But the two obstetricians testified they would have proceeded in the same manner as Dr. Simard, had they been faced with the same circumstances.

In his summation, Crown Attorney Orville Frenette told the jury that Dr. Simard had been negligent before, during and after the baby's birth. He said the child died from brain hemorrhage.

He contended that evidence of jaundice on both sides of the baby's head forced the conclusion that "the hemorrhage was caused by the use of forceps."

Mr. d'Aoust in summing up for the jury contended that the baby's death was an accident and that Dr. Simard acted "as any other doctor would act under the same circumstances."

Judge Boucher, in his address to the jury, explained that the charge was laid under Article 191 of the Criminal Code, which states in part that a person is guilty of criminal negligence who "shows wanton disregard for the lives or safety of other persons."

The jurist said negligence need not be intentional in order for a conviction to be recorded. He told the jury that it must be satisfied that the accused made "considerate use" of forceps.

SEASON ENDS

QUEBEC (CP)—The St. Lawrence River season of passenger - liner sailings to Europe was briefly closed today as the Dutch liner Ryndam cleared port with 511 passengers bound for Southampton, Le Havre, Rotterdam and Bremerhaven.

Parliamentary Notebook

OTTAWA (CP)—By the end of today's Commons sitting, Parliament will have put in session for 56 days. Work is expected to be completed on the legislative business and on a smaller fraction of the financial business.

Realization of the slow rate of progress hit home to MPs late last week. As in past sessions, high resolves were made on all sides to get things done quickly and efficiently this time.

The four party chieftains went into a huddle. Prime Minister Diefenbaker, Opposition Leader Pearson, Social Credit Leader Thompson and Co-operative Party Leader Douglas discussed how best to apportion Parliament's time.

The object was to get passage of the more pressing legislative matters before the Commons adjourned Dec. 20 for the Christmas-New Year's recess.

They had 10 sitting days in and so they left it to the House leaders of the four parties to fit the various measures into that allotted space.

A series of written and oral communications among the House leaders followed. But after five of the 10 days had passed, the parties appeared no closer than before to speeding up the business.

With seven sitting days to go, the task to establish the Atlantic Development Board and other measures the government is committed to before Christmas—was passed.

That left three other legislative measures—establishing the National Economic Development Board, a federal-provincial fuels agreement and a freight rate assistance plan to be squeezed into the four sitting days next week, barring some change in the government's choice of priority legislation.

At least 20 more legislative items remain to be considered by the Commons. Each item of estimated spending in all departments remains to be approved.

Faced with this, MPs on all sides figure, in the words of a popular song, "Something's got to give."

Britain's Nuclear Strength Said No Longer Required

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Behind the Anglo-American Skybolt controversy is an American view that Britain's nuclear strength no longer is required as an effective deterrent against Soviet aggression. The U.S. feels it has all the nuclear deterrent the west will ever need, particularly in the light of a sharply expanded U.S. missile force.

Defence Secretary McNamara voiced the warning last June but Europe chose to misread it, concluding he was directing his criticism of "national nuclear forces" against France. Now in the context of the dispute over development of the 1,000-mile missile, it can be seen McNamara may have had Britain also in mind.

His main contention is that national nuclear forces which can perform only limited functions in a nuclear strike are more likely to invite aggression than restrain it. In fact, he argued, countries with such limited forces may be courting suicide.

Britain's main power as a nuclear striking force is through the delivery of a bombload to specific target by aircraft. The Skybolt, which the U.S. agreed to develop, would have made it easier for British bombers to reach that strike target, since the concept of the Skybolt is the release of ballistic missile from the underbelly of a plane 1,000 miles from target.

Canada, however, with the American 6,300-mile Minuteman missile, protected in underground silos and programmed that it can be triggered in 32 seconds to reach a specific, predetermined target at a speed of about 18,000 miles an hour. By 1965, the U.S. will have 800 of these Minutemen underground.

The Skybolt has failed its first five tests and President Kennedy has indicated that Britain will still play a significant nuclear role. What that role will be, he hasn't said. But from McNamara's remarks, it would seem Britain would be relegated to a role of defensive than an offensive role.

"Creation of a single additional national nuclear force encourages the proliferation of additional forces with all of the attendant dangers," McNamara said last June. "In short, then, the existence of national forces, operating independently, are dangerous, expensive, prone to obsolescence and lacking in credibility as a deterrent. Clearly, the U.S. nuclear contribution to the alliance is neither obsolete nor dispensable."

In the McNamara view, the Allies should spend more time strengthening their non-nuclear forces than trying to become first-strike nuclear powers.

Students Plan Visit to Cuba At Christmas

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A former student at University of Buffalo outlined plans at a meeting Wednesday to accept an invitation from Fidel Castro for expenses - paid Christmas holiday vacation for American students in Cuba.

Cameron A. Ross Jr., 23, of Buffalo said he was seeking legal advice concerning passports since the U.S. has imposed a ban on travel to or in the island. Ross said the invitation was received through a group of students in New York City, headed by Anatol I. Schlosser, 35, a graduate student at New York University.

Schlosser has said about 30 students from colleges in the east, west, midwest and parts of Canada were expected to make the trip, but Joseph A. Diodata, 21, a former University of Buffalo student, said more than 60 were expected from that school alone. . .

Purpose of the trip, Ross said, was to talk with Cuban students, exchange ideas and see the island country.

The U.S. state department has said that it cannot guarantee the safety of American citizens travelling to or in Cuba and therefore imposed the travel restriction.

Year-End-Outlook

Commonwealth May Be Tested as Never Before In the Year Just Ahead

By ROD CURRIE

LONDON (CP) — The Commonwealth, already strained by the expanding Common Market, the crisis in India and its own changing complexion, may in 1963 be tested as never before.

As in 1962, the Commonwealth leaders will again be mainly preoccupied by the prospects of Britain entering the European Economic Community.

But as the year came to an end other issues more fundamental to the spirit of Commonwealth brotherhood arose out of India's border disputes with Communist China and with Pakistan.

When the Indian - Chinese fighting was at its height, Prime Minister Macmillan was reported considering a review of Commonwealth trade with China which gets much of its wheat from Canada and Australia and its rubber from Ceylon.

Pakistan, feuding with India for years over the Kashmir issue, was angered by the flow of arms to India from Britain and other countries which, she claimed, could eventually be used against her.

In the new year the Commonwealth probably will have to face up to the facts of life with the Common Market and the weakening effect if Britain enters. And, with the continuing troubles in India, the members —particularly those dealing with China and those providing military aid to India—will have to reassess the extent of their obligations to fellow members.

In fact it may well be the year in which the future of the fast-expanding union will be replotted, in which it will be seen whether the ties of mutual interest, trust and sentiment will remain strong, particularly in the eyes of the newer members whose sentimental attachments are not as strong as those of the old white dominions.

Many observers feel, however, that the newly independent countries, balancing off the old resentments of colonialism against the benefits of membership, will cling to the Commonwealth as the most beneficial and effective grouping for co-operation in such things as education and technical assistance.

The Common Market issue came to a head when the Commonwealth leaders met here in September. Macmillan insisted Britain could best serve the Commonwealth from a position of prosperity within the market grouping.

His listeners responded with polite applause but only two of the 16—Trinidad and Cyprus—expressed support.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker put forth his "alternative" plan for a meeting of the countries of the Commonwealth, the Common Market, the European Free Trade Area, the United States, Japan and other "like-minded" nations to deal with trading problems in a way mutually advantageous.

The year also saw the collapse of the 10-island West Indies federation when Trinidad and Jamaica, the two largest and wealthiest members, withdrew. The others have decided to try to form a new federation.

Besides Jamaica and Trinidad, other countries represented at a prime ministers' conference for the first time were Sierra Leone and Tanganyika. The four brought about 15,000,000 people into the Commonwealth and before the year's end Uganda, with 7,000,000 people, gained independence and membership.

In 1963 the Federation of Malaysia—combining Singapore, the territories of North Borneo and Sarawak and, it is hoped, the state of Brunei, with a combined population of about 3,000,000—is expected to gain independence and membership.

Of the remaining British protectorates striving towards independence, Kenya presents the greatest problems.

Recently Malcolm MacDonald, son of the Labor Party's first prime minister and former high commissioner in Canada, was named governor of the country which faces financial problems, unemployment and grave lawlessness.

The government said this shrewd diplomat was picked because the need in Kenya now is more political and diplomatic than administrative. African leaders in Kenya replied that they wanted independence, not a new governor.

And the British can look for more unrest in the tottering Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland in the New Year. At a London conference it was agreed black-ruled Nyasaland, determined to secede from the three-country federation, should have independence.

Federal Prime Minister Sir Roy Welensky has apparently lost his battle to save the federation and no doubt Northern Rhodesia will eventually want to follow in Nyasaland's footsteps.

Commonwealth officials here still have hopes that, should the federation collapse, the three countries will be able to set up some form of loose association. The alternative could be that Southern Rhodesia would be tempted in a linkup with South Africa, which withdrew from the Commonwealth after being criticized for its racial policies.

DIFFER OVER ECM—Opposition to Britain joining the European Common Market came from Canada's Prime Minister Diefenbaker, seen chatting with British Prime Minister Macmillan at the 15-nation Commonwealth conference in London last September. Mr. Defenbaker's "alternative" plan called for discussions among all like-minded countries, including the United States and Commonwealth members, to deal with world-wide trading problems.

MOLSON'S

Merry Brew Recipes

Plan to add the old time flavour of Molson's merry brews to your holiday entertaining. Each of the traditional Christmas cheer recipes on this page will delight your family and friends alike. Remember though, to be sure of perfection in your Merry Brews, use Molson Export ale, Molson Stock ale (known as Molson Blue among friends), Molson Golden ale or Molson Canadian lager beer. Clip this recipe list today and keep it handy for the holiday season.

Molson Mulled Ale

The old-fashioned method of mulling was to heat a poker until red hot then slowly immerse it in a mug of ale and honey. A simpler way is to warm 2 bottles of Molson EXPORT ALE* or Molson CANADIAN LAGER BEER, in a saucepan—then let it boil —pour it over 3 teaspoons of honey and sprinkle with ¾ teaspoon of grated nutmeg. Serves 6.

Molson Old-Fashioned Posset

3 bottles Molson EXPORT ALE or Molson CANADIAN LAGER BEER*
4 cups milk
4 tablespoons sugar
4 slices toast
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Heat milk, sugar and toast in saucepan, do not boil. Stir cinnamon and beer together in a punch bowl. Discard toast. Pour hot milk over ale at room temperature and stir. Drink while warm. Serves 8-10.

Molson Ale Posset

2 bottles Molson EXPORT ALE or Molson CANADIAN LAGER BEER*
4 tablespoons brown sugar
4 eggs
3 whole cloves
2 slices toast cut in ¼ teaspoon ground ginger small squares

Heat sugar, ale and spices, do not boil. Discard cloves. Beat eggs and gradually add ale mixture, stirring steadily. Return to heat, still stirring. If possible beat some of the mixture with electric or rotary beater until foamy. Serve hot in mugs, decorate with small pieces of toast. Serves about 8.

Molson Wassail Bowl

The name Wassail Bowl was derived from the traditional way of toasting guests in medieval times when the greeting was "wass hail" meaning "Be healthy."

Fill the bowl with 3 bottles Molson EXPORT ALE* or Molson CANADIAN LAGER BEER heated with ¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg and ground ginger, ½ teaspoon ground cinnamon, ½ cup granulated sugar, and 1½ cups sherry. Stir until sugar is dissolved and cook 15 minutes over low heat, do not allow to boil. Decorate with tiny baked apples or small crabapples.

*Use Molson GOLDEN ALE or Molson STOCK ALE if desired.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

It may sound far-fetched, and probably is, but race buffs in the year 2062 may look at their wrist-watch television sets and see a human being win the Kentuck Derby at Churchill downs.

Back in 1927 I took my turn at listening to KDKA radio station Pittsburgh via earphones and heard a sports broadcast that Paavo Nurmi, the famous European runner, had broken the world record for the mile. The time was 4:10.4.

In 1864 the first recognized world mile mark, 4:56, was established by an American, Charles B. Lawes. In 1874 Walter Slade ran the mile in 4:52. Ten years later Walter G. George lowered the mark to 4:18 2/5. In 1916 John Paul Jones had brought the mark down to 4:14.4. Gunder Hagg produced the first threat to the four-minute-less mile in 1942 with his mark of 4:01.4.

Then came Roger Bannister's sensational less-than-four-minutes effort, followed by Landy and company. Today nearly thirty milers have negotiated the distance under four minutes.

Man is becoming faster afoot. . . A three-minute mile is not beyond the realm of possibility. In fact a mile in three minutes and twelve seconds is the goal that has been set for track stars by one of the better coaches on the continent.

In an address in Los Angeles the other day, W. J. Bowerman, track coach at the University of Oregon, said that it should be possible for someone to run a 3:12 mile.

Bowerman, who coaches stars like Harry Jerome, was talking to the American Medical Association on the medical aspects of sports.

The present goal for most coaches and competitors is the 3:50 mile, so Bowerman may be jumping the gun a trifle in his calculations.

He puts it this way:—"An ordinary runner can cover 110 yards in 13 seconds. If it were possible for physiology and respiratory system to furnish the fuel and eliminate the waste products it should not be difficult for him to run the quarter mile in 48 seconds, a half mile in 1:36, and cover the mile in the phenomenal time of 3:12."

And as someone brought out in the post-meeting discussion, a 3:12 mile is just half the speed at which a racehorse goes the distance.

Bowerman suggested a 4:20 mile for high school runners and advised them to pace themselves as closely as possible to 65 seconds for each 440-yard lap.

He said: "There are examples beyond count of runners who have started with a first lap at close to 60 seconds. The pace gradually becomes slower as the runner goes in oxygen debt and the finish of the race is tortured."

He pointed out that Jim Beatlie, the first sub-four-minute miler in the United States, ran 62, 61, 60 and 55.6 quarters for a 3:58.6 mile.

Bowerman told the medicos that trackmen who are properly conditioned finish with body heat several degrees above the normal 98.6 degrees. This is the reason for the victory tour of the oval after the race. It provides gradual lowering of the pulse and respiration rate and permits heat and other waste products to be eliminated.

The Oregon coach also advocates similar cooling-off periods of lessened activity for tennis, handball and other sports where there is a high level of concentrated energy output.

His studies indicate that runners should land on their heels, as Europeans are taught, rather than on the balls of their feet. The heel landing cushions the shock and sets the stage for a takeoff with economy and balance.

The American coach is convinced there are thousands of youths capable of running four-minute miles if they are prepared to train and study. The trick lies just as much in the amount of interest displayed as in any inherent ability.

Says British Should Run Own Tourney

LONDON (AP)—The chairman of the British Lawn Tennis Association says the organization should break with the international body and run an open tournament at Wimbledon for both amateurs and professionals.

Ted Avory, head of the LTA said Thursday a group of nations had been able to block open competition between pros and amateurs. He attacked what he called "shamateurism."

Avory told the annual meeting of the LTA he wants to see amateurs and professionals playing alongside each other at Wimbledon.

"It is my personal view that our association should break away from the International Tennis Federation and stage its own championships," said Avory.

PICK TOP LINEMAN

NEW YORK (AP)—Lee Roy Jordan, Alabama's tough, talented centre, was named the nation's outstanding college football lineman Thursday in an Associated Press poll of sports writers and broadcasters. Jordan, a 207-pound all-American who hopes for a career in professional football, was pressed in the voting only by Bobby Bell, Minnesota's giant tackle.

Bruins Tie Habs; Wings Nip Blues

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

"I think I've finally got this team into the proper attitude," said Boston coach Milt Schmidt above the dressing-room clamor.

His Bruins had just gained a moral victory by holding Montreal Canadiens, the defending National Hockey League champions, to a 1-1 tie Thursday night. The second-place Detroit Red Wings edged fifth-place New York 3-2 in the other scheduled game.

"Listen to this noise," said Schmidt. "They're talking it up now, on the ice and off. They're starting to enjoy the game.

"I thought we skated harder and backchecked more than they did tonight. Also Bobby (rookie goalie Bob Perreault) made a few keys saves that kept us in them."

Schmidt took over from Phil Watson as coach of the last-place Bruins after they had won only one of their first 14 games.

"From now on, we won't take any losses without fighting like hell. When I started, they were accepting losses easily. It was just another loss for them."

PRAISES KENNEDY

Schmidt said one of his strongest forwards Thursday night was Forbes Kennedy, who scored Boston's goal midway through the first period by splitting Canadiens' defence and beating goalie Jacques Plante from close in.

The Dorchester, N.B. resident was acquired 10 days ago in a trade with Detroit for forward Andre Pronovost. Kennedy was playing with Detroit's Edmonton farm club in the Western Hockey League at the time.

Claude Provost, Montreal's digging right winger, tied it up early in the second period with a screened 35-footer that Perreault didn't seem to see.

From then on, it developed into a goalkeepers duel between Perreault and Plante. Perreault, a chubby, 21-year-old native of Trois-Rivieres, Que., outshone Plante, making 36 saves to Plante's 27.

Montreal coach Toe Blake was disgusted with his players after the game.

"They played for the tie, and got it by positional hockey. We had a seven-game undefeated string a week ago, and now we can't manage to get the last-place team on our own ice."

THE FOR, THIRD RACE

The Habs missed Canadiens into a tie for third place with the idle Toronto Maple Leafs. Each team has 29 points, six behind the first-place Chicago Black Hawks.

The Wings' win in Detroit moved them within two points of the first-place Hawks and Detroit has two games in hand.

The Wings scored their three goals in the first 10 minutes of play and held on for the victory, leaving the Rangers without a win in their last six games.

Centre Alex Delvecchio assisted on all three goals to take the league lead in assists with 20. Linemates Parker MacDonald and Gerdie Howe and forward Floyd Smith did the scoring.

New York came back with two goals 82 seconds apart late in the first period to make the score 3-2. Defenceman Harry Howell and veteran centre Bronco Horvath scored, with Horvath's goal coming on a power play.

The Wings forced Ranger goalie Sump Worsley to make 38 saves, nine more than Detroit netminder Terry Sawchuk.

In the NHL games Saturday, the Rangers visit Montreal, the Bruins are in Toronto and the Wings play in Chicago.

Three Flyers Refuse to Move

Wings Suspend Players

EDMONTON (CP)—A trade engineered by Detroit Red Wings has been wrecked by three players from Edmonton Flyers of the Western Hockey League and raised questions about the future of professional hockey in Edmonton.

Forward Chuck Holmes, the Flyers team captain and leading scorer, forward Warner Hynes and defenceman Lou Marson refused to shift to Pittsburgh Hornets of the American League, spoiling a four-for-four trade arranged by Detroit of the National League, parent club of both teams.

In a telephone interview from Detroit, Red Wings general manager Sid Abel said he has no attempt but to suspend the three players.

This raised a serious problem for Flyers coach Charlie Rayner, who will be short three of his best players, has no replacements and whose club is lagging in third place in the WHL's four-team Northern Division.

Defenceman Keith (Krobby) Walsh, fourth Edmonton player involved in the trade, agreed at a meeting with Rayner Thursday to go to Pittsburgh. In return, Rayner will get Pittsburgh defenceman John Miziuk.

The other Pittsburgh players who were to move to Edmonton are forwards Ray Ross and Norm Corcoran and defenceman Jack Price.

Abel said he will try to trade the three Edmonton players to Eddie Shore, owner of Springfield Indians of the AHL, in a three-for-one trade involving an unidentified Springfield defenceman.

Asked about published reports from Calgary that Detroit is planning to drop its support for the Flyers, Abel said the Red Wings are disappointed with the club's showing, "but at no time has Detroit thought of pulling out of Edmonton."

SET DATE

NEW YORK (AP)—The 1963 Canada Cup golf matches will be held in Paris Oct. 24-27, Sidney L. James, chairman of the executive committee of the International Golf Association, said Thursday the 11th annual tournament would be played at the Golf de Saint-Nom-la-Bretche course.

Queen's RMC Get Hockey

Name College Tourneys

TORONTO (CP) — The first annual national college basketball and hockey championships were set tentatively for March 22 at a meeting Thursday of the board of governors of the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union.

Assumption University of Windsor has been awarded the basketball tournament and Queen's University and the Royal Military College will be co-hosts at the hockey tournament at Kingston.

Maj. W. J. (Danny) McLeod of RMC, secretary-treasurer of the CIAU, said the board feels Assumption, Queen's and RMC should also be awarded next year's tournaments to get their program off and running.

The meeting was called to discuss how the $18,000 grant from the physical fitness council would be spent.

The CIAU asked for $50,000 which would cover national championships, coaching clinics, administration and organization and more regional competition. Because they didn't get as much as they hoped, the officers decided to use the money for national competitions.

NOT WITH VEC PLAN

They also let it be known that the CIAU is not connected in any way with the University of British Columbia's plans to represent Canada in the 1964 Olympic soccer competition.

"We're interested in international competition for the future," said Mal. LeGood, "but only when the Canadian representative has been decided as a result of national competition."

Next year the CIAU hopes to add a national cross-country championship and two football bowl games.

They are considering one bowl game on the east coast, probably between the two in the Atlantic Bowl which is already established, and an east-west bowl game.

Further in the future, they hope to add swimming and track and field to their list of national championships.

There are four college associations in the national body and each will be represented in the hockey and basketball tournaments.

The four are the Maritimes intercollegiate Athletic Associations, the Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association (more commonly known as the inter-collegiate Senior League) and the Western Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

Attendance Betting up At Tracks

NEW YORK (AP) — Attendance and wagering at United States thoroughbred race tracks showed another increase this season.

An Associated Press survey of the 34 states with pari-mutuel betting shows over-all attendance was up about four per cent over 1961, while the pari-mutuel turnover and revenue in the states increased about seven per cent.

Attendance was a 34,290,991, compared with 32,940,000 last year. The pari-mutuel turnover for 1962 reached $2,668,126,541 compared with $2,505,212,860 a year ago. Revenue to the states was $212,185,662 as against $198,227,858 in 1961.

Petes Meet Juniors Here Tonight

The Belleville Junior "B's" may have several changes in their lineup tonight when they tackle the high-flying Peterborough Monsens in an OHA Eastern Junior "B" league fixture at nine o'clock.

Barclay's Battlers have had a rough time of it so far, winning one and losing one while losing five, in league play, but club treasurer "Red" Laverty said the other day that efforts are being made to strengthen the club.

The locals lost a 9-2 decision in Peterborough earlier this week but missing from the lineup, through injuries and work commitments, were Gary Duvall, goalie Sam Haskill, Gary McMillan, Lyle Adams, Les Moreau and Glen Hagerman. The club has also lost Gary Hull who is now working in Oshawa and expects to move there shortly.

Another member of the club executive announced that Paul Paquin has also been lost to the team, due to the fact he is too young to become a branch-to-branch transfer. Paquin played in Quebec last year.

John Harkness, a centre, from Kingston, has been obtained by Belleville, while other newcomers in the lineup for the last game included Bobby Ethier, Ken Emerson and Jimmy Woodcock, all local products of the B.M.H.A.

No line has been announced for tonight's game but Barclay will ice his strongest possible team in an effort to stop the visitors.

Peterborough has scored five consecutive victories and the only club to top them to date was the undefeated Kingston Frontenacs, in the league opener.

Tonight's game starts at 9.00 p.m. and is Belleville's last home appearance until after Christmas.

NAMED TOP HORSE

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Su Mac Lad, the only trotter ever to win twice in two minutes or less on a half-mile track, has been voted Harness Horse of the Year in the U.S. Trotting Association's nationwide poll of racing writers and sportscasters. The eight-year-old gelding, trained by Stanley Dancer and owned by Irving W. Berkemeyer of New Milford, N.J., collected 36 first place votes and 320 points from the 106 persons taking part in the poll. Second was another Dancer-trained star, the four-year-old Henry T. Adios, who had 49 points.

Peterborough Petes had an easy time with the last-place Guelph Royals and took over undisputed possession of second place in Ontario Hockey Association provincial Junior A action Thursday night.

In the only other game scheduled, Memorial Cup champion Hamilton Red Wings broke a fourth-place tie with St. Catharines Black Hawks, defeating the Hawks 5-3.

Peterborough, only two points behind the league-leading Montreal junior Canadiens, held Guelph scoreless behind the goal tending of Chuck Goddard until the last two minutes of play.

Tom Carty tallied two goals for Peterborough and singles were scored by Keith Wright, Drake Jopling, Dan O'Shea, Bob Jamieson and Don Herriman.

Gary Sabourin scored for the Royals.

COUNTS QUICKLY

Hamilton scored four goals in a two-minute and-25-second span of the first period and held on to drop St. Catharines into fifth place.

Bryan Campbell, Earl Heiskala, Paul Henderson, Pit Martin and John Sawyer were the Hamilton marksmen while Fred Stanfield, Paul Popiel and John Brenneman made the futile comeback for the Hawks.

In Hamilton Junior A action, Neil McNeil Maroons shot to first-place margin over Toronto Marlboros, defeating Brampton 8-3.

Brampton's John Murray was injured in a second-period collision with teammate Don Fuller and was carried unconscious to the dressing room.

He was taken to hospital where officials said he was in fair condition Thursday night but no diagnosis of his injury had been made.

Tobe's Win Second Quarter Major A League

Tobe's Pizza-burgers rolled to their second straight Major "A" League quarter-schedule title at the Bowl-O-Drome last night, trimming Belle Cleaners by three points.

Tobe's aggregated 35 points over the Cleaners' 32. In order came Cola 28, Stewart Signs 22, Mel Barrigas Contractor 21 and Tip Top Cleaners 0.

Scores on the night's play were as follows: Tobe's 6, Barrigas 4, Pepsi's 3; Belles 5, Labelles 2 and Station St. 0.

The high triples were: J. McKenzie 836, B. Kiser 808, D. Hamilton 781, J. Wiens 790, J. Canning 761, C. Bandy 748, R. Lundberg 739, C. Seeley 732, M. Hancke 717, L. Ridley 717, D. Dafoe 716, C. Allen 655, B. Lott 654.

STOCKHOLM (AP)—Sweden's world championship hockey team thumped Saskatoon Quakers 7-0 on Thursday night, handing the Canadians a solid setback in the first game of a two-game exhibition series.

The game won the approval of 15,000 cheering Swedish fans. Factors in the lopsided win were fatigue the Canadians suffered from a long plane flight Wednesday and difficulty in adapting to European rules.

The Swedes, most of them members of the team that copped the world championship at Colorado Springs, Colo., last winter, outclassed the Quakers in every department. The Saskatchewan Senior League Quakers drew nine penalties to three for the Swedes.

Centre Sven Nilsson and Ulf Sterner each scored two goals for the Swedes, singles going to Nicke Carlsson, defenceman Karlsson and Mild.

North Shore Hockey League

Rossmore Merchants dumped SACO 8-2 and Hibbard-Callow Combines downed Stinson Construction 8-3 in a pair of Prince Edward North Shore Hockey League games played last night.

Both games followed pretty much the same pattern with Rossmore and Hibbard at the end of the first period in each game, Rossmore moved in front 6-1 and combines 3-1 at the middle heats against the lower-placed teams.

Jack Calnan took over the league scoring lead when he scored three goals and assisted on four more to lead Hibbard-Callows. Larry Westfall had three goals and one helper. Al Wright one and two. Pete Couues and Bill Hurst one and one apiece.

Bill Genereaux put two goals and Gary Genereaux the other for Stinson Construction.

The Boulter boys headed the Rossmore attack, Jack getting two and three and Bernie three and one. Keith Osterhout had a goal and three assists, Ron Thompson one and two and Barton Durrant one and one.

Art Dwyer, Dave Hazard were the SACO marksmen.

Following are the top ten scorers, including last night's games:

To Fight Johansson

Liston Offered Million

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Boxing promoter Edwin Ahlquist says he has offered heavyweight king Sonny Liston a guarantee of at least $1,000,000 to defend his world crown against ingemar Johansson in Sweden next summer.

Ahlquist, figures he has the bond in the bag.

"No one will be able to overbid my offers," he says in the current issue of his magazine, Rekord.

Ahlquist, one of Europe's leading promoters, says the new United States relay satellite will enable him to outbid American promoters.

"It's the American television money that will tip the scales. "I have offered Sonny Liston's manager, Jack Nilon, a high per cent of the take, with a minimum of one million dollars guaranteed."

There has been no word from the Liston camp.

Chiefs Tie Hull Ottawa

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (CP)—Hull-Ottawa Canadiens and Syracuse Braves battled to a 2-2 tie Thursday night in a clean, fast Eastern Professional Hockey League game.

The teams exchanged goals in each of the first three scoring periods. Hec Lalande and Al Caron were the Syracuse scorers and Jacques Laperriere and Chuck Hamilton, both defencemen, scored for Hull-Ottawa.

The victory increased Canadiens' second-place lead to seven points over third-place Sudbury Wolves. The Canadiens with 23 points, trail the league-leading Kingston Frontenacs by eight. Syracuse is fourth with 11 on three wins and five ties.

Only three penalties were called during the game with Syracuse receiving two of the minors. None of the penalties figured in the scoring.

Goaltender Ernie Wakely of the Canadiens was the busier of the two netminders, kicking out 26 shots. Roger Crozier of Syracuse made 19 saves.

Leonard Second In Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Don Massengale, a 25-year-old Texan, shot a five-under-par 67 Thursday for the first-round lead in the Mexican open golf tournament.

In second place were Vancouver's Stan Leonard, Toronto's Alex Thompson and Jose Gallardo of Spain, who matched 70s.

Defending champion Tony Lema of San Leandro, Calif., had putting troubles and finished with a 72.

CALL FOR SAFETY

VANCOUVER (CP) — Teenagers at a youth safety conference here suggested safety courses for all British Columbia schools.

Shoot 70 To Lead Mixed Golf

AVON PARK, Fla. (AP)—Mason Rudolph and Kathy Whitworth shot a two-under-par 70 Thursday to take the first-round lead in the $30,000 scotch mixed foursome golf tournament being played over two Highland County courses.

The first round of the 72-hole alternate-shot tournament was delayed three hours because of the 22-degree weather early in the morning.

Two teams with 71s, one shot off the pace, were Dave Ragan and Mickey Wright, the defending champions, and John Gustin and Carol Mann.

George Knudson of Toronto, playing with America's Shirley Spork, had 37-39—76.

ICE - TIME FOR KIDDIES

Being keenly interested in the youth of the city, it has always been my theory that if you can keep them as participants in the various sports, you will never have to worry too much about what they will grow up to be.

As a minor hockey executive of the 1960/61 season, we were vitally concerned with the way our registration was growing by leaps and bounds, my own particular group had 12 teams, and about 400 boys which works out to about 33 boys to a team. To cater to these boys we were allowed (2) two hours ice time, working this out still farther you will find this will amount to about three shifts of approximately three minutes per player, and this is what some of the boys look forward to so eagerly each week, even getting up about 5.30 a.m. on a Saturday morning for this meagre allotment.

To return to the '61-'62 executive, it was decided at a meeting after the close of the season that a committee be formed to explore a suggestion regarding the use of one or more of the barns at the Fairgrounds. I believe this committee received a very negative answer from the Parks Board. Having since left the executive I have never had access to the official answer, but I understand the reason was that they were afraid of a certain amount of damage would occur from the boys playing hockey.

I can understand partially their attitude in this matter having met many of their committee at various times, and I also cannot help but feel that they are being very selfish in their attitude, they too have certain obligations to the residents of this city, and I also feel that it is about time the city fathers stepped in and told them so.

This slow burn of mine was brought about this evening by what I read in a clipping in your paper. The sheep and swine have a nice building for two weeks a year, and some local auto dealer has a nice home for his new cars, but what about the kids? ? ?

If it is the money that the parks board is so interested in, I feel the city should submit its tender and give the kids a break.

While I am on the subject I would like to congratulate you on your column the other evening but what does it take to get some action from city hall on this matter? ? ?

As an employee of one of the largest local industries, if it would suit your purpose in any way, I am sure I could present you with a large petition to be used to light a fire under the city fathers, to start an action for more ice time for the children of Belleville.

It is also worth noting in passing that looking over the promises of the various candidates in the recent elections, only one and he was by far the eldest of the group, made mention of the Belleville Recreation Commission. I believe he mentioned that he was one of the originals when this group was formed and, in his opinion, progress has been, to say the least, very slow.

Belleville in my opinion is very fortunate in the number of volunteers who come forward year after year to work with these young people, and the majority do an excellent job, but naturally you have the exceptions, those who give their groups a black eye, and naturally so, no one gets screened, they receive no instruction, no guidance, they pick up the rules as they go along providing they are flexible enough, the ones who are too set in their ways usually undo the work of the others.

It would be interesting if one of these days the residents could see a breakdown of the mill rate set aside for recreation purposes, first to see how meagre it is after deductions of salaries, and secondly to see how book transactions take the money out of one pod and put it in another. In other words the Minor Sports Association, I find, has to buy its ice time from the arena (City) out of its budget, money that could be used to much better advantage, money that the city should provide. Why should the B.M.S.A. depend on charity? Why is the B.M.S.A. a member of the United Appeal?

And it's brings me around to the Belleville Recreation Centre. Put 50 kids in there and you have the place bulging at the seams.

Compared to cities of comparable size Belleville still belongs in the sticks.

Would it be worth the while to suggest to the city fathers that they investigate the possibilities of acquiring the old Y.M.C.A. building as a Recreation Centre, or is this already earmarked for the Front Street merchants, lots of space to park cars but no space to park KIDS? Regarding the present Recreation Centre I am sure the Welfare Centre could absorb the space and not feel too out of place, but then again this too concerns kids, consequently we should not get too enthusiastic.

I understand that nowadays it is possible to purchase artificial ice plants for approximately $20,000 each, a far cry from the $100,000 when some ten years ago I believe Alderman Grandame last broached the subject of more ice time for the kids.

I wonder if this article will be of sufficient interest to His Honor the Mayor and the citizens themselves, to warrant a statement as to why something is not being done about this state of affairs.

F. Jones.

BRAVES SIGN FIELDER

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Outfielder Lou Johnson signed a 1963 contract with Milwaukee Braves Thursday and became the fifth member of the club to come to terms. Earlier in the day pitcher Claude Raymond turned in his signed contract.

Trimble To Make Bid

Cats Eye Miami Stars

NEW YORK (CP) — If the price is right, Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Canadian Football League may land two highly rated members of the University of Miami football team which plays here Saturday in the Gotham Bowl.

Ben Rizzo, a 205-pound end, and Nick Ryder, a 205-pound fullback, say they intend to sign professional contracts with the highest bidders immediately after the bowl game.

Miami coach Andy Gustafson is high on both men.

"Rizzo worked out as a fullback in his freshman year without a scholarship," Gustafson said Thursday. "We changed him into an end and gave him a scholarship. That's how well we thought of him. He's more than justified our faith in him.

"Ryder has been a fine football player for us. He's better than Don Bosseler was when Don was a senior at Miami."

Bosseler, also a fullback, now is with Philadelphia Eagles in the National League.

DRAFT BOTH

Rizzo was drafted by Philadelphia and by Houston Oilers of the American League. Ryder was selected by the NFL Detroit Lions and AFL New York Titans.

"I have appointments with representatives from the Lions and Titans right after the game," said Ryder. "I've also received a telegram from coach Jim Trimble of Hamilton.

"I have an open mind at this moment. I'll sign with the club that makes me the best offer."

Rizzo, also being sought by Hamilton, echoed his teammate's comments.

"I'll play for whichever team offers the most money," he said.

SETS RECORD

MOSCOW (AP) — World weight-lifting champion Vladimir Kaplunov set a world lightweight mark of 135.5 kilograms (298.1 pounds) in the press Thursday at the U.S.S.R. championships. The 29-year-old Kaplunov's lift was 1.1 pounds better than the previous mark of Sergeo Lopati, set in Moscow last summer.

Knocks Out Two Attendants, Injures Another

Machen Makes Futile Breakout Attempt

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — Eddie Machen, mentally disturbed heavyweight fighter, knocked out two hospital attendants and injured a third in a wild and futile attempt to break out of Napa State Hospital.

But the powerful Negro slugger was finally overpowered and placed under sedation, from which he didn't revive until after mid-afternoon Thursday, Dr. Theo Miller said.

"He is in a very confused state of mind," the hospital superintendent reported. He said the slugged attendants all were okay.

Still groggy and confused, Machen was visited by his wife, Charlotte, who flew from their Portland home.

She confirmed that Machen, confined by court order to the hospital Wednesday after he was found preparing to kill himself with a pistol, had been disturbed over money matters and failure to get a fight.

Mrs. Machen was accompanied by the fighter's brother, Jesse, and her mother, Mrs. Edna Dotson of El Cerrito, Calif.

Although Machen was foggy, they stayed by his bedside for some time.

"My husband's feelings are all that I am concerned about," said Mrs. Machen. "I'm thinking only of him."

The Machens have three children, aged five years, 21 months and nine months.

The fact Machen hadn't fought since July is said to have caused him to worry about money.

"He was trying very hard to get a fight again, anyway," his wife explained. "Fighting was his profession and he wanted to work at it. He was worried about family finances."

She said the 198-pound fighter left Portland early this week to visit his brother at El Cerrito.

Dr. Miller said that until next Tuesday, when a report on Machen will be given in superior court, the fighter will be under continual observation by hospital doctors. Also, two doctors from Solano County will be sent over by Judge Phil Lynch to check his mental condition and help prepare a report on him.

The ring veteran, currently ranked by the World Boxing Association as No. 1 contender for Sonny Liston's championship, was detained at the hospital by court order after police found him preparing to shoot himself. He told officers he was broke, couldn't get fights and everything was "all wrong."

K-W Tigers Shut Out Bulldogs

KITCHENER (CP) — Goalie Harold (Boat) Hurley kicked out 38 shots Thursday night as Kitchener-Waterloo Tigers defeated Windsor Bulldogs 3-0 in an Ontario Hockey Association Senior A game in which the Windsor goalie charged off the bench to try to block the final shot.

Don Duke and Murray Schlegel, the latter playing his first game with the Tigers, gave Kitchener-Waterloo a 2-0 lead in the second period.

Late in the third, Bill Kennedy got a breakaway after Windsor goalie Wayne Rutledge had been pulled to send in an extra forward.

Rutledge burst from the bench and Kennedy in his hit the goal post with his shot but referee Loy Maschio of Guelph awarded the goal to Kennedy because Rutledge was on the ice illegally. He had become the seventh man on the ice.

Hurley withstood a heavy Windsor barrage in the second period when he turned aside 17 shots and he had to make 15 more in the third for the shutout.

Western Hockey

LOS ANGELES (AP) — San Francisco Seals scored three times in the second period to take a 3-1 victory over Los Angeles Blades Thursday night in a Western Hockey League game before 7,776 fans here.

The victory lifted the Seals to within two points of second-place Blades in the Southern Division standings.

Danny Belisle, Ed Panagabko and Ray Cyr fired goals for the winners and Bob Sollinger answered for Blades.

ATTEND BALL

LONDON (Reuters) — The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh joined members of their staff at the Christmas ball of the Royal Household Social Club at Buckingham Palace Thursday night. The royal couple joined the 700 guests in the white and gold state ballroom which is normally used for investitures.

Oh, to Be a Horse!

Paradise for Bangtails!

NEW YORK (AP)—Is your horse hurting? Is he fretting, pawing his little stall, off his oats?

Is he shivering these cold mornings, generally run down, kind of peaked looking, and running like he's got an anvil tied to each hoof?

Have you caught him reading travel folders lately?

Do you have a horse?

If you do, and his symptoms are showing, a neat brochure that tumbled out of Thursday's mail might have the answer.

Why not send your horse to Florida for the winter?

The people at Farnsworth Farms, Ocala, Fla., say they have just the place for tired horses.

They like a better deal than people get. There are doctors for old horses, teachers for young ones and recreation directors for them all. For girl horses, the brochure says there are plenty of single boy horses around, and a social director on duty.

Cartoons show happy horses running (they're wearing track suits), playing tennis in nifty sports togs, and meeting young lady horses (the boys are wearing tail coats, the girls wedding gowns).

It all looks pretty inviting, to a horse.

And there is no mention of surly waiters and bellhops with their hands out for tips.

Many Steinbeck Novels Made Into Top Movies

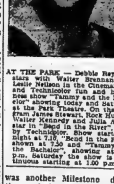
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The award of the Nobel Prize for literature to John Steinbeck in Stockholm this week brings to mind the impressive string of movies that have been made from his works.

The selection of Steinbeck for writing's highest honor astounded some critics, who claimed the rugged Californian was passe. This might surprise Steinbeck, who currently has the No. 1 best seller, Travels with Charlie.

The films based on Steinbeck's novels would appear to strengthen the contention that he is an era story teller. No other novelist has had so many distinguished motion pictures produced from his works.

How well books are dramatized on film is no criteria of literary merit, of course, and many writers suffer at the hands of insensitive producers. But the Steinbeck record would argue that his dramatic structure is sound and his themes have appeal to a mass audience.

MADE FILM CLASSIC



Grapes of Wrath in 1940 was a screen classic, a film that captured the heart and feeling of the novelist's greatest work. It was made in the person of John Ford's creative powers with a cast that was well nigh perfect. Particularly memorable are Henry Fonda, ideal as the troubled Tom Joad, and Charles Grapewin as Grandpa.

East of Eden, made in 1955, was no great and lasting novel but Elia Kazan managed to cut through some of the philosophical underbrush and fashion a gripping re-creation of the Cain-Abel theme. It was notable for the dynamic debut of the late James Dean.

Of Mice and Men, which Steinbeck also wrote as a play, fitted perfectly into the film medium. Lewis Milestone and Lon Chaney Jr. gave fine performances in the 1940 film under Lewis Milestone's direction.

Tortilla Flat, 1943, was one of Steinbeck's few comedies. Its success was all the more remarkable for casting Irish Spencer Tracy, Viennese Hedy Lamarr and Jewish John Garfield as the Monterey paisanos.

The Red Pony, a 1949 film,

AT THE PARK — Debbie Reynolds and Debbie Walker (Bonnie and Nellie) in the Cinemascope production of "Tammy and the Bachelor" showing today and Saturday at the Park Theatre. On the screen with James Stewart, Rock Hudson, Walter Brennan and Julia Adams in "Song of the River", color by Technicolor showing tonight at 8.45. "Song of the River" is shown at 7.30 and "Tammy and the Bachelor" showing at 5.40 p.m. Saturday the show is continuous starting at 1.00 p.m.

was another Milestone direction, a nicely done piece of sentiment with Robert Mitchum and Myrna Loy.

The Moon Is Down, in 1943, was Steinbeck's contribution to the war effort, a propaganda piece that is also wrote for the stage. An anti-Nazi sermon, it served its purpose well.

K-W Tigers Shut Out Bulldogs

KITCHENER (CP) — Goalie Harold (Boat) Hurley kicked out 38 shots Thursday night as Kitchener-Waterloo Tigers defeated Windsor Bulldogs 3-0 in an Ontario Hockey Association Senior A game in which the Windsor goalie charged off the bench to try to block the final shot.

Don Duke and Murray Schlegel, the latter playing his first game with the Tigers, gave Kitchener-Waterloo a 2-0 lead in the second period.

Late in the third, Bill Kennedy got a breakaway after Windsor goalie Wayne Rutledge had been pulled to send in an extra forward.

Rutledge burst from the bench and Kennedy in his hit the goal post with his shot but referee Loy Maschio of Guelph awarded the goal to Kennedy because Rutledge was on the ice illegally. He had become the seventh man on the ice.

Hurley withstood a heavy Windsor barrage in the second period when he turned aside 17 shots and he had to make 15 more in the third for the shutout.

Skowron Denies Quit Story

HILLSDALE, N.J. (AP) — Veteran first baseman Bill Skowron says there is nothing to a report that he is quitting baseball to become baseball coach at Purdue University, his alma mater.

"I'm definitely going to play with Los Angeles next season," Skowron said at his home here Thursday night. "In fact, I'm looking forward to playing with the Dodgers."

A report Wednesday said Skowron would retire for a 10-year contract with Purdue, possibly nullifying the deal last month that sent the 30-year-old power hitter from New York Yankees of the American League to the National League Dodgers in exchange for pitcher Stan Williams.

Dallas Signs All-American

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—Bobby Bell, Minnesota's all-America tackle, was signed a contract by Dallas Texans of the American Football League Thursday.

Bell was the No. 7 draft choice of the Texans and the second pick of Minnesota Vikings of the National League.

The amount of his contract was not disclosed by the Texans but it was learned it calls for about $15,000 a year.

Injury Stops Defence Star

Alf Treen Out of Hockey

KINGSTON (CP)—A rugged fellow named Alf Treen bobbles out of hospital today into a new world—a world without hockey or physical labor.

Treen, 31, a native of Cobalt, Ont., has no idea what the future holds for him, his wife or their five young daughters.

He'll never play hockey again and he won't be able to take a strenuous job, the only type of work he has done.

Treen, a robust defenceman with Kingston Frontenacs of the Eastern Professional Hockey League the last three years, was injured in a pre-season exhibition game against Quebec Aces of the American League.

A slipped disc in his back failed to respond to six weeks of treatment and an operation last week wasn't successful.

Treen received the bad news Thursday: Playing hockey is out of the question and he won't be able to do any lifting.

Treen spent his prime as a tough, 155-pound defenceman with the old Whitby Dunlops in Ontario senior ranks.

N.H.L. Stars

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bobby Perreault, 31-year-old rookie centerman for Boston Bruins, who held Canadiens to a 2-1 tie in Montreal, stopping 37 shots to Jacques Plante's 26.

Veteran centre Alex Delvecchio, who assisted on all three Detroit goals as the Red Wings edged the visiting New York Rangers 3-2.

ALS SIGN TACKLE

MONTREAL (CP)—Montreal Alouettes Thursday night announced the signing of George Canale, a University of Toronto see halfback they hope will remedy their punting problems next season. Canale, who stands five-foot-nine and weighs 185 pounds, ranked fourth in the United States last season with a 41.9-yard average on 53 punts. Coaches in his Southeastern Conference voted Canale the best pass defender and punt return man in the league.

Jury Asks Restriction Of Drugs

MONTREAL (CP)—A coroner's jury has recommended that the sale and distribution of "fatigue disguising" stimulants be restricted and that athletes discontinue using them in sports.

The jury returned a verdict of natural death at a coroner's inquest in the case of Robert McArdle, a lineman for the Trois-Rivieres Braves football team who died early this year.

Dr. Rosario Fontaine, a medico-legal expert testifying at the inquest, said McArdle probably had taken benzedrine tablets during a game Aug. 25 between the Braves and the rival West team, both in the Quebec Rugby Football Union.

McArdle died in hospital the next day from a combination of shock and heat prostration, accelerated by the use of stimulants, said Dr. Fontaine.

Big Seven

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Alex Delvecchio assisted on all three Detroit goals against New York Thursday night in recapture the National Hockey League leadership in assists with a total of 20.

The three-point gain boosted the veteran centre from a five-way deadlock for sixth place in the scoring race into a tie for fourth with Jean Beliveau of Chicago. Both have 26 points.

Chicago's Stan Mikita, idle Thursday, also picked up one assist, is only one point off the pace.

Behind Delvecchio and McDonald are Detroit's Gordie Howe and New York's Dean Prentice, tied for fifth with 25 points.

The leaders:

	G	A	Pts.
Mikita, Chicago	10	18	28
Balfour, New York	13	14	27
McDonald, Chicago	12	14	26
Delvecchio, Detroit	6	20	26
Howe, Detroit	15	10	25
Prentice, New York	9	16	25
Bucyk, Boston	10	14	24

CONCLUDE TRADE

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Infielder-outfielder Manny Mota was sent to Houston Colts by San Francisco Thursday to conclude formally the trade that brought infielder Joe Amalfitano back to the Giants.

Pitcher Dick LeMay was transferred to the Colts at the time the deal for Amalfitano was announced originally during the National League meetings.

Mota, 25, from the Dominican Republic, divided the 1962 season between the Giants and El Paso of the Texas League. For the Giants, he appeared in 46 games and hit .179 in 74 times at bat. For El Paso, he hit .349 in 30 games.
